One Dead, Many Injured in Auto Accidents

MRS. VINNIE JARVIS INSTANTLY KILLED; CHILD NEAR DEATH

Aged Woman Is Struck Down on West Peachtree by Machine Driven by Mrs. Tarleton Collier.

HOOKS TOT STRUCK BY FLYING WHEEL

Boy Thought Fatally Hurt; Ten Others Injured Is Toll Exacted in Saturday Mishaps.

One aged woman dead, a two-year-old boy probably fatally injured, and half a score of other minor injuries was the toll of automobile accidents Saturda

Mrs. Vinnie C. Jarvis, 60, of 25 Porter place, was almost instantly killed early Saturday night, when, according to witnesses, she became confused in traffic while crossing the street and was struck down at West Peachtree and Porter place by an automobile driven by Mrs. Tarleton Collier, of 199 Eleventh street, N. E.

An automobile wheel, flying off the hub of a passing machine hurtled onto the sidewalk, where he was playing in front of his home late Saturday, and probably fatally injured Ralph Hooks, two years old, of 234 Mayson avenue.

Mrs. Collier Out On Bond.

Charges reckless driving were docketed by police against Mrs. Collier, and she was released under $1,000 bond with hearing set for August 10.

Police could find only two witnesses to the accident, K. Malcolm, of 450 West Peachtree, and D. H. Reeves, of 4 Porter place.

Witnesses told police that Mrs. Collier was driving north on West Peachtree street. Mrs. Jarvis was crossing the street, they said, and became confused, dodging in front of the oncoming Collier machine. An ambulance from Barclay and Brandon's raced to the scene of the accident, but Mrs. Jaris was dead before the ambulance arrived.

Mrs. Collier was almost prostrated by the accident, and was so unnerved that police had to bring her to headquarters.

Mrs. Collier is the wife of Tarleton Collier, member of the editorial staff of The Atlanta Georgian.

Lieutenant L. J. Carroll and Motorcycle Officer J. A. Bailey investigated.

Child's Skull Fractured.

A fractured skull would probably cause early death of the Hooks child, physicians said.

The only witness to the accident, J. E. Thompson, of 1416 LaFrance street, said that the boy was playing on the sidewalk when an automobile driven by W. T. Ewing, of 1360 Finley street, passing by, threw a wheel which careened at terrific pace onto the sidewalk and struck the child.

The Hooks boy was rushed to Grady hospital.

Thompson said that the accident apparently was unavoidable, but a charge of speeding was booked against Ewing by police.

Mrs. Leona Britten, of 936 Crew street, was knocked down and severely bruised early Saturday morning, when she stepped from the curb, at the intersection of Crew and Pulliam streets, in front of an automobile driven by I. Alterman, of 683 Pryor street. The driver of the machine took Mrs. Britten to her home, where she was treated by a private physician. No case was made against Alterman.

B. W. Cochran, of 314 Boulevard, S. E., was treated at Grady hospital Saturday afternoon following a crash between his automobile and a truck driven by Rubin Mitchell, at the intersection of Hunter and Butler streets. Cochran suffered bruises and lacerations about the head, and after treatment was allowed to go home. A case of reckless driving was made against Mitchell.

Miss Rosie Strupe, of a Hightower road address, received severe lacerations and bruises about the head Saturday afternoon when she was knocked down by an automobile driven by Ben Butts, negro, who gave his address as Atlanta, route 1. A case of reckless driving was made against the negro. Miss Strupe, who was taken to Grady hospital, was released after her injuries were treated.

Youth's Arm Lacerated.

Arthur Sumlin, 10, suffered a deep laceration on the right arm when the car in which he was riding, driven by Mrs. A. B. Medlock, Jr., of a Briarcliff road address, crashed into a machine driven by Richard A. Shope, of 1224 North avenue, Saturday after-

Coolidge Warrant For Self-Exiled Blackmer Issued

VARE IS CLINGING TO SPARK OF LIFE

Senator-elect Rallies From Relapse; Doctor Says He May Live for Two or Three Days.

Atlantic City, N. J., August 4.—(AP)—The condition of Senator-elect William S. Vare, of Pennsylvania, seriously ill here, was reported as showing slight improvement tonight over what it had been this afternoon when physicians said the patient was "practically in a state of stupor."

A bulletin issued at 9:40 p. m. by Dr. Elwood J. Kirby, Philadelphia, Mr. Vare's personal physician, said:

"There is not much change in the senator's condition. His temperature is down a trifle. He is resting quietly. He has not lost any ground—neither has he gained any. His temperature is down from 103 to 101."

Later in an interview Dr. Kirby said: "The mere fact that Mr. Vare has not lost any ground and his temperature is down is very favorable. He is expected to live through the night and may hold out two or three days. His reflexes are back again and he is also talking pretty rationally now."

Dr. Kirby returned to Philadelphia, leaving the senator in the care of Dr. John J. Shaw, Philadelphia, resident physician at the Vare cottage. Dr. Kirby will return at noon tomorrow.

Shoppers See Widower Kill Girl and Self

Busy San Antonio Street Corner Scene of Murder and Suicide.

San Antonio, August 4.—(AP)—While scores of Saturday shoppers thronged about them, W. A. McArthur, 54, a salesman, shot and killed Mrs. Ida Wilson, 28, a divorcee, and committed suicide on San Antonio's busiest street corner this afternoon. Mrs. Wilson died instantly, one bullet having pierced her heart and another her lungs. McArthur slumped to the pavement dead, two bullets in his brain.

Miss Pearl Warren, a sister of the dead woman, said she and Mrs. Wilson were discussing a dress in the display window of a store when McArthur approached. He had been very friendly with Mrs. Wilson for several months, but had quarreled with her recently, Miss Warren said.

A brief argument ensued during which McArthur drew a revolver and fired two shots. As Mrs. Wilson fell, he lurched to the curb 10 feet away and fired two bullets into his brain.

McArthur was a widower.

U. S. Applies Legal Force for Return of Oil Baron Wanted for Trial on Charges of Perjury.

Denver, August 4.—(AP)—Legal force was applied today by the United States government to bring back to this country Henry M. Blackmer, capitalist, oil magnate and missing key witness in the famed Teapot Dome oil case, from his refuge of self-imposed exile in France.

A presidential warrant was issued empowering United States Attorney George Stephan to send an officer to Europe to arrest Blackmer and return him to Denver, where indictments are pending charging the oil man with perjury in connection with his alleged failure to make proper income tax returns. United States Marshal Richard C. Callen was designated to return Blackmer as a fugitive from justice.

The warrant, addressed to the district attorney, was signed by President Coolidge, and Secretary of State Frank B. Kellogg. Marshal Callen will await advice from Washington before proceeding on his mission.

"You are hereby authorized and empowered," declared the warrant, "to take and hold him (Blackmer) in

$1,000,000 WILL FORGERY CHARGED

Noted Denver Chemist Accused of Obtaining Wife's Vast Estate by Fraudulent Signature.

Denver, Colo., August 4.—(AP)—Dr. W. G. Fordham, prominent physician and chemist, and J. H. Boutcher, Denver lawyer, are among four persons charged today by the prosecutor's office with forgery and uttering forgery in connection with a will under which Fordham is made beneficiary of his divorced wife's estate, said to approximate $1,000,000.

Fordham was arrested today in Hot Springs, Ark., on advice of Denver authorities. He denied being implicated. Boutcher was expected to surrender tonight, according to word he sent district attorney's deputies.

Witnesses Sought.

Mrs. Melissa Hogue and John H. French, witnesses to the will, and the other codefendants are being sought by police throughout the state tonight.

Dr. Fordham is charged with having written the will shortly after the death of Mrs. Fordham in Hot Springs, Ark., on July 7, 1927, and specified that he should be sole heir of the estate. The will was probated in Hot Spring, Ark., where most of the property involved is located. Pressing their investigation on the strength

STATE-WIDE GROUP WILL WAGE ACTIVE DEMOCRATIC DRIVE

Young Men's League of Georgia To Perfect Organization at Meeting Here Wednesday Night.

Organization of the Young Men's Democratic League of Georgia, which will be statewide in scope and which will wage an aggressive campaign in behalf of Governor Alfred E. Smith and Senator Joseph T. Robinson, democratic national nominees, will be perfected at a meeting to be held at the Ansley hotel roof garden in Atlanta at 7 o'clock Wednesday evening, it was announced Saturday. Preliminary plans were worked out at a meeting of the organization committee held last week.

Among the prominent Georgia democrats who will deliver addresses at the meeting are United States Senator Walter F. George, Clark Howell, Sr., former Governor Hoke Smith, Governor L. G. Hardman, State Senator E. D. Rivers, A. S. Chamlee, United States Senator William J. Harris, Major John S. Cohen, G. Ed Maddox, of Rome, John R. Slater, of Douglas, and former Governor Thomas W. Hardwick, Atlanta.

The rally will be held with a two-fold purpose in view, it was announced by the organization committee. First, to form a statewide body composed of young democrats who will conduct an aggressive campaign in behalf of the Governor Smith and Senator Robinson. Second, to make the league a permanent organization which shall function continuously for the up-building and strengthening of the democratic party in Georgia by drawing young men into actual participation in political affairs.

Young democrats from every congressional district will attend the rally. A general invitation is extended

LANDLORD SLAYS WOMAN AND SELF

E. D. Gaddis, Prominent Farmer of Canton, Kills Wife of Tenant and Then Commits Suicide.

Canton, Ga., August 4.—(AP)—A Mrs. Miller was slain at her humble farm home near here while her husband was absent, by her landlord, E. D. Gaddis, well known Cherokee county farmer, who then returned to his home and killed himself yesterday, it became known here today.

A 14-year-old son of Mrs. Miller who witnessed the slaying of his mother said Gaddis came to their home and finding Mrs. Miller in the yard without a word levelled a single barreled shotgun at her and fired, the full charge of shot taking effect in her breast.

Gaddis then returned to his own home, where his wife said he declared he was going to kill himself. Mrs. Gaddis said she tried to take the gun from her husband but he jerked away and fled the house. He then took refuge in a nearby ditch and by means of a string attached to the trigger, fired a full charge of shot into his heart.

Sheriff Pears, of Cherokee county, said a thorough investigation did not reveal a motive for the tragedy.

Insurance Audit Reveals Company Short $3,500,000

MANLEY IS DENIED INSURANCE POLICY

Suit of Pacific Mutual Charging Misrepresentation of Physical Condition Upheld in U.S. Court

Holding that W. D. Manley, former president of the defunct Bankers' Trust company, misrepresented his condition in applying for insurance, Federal Judge Samuel H. Sibley on Saturday handed down an opinion in favor of the Pacific Mutual Life Insurance company.

The insurance policy taken out by Manley should be cancelled, Judge Sibley decided. The company brought suit against Manley and his wife, seeking the invalidation of a $25,000 policy. Judge Sibley held that the questions in the case concerning Manley's state of mind and health had been untruly answered.

Manley had denied having any bodily or mental infirmity or that he was maimed or in unsound condition mentally or physically, or that he had complaints, symptoms, or disease, or headache or neuralgia, and said that he had consulted or been treated by a physician only for influenza and that was a light case, Judge Sibley pointed out. Denial of consulting and being treated by Drs. Bucknell, Jelliffe and Giddins and confinement at a Washington hospital and St. Joseph's infirmary and at home, and recurrent severe headaches, were material misrepresentations, Judge Sibley held.

The company was entitled to the facts that it might pass its own judgment on the risk, and falsity in the answers was fatal as full disclosures were requisite., Judge Sibley said. "The mania in 1914 may have been concealed purposely or Manley may have been ignorant or unappreciative of the nature and extent of the trouble, but he should have disclosed the occurrence and named the physicians consulted." The fact that the cause was not ascertained made the disclosure more important, Judge Sibley said.

The Pacific Mutual was represented by Bryan & Middlebrooks and W. Colquitt Carter. Colquitt & Conyers represented Manley.

Marietta Man Regains Voice In Air Flight

Takes Ride in Plane and Speaks After Jaunt in Air.

Marietta, Ga., August 4.—(Special.) William Atkins, 35-year-old garage man, who lost his voice as the result of stunt flying over Candler field during the recent air derby, has found it again.

He found it exactly where he had misplaced it—some few thousand feet above the grassy stretch of the Atlanta aviation field.

After it had been discovered last week that "Bill" had lost his vocal powers some physicians theorized that it might be possible for him to regain it in the same manner in which he had lost it.

So Saturday afternoon Beeler Blevins, popular Atlanta aviator, took "Bill" for a ride.

They soared high above Candler field and Atlanta. Blevins banked sharply, side-slipped and went through almost identical maneuvers carried out during the recent derby. They remained aloft, "Bill" and Blevins, for more than half an hour; then made a perfect landing.

When "Bill" crawled out of the passenger's seat he tried to talk. Not so good. All he could utter was silence and plenty of that.

It looked like a flop. The party started back toward Atlanta in an automobile. En route one of the voiceless man's companions said:

"Let's get something to drink. Want something to drink, Bill?"

Bill's mouth made a few dry contortions. Then the crowd was staggered.

Plain as day, Bill said:

"Yes—I sure do!"

And doctors are of the opinion that Bill will keep his voice, whether its recovery be due to the flight or the particular question.

Securities Alleged To Be in Possession of President Are Missing, Examiners Report.

St. Louis, August 4.—(AP)—The International Life Insurance company, with headquarters here, is "apparently short approximately $3,500,000 in securities," says a statement issued tonight by Charles R. Detrick, insurance commissioner of California, chairman of a committee of investigating officials.

"When six of the examiners were in Chicago July 23 and 24 to check about $3,500,000 of securities alleged to be in possession of R. C. Toombs, president of the International Life Insurance company, the examiners were denied sight of the securities by Mr. Toombs or access to books of Mr. Toombs," the statement reads.

Conference Friday.

"The committee will reassemble August 10 to cinsider all offers for rehabilitation, reinsurance, etc., and believes that the assets will prove ample to protect all policyholders, if responsible parties either rehabilitate or reinsure the International Life Insurance company."

Toombs, an investment banker, pur-

CITY HALL AWARD COMES UP MONDAY

Acceptance of National Construction Co. Bid at $840,700 To Be Recommended to Council.

Award of the contract for erection of the superstructure of Atlanta's new 15-story city hall will be one of the principal matters which city council will consider Monday at its regular semi-monthly meeting.

Councilman Howard C. McCutcheon, of the second ward, and chairman of the special city hall committee of city council, will offer the recommendation of his committee and the bond commission calling for award of the contract to the National Construction company at a total contract price of $840,700.

Only $757,000 is available from bond funds for the work, but the committee head will offer a special financing plan in conjunction with installation of the elevators, which will cost $97,500, to bring the contract figure within the amount available.

W. D. Hoffman, of the Otis Elevator company, has announced that his company will accept payments distributed over a period of four years, and it is expected that council will take steps to avail itself of the tender.

A recommendation from the bridge committee, headed by Alderman W. Guy Dobbs, of the seventh ward, as chairman, may be offered as to the width of sidewalks on Hunter street,

SMITH DRY STAND NOT 'REPUDIATION,' LEADER ASSERTS

Dry Planks Framed To Permit Amplification, Democratic National Committee Declares.

BY THOMAS L. STOKES.

New York, August 4.—(United News.)—Democratic national headquarters made public here tonight secret proceedings of the democratic platform committee at Houston designed to show that Governor Alfred E. Smith's modification stand is not a "repudiation" of the prohibition plank as interpreted by its drafters and understood by the convention.

A stenographic report of parts of the prohibition plank debate in executive session is set forth in a letter written by Senator Key Pittman, of Nevada, who was chairman of the platform committee, to Dr. Albert Shaw, editor of Review of Reviews.

Editorial Called Error.

An editorial in Shaw's magazine declared that Smith's message to the Houston convention reiterating his advocacy of modification was "a bold and sweeping repudiation of the platform." This Pittman declares an "error."

Publication of the secret session record is regarded as forerunner of a campaign along this line to mollify drys and keep them in line.

Pittman takes exception to the editorial's statement that Senator Carter Glass, of Virginia, author of the plank as finally adopted, and other drys who were opposed to Smith, declared the platform to be "a clear and unambiguous indorsement of the 18th amendment and the Volstead act."

Moody's Plank Beaten.

"No such declaration was made by Senator Glass, or by Mr. Daniels (Josephus Daniels, of North Carolina), or by anyone else who was a member of the platform committee," Pittman

PLANE SIGHTED TWICE BY SHIPS NORTH OF AZORES

One Vessel Radios Two Aviators Heading Back for Europe; Doubt Is Expressed by Experts.

MITCHELL FIELD IS KEPT LIGHTED

Officials, However, Fear Intrepid Fliers Among Others Listed as "Lost at Sea" on Journey.

BY CHARLES M'CANN.

New York, August 4.—(United News.)—Two days out on their flight from Paris to New York, which they hoped to complete at dusk today, Majors Leon Idzikowski and Casimir Kubala, of the Polish air force, were unreported late tonight since midnight. At that time a plane assumed to be theirs flew northward over the horizon after circling the British steamship Amakura.

Conflicting Reports.

Uncertainty regarding the fliers' progress was intensified because the position at which the Amakura reported them was 240 miles northeast—directly toward Great Britain—from that at which the steamship Artec had reported sighting an airplane two hours and 20 minutes earlier—at 9:40 p. m. eastern standard time yesterday.

Both these positions were in mid-ocean north of the Azores.

It was hoped that the positions given by one of the steamers might have been garbled in transmission and that it was not true that the Polish airplane—Marszalck Pilsudzki or Marshal Pilsudzki, named for the dictator of Poland—had headed back from its course toward Europe.

Errors Denied.

Radio stations that received both messages confirmed to the United News, however, that there had been no error in the bearings as transmitted by them.

The first message reporting the progress of the Polish plane—both messages were taken as referring to it, as no other trans-Atlantic plane was in the air—was from the steamship Artec and was relayed by the steamship Port Hunted. It said:

"Biplane passed this morning latitude 44 degrees 22 minutes north, longitude 24.08 west. Direction 75 degrees (southeast by south) from us. Sighted 9:40 p. m. eastern standard time. Disappeared over water. All seemed well."

The second and last message was from the British steamer Amakura:

"Midnight, eastern standard time 46.20 north, 20.40 west, air-

'I Slew,' Toral Speaks, 'With Prayer on Lips'

:: OBREGON'S KILLER TALKS TO CALLES ::

Mexico City, August 4.—(AP)—Jose El Leon Toral is quoted by El Universal Grafico as expressing remorse over having assassinated President-elect Alvaro Obregon. The interviewer, however, found that the slayer remains indifferent to the possibility of dying before a firing squad to pay for his crime.

Toral was asked:

"Now that you have learned Obregon intended settling the religious question and was a good man, are you sorry you killed him?"

With his eyes fixed on a corner of his cell, Toral replied slowly and thoughtfully: "Yes, I am remorseful for not having thought with necessary amplitude about the matter and also for not having learned before these facts about the general."

Previously in the interview Toral had repeated in effect what he had said before—that solely "religious passion" caused him to decide to kill Obregon because he considered him responsible for "religious persecution."

Toral said he whispered an Ave Maria, commended his soul to God and with a prayer upon his lips pulled the trigger of the pistol. He was confident his act would further the "reign of Christ, the King, in Mexico."

Obregon's winning smile caused him to hesitate, Toral revealed. As he showed Obregon the cartoon he had drawn and was reaching for his pistol, Obregon looked up at him and smiled fleetingly. It was the kindly, friendly smile for which the president-elect was famous. Toral found the smile

COOLIDGE QUITS FISHING TO SHOOT AT CLAY PIGEONS

Superior, Wis., August 4.—(AP)—Leaving the Brule river trout alone for a short while, President Coolidge tried out today for the first time his skill at shooting clay pigeons thrown from the Cedar Island Lodge traps.

Striving for versatility in outdoor occupations, Mr. Coolidge matched the success he has been having lately in his angling with a high percentage of hits in his new sport. Reports from the summer white house said that the chief executive had made seven hits out of his first nine shots.

Nobile Reveals Letter Clearing Self of Stigma

:: RESCUER SAYS LEADER IS HERO ::

Rome, Aug. 4.—(AP)—General Umberto Nobile published a letter today which he received from his Swedish rescuer, Captain Lundbergh, declaring that reflections cast by certain foreign newspapers on General Nobile's courage were without foundation.

The letter stated that when Captain Lundbergh had landed on the ice for the first time he had intended to rescue all of the Nobile group one by one. He described how General Nobile had asked him to take Natale Ceccioni first. Captain Lundbergh had answered that his instructions were to rescue the commander in chief before any of the others.

General Nobile again insisted, writes Captain Lundbergh, that Ceccioni be taken care of first, thereupon the Swedish flier remonstrated that this would be impossible without leaving behind him his flying companion, Captain Shyberg.

Captain Lundbergh's letter states that only after this declaration and the repeated entreaties of the other survivors did General Nobile consent to come away first.

In the course of a busy day today, General Nobile visited Augusto Turad, the secretary-general of the fascist party. His injured leg appeared to be troubling him and companions helped him to alight from the automobile. He was greeted cordially by the director of the fascist party who gave him a large bunch of flowers. He conversed with Secretary Traud for one hour.

Lieutenant Viglieri, navigator of the Italia, arrived today by air. He was received by Admiral Sirianni, under-

OOM'S LOVE CULT AGAIN IN COURT

(By Leased Wire to The Constitution and The Chicago Tribune.)

White Plains, N. Y., August 4.—Once more two favorite disciples of the omniponent Oom and great loving Guru, Pierre A. Bernard, whose magic wand ruled so mysteriously over his society-brand tantrik love cult at Nyack, dragged the ghost of an Oom-made romance through the courts.

Winfield Nicholls, known in the cult as Harjes, first aide of the Oom himself, filed affidavit in supreme court that his wife, Mrs. Barbara Rutherford Hatch-Nicholls, second daughter of Mrs. W. K. Vanderbilt, has been served in his annullment action.

In his suit, Nicholls, who became the inseparable companion of Bernard, who left a St. Louis barber shop job to hold mystic sway over a section of New York society, says the daughter of Mrs. W. K. proposed to him. Not only that, but Nicholls, described by friends as an artist, declares that the 33-year-old mother of his twins, a boy and a girl, is a lunatic.

His description of the proposal made to him by brunette Barbara, does not spare the ritzy risibilities of the Vanderbilts.

"For the purpose of inducing the plaintiff (Nicholls) to consent to the marriage, the defendant (Mrs. Vanderbilt's daughter), falsely and fraudulently represented to plaintiff that she was then, and at all times theretofore had been in all respects normal. The defendant concealed from the plaintiff her true physical condition."

Nicholls, who was married to the divorced wife of Cyril Hatch, wealthy society man, in 1924, served his wife through the mail, in accordance with permission granted him by Supreme Court Justice Aaron J. Levy. The summons was mailed to the only address known for Barbara Nicholls, in Scarsdale, and also to Mrs. Vanderbilt's New York city town house in fashionable Sutton Place.

According to the Oom lieutenant, the Vanderbilt daughter, who proposed to him, has been confined to a French sanitarium because of lunacy. This, the Vanderbilts, as well as her friends, always have denied.

The romance of Nicholls and the young woman from the highest rungs of society's ladder blossomed while she and her sister, now the wife of Sir Paul Dukes, were under the spell of Bernard, in the strange Nyack love cult.

Crane That Caused Death of Ten in Canal Crash

Later picture from the scene of the accident in the new Welland canal, near Thorold, Ont., in which ten workmen were killed and ten others seriously injured, shows a closeup of the wrecked crane which was the cause of the accident. A boom of the crane slipped as a 500-ton lock gate was being lifted into position and the gate crashed, crushing the men.

:: SORES OF 1914 ALMOST HEALED ::

Are Diminishing in Europe

London, August 4.—(AP)—While Louvain, Belgium, stands divided into two camps of "lest we forget" and "lest we remember," Europe, today 14 years after the opening of the world war, is slowly forgetting the agonies of 1914-1918.

Fourteen years ago today German troops entered Belgium, for the sanctity of which England stood guarantor. At midnight in reply, Great Britain entered the war. A state of war already existed between Germany and Russia at that time and Germany had declared war on France the night before.

The incident of Louvain's controversy over the balcony of her new library, whether or not it should contain a stone motto which would serve to perpetuate Belgium's hate of the invading Germans, has served to reveal this fact with new strength.

Few Criticize.

Edmond Felix Morren, the foreman who slashed the pillars of the balcony of the Louvain library, lest they should stand without the Latin motto which Whitney Warren, the American architect, had placed there, lives in danger of a five-year sentence. In the press he has found few critics and many defenders. Part of his defense will be that his father and mother were deported and he himself wounded and maltreated by the Germans when he was a boy of 16.

Hatred Diminishing.

In the remainder of Europe, however, the intense hatred of the western powers against the central powers, which they regard as having caused the war, has appreciably diminished. The governments of France, England and Italy, though resolved not to forget the great deeds of their own soldiers, are equally resolved to honor the achievements of their former enemies. Even the phrase "lest we forget" has come to be applied to the disabled soldiers and not to the late enemy.

The Olympic games see the first athletic massing of the Germans in strength since the war, competing formidably with the athletes of other nations.

Teutonic athletes have for several years been welding the bonds of sport's international amity, appearing in tennis matches at Wimbledon, England, and St. Cloud, France, and British and French tennis players have at Dusseldorf returned the visit.

German aviators attended the British air display at Hendon recently, and German aces were dined by British aces whom they had actually encountered and fought in mid-air.

Amusing have been some of the incidents which reveal this growing sense of international friendship. Such a one was the antique French automobile, of pre-war (Spanish-American) vintage, which made its laborious journey to Berlin 30 years after its birth—in reality a harbinger of good-will.

Fear Must Be Waning.

The responses to the Kellogg peace proposals are instances of much greater dignity. Fear and hatred of other nations must be waning before a nation will forswear its right to warfare.

German municipal officials were heartily welcomed in England when they came here to study traffic regulation methods and municipal activities, after a continental tour. Scores of German university students have been brought to England to observe conditions here.

Many British people have subscribed to the Austrian loan of £9,000,000, Hungary's complaints against the inclusion of a portion of her people in the confines of Rumania have received enthusiastic support in England, Lord Rothermere being the leader of the group.

Instances might be heaped upon the shoulders of other instances to show that while war-torn furrows on the face of Europe are smoothing out, the hatred in her heart is softening too.

ARMY OF BRITONS IN FRANCE AGAIN.

London, August 4.—(AP)—A great pilgrimage was in progress tonight with the migration of 11,000 British men and women to battlefields of northern France, where the British legions fought in the world war. The pilgrimage was begun on the fourteenth anniversary of Britain's entry into the colossal struggle.

The veterans will march along the familiar roads of war days and through fields of blood red popplies, singing the same old songs as of yore. On this occasion they will not see blackened ruins of war-torn villages. Instead of the angry thunder of gunfire along a shell-swept front, the legionnaires will be greeted only with salvos of friendly salutes. Instead of unspeakable hardships of muddy trenches along battle lines in the valleys of death, the only discomfort they have in prospect is a stormy channel crossing, because a boisterous northerly wind had lashed up heavy seas in that narrow waterway. A dozen steamers were waiting to convey them across the channel.

Wales to Join Pilgrims.

The Prince of Wales, who served in France with the Royal Guards, will join the pilgrims. Lady Haig, widow of the commander who led the British army to victory, and many other distinguished war figures will accompany them to the other side of the channel were they will remain four days.

The culminating feature of the visit will be a ceremony at Ypres the 11,000 will reassemble from various points at this historic town where the famous salient was held at such heavy cost to save a precious portion of Belgium and will gather at the Menin Gate Memorial erected to those who fell there.

In spite of their thousands the legionnaires will be outnumbered five to one by the dead whom they are honoring.

The unknown fallen in the salient alone total some 55,000. At the gate there will be an impressive scene as banners and shell-torn flags of 87 British divisions will be displayed over the archway and along ramparts. A march will be made past the route in which the Prince of Wales and Lady Haig will participate. A religious service, with an address by the archbishop of York, now archbishop designate of Canterbury, will follow.

LIVER CIRRHOSIS DEATHS INCREASE

(By Leased Wire to The Constitution and The Chicago Tribune.)

Washington, August 4.—Government statisticians find that the Volstead act apparently is accelerating, rather than decreasing the death rate from alcoholism and cirrhosis of the liver.

Deaths from alcohol virtually have reached the highest levels of pre-prohibition days, and are increasing at the rate of 500 annually. A steady increase in deaths from cirrhosis of the liver attributable to alcohol, has been noted since 1920.

The department of commerce experts have discovered that alcoholism claimed virtually the same number of victims in 1926 as in 1916. Their figures compiled from the 40 odd states in the registration bureau and excluding Hawaii, disclosed that deaths from alcoholism reached their lowest ebb in 1920 when the reported rate was 900 per 100,000. In 1921 the rate jumped to 1,611, in 1922 to 2,467, in 1923 to 3,148, in 1924 to 3,155, in 1925 to 3,694 and in 1926 the rate was 4,109. The highest rate prior to 1926 was in 1916 when it was 4,161 per 100,000.

Deaths from cirrhosis of the liver jumped from 6,241 per 100,000 in 1920, to 7,591 in 1926, the last year for which figures are available. The death rate for this disease was 8,799 per 100,000 in 1916, the pre-prohibition peak. The rate for other years was 7,794 in 1918, 6,241 in 1920; 6,598 in 1921; 6,977 in 1922; 7,027 in 1923; 7,344 in 1924; 7,549 in 1925, and 7,591 in 1926.

Prohibition Commissioner James M. Doran explained today that the new fingerprint system inaugurated last week will be applied only to violators convicted of felonies. Ordinary violators will not be fingerprinted.

FEW MEXICANS ASK PRESIDENCY

BY A STAFF CORRESPONDENT.
(Special Dispatch to The Constitution and North American Newspaper Alliance.)
(Copyright, 1928, by North American Newspaper Alliance.)

Mexico City, August 2.—There are no living former presidents in Mexico and no man now admits a presidential aspiration.

Aaron Saenz, the present governor of Nuevo Leon, who has been steadily named as probable Obregonista candidate in the special elections which must occur, was being questioned by newspapermen yesterday regarding his possible acceptance. Just then two of his little children ran through the room.

"How many have you?" the newspapermen asked.

"Six," replied Saenz, and then with significant pause added, "That's one reason I'm taking a long time to make up my mind on the presidential candidacy."

Saenz was once Calles' foreign minister, but quit to manage Obregon's campaign. He said that the Obregonistas, the right wing of which he and Ricardo Topete are leaders, would support Calles through the remainder of Calles' term. He intimated that Calles was extremely tired of the presidency and is unwilling to serve again.

Saenz also said that the first big job of the new president would be to unify the social and revolutionary elements, including the labor and Obregonista groups, and that the new election would come soon after the end of the year, thus necessitating a provisional president in any case.

WILL OF PEACOCK PROVES ECCENTRIC

New York, August 4.—Alexander Peacock, who rose from a New York ribbon counter clerkship to a vice presidency in the Carnegie Steel company, from the grave made a gesture as eccentric as any of those of his lifetime.

Peacock's purchase of a $60,000 chicken ranch because his butler brought him a cold storage egg, his participation in a $500,000 card game on an ocean liner; his chartering of a special train for a trip across the continent when he could not get the reservations he desired—all these stories were told many times while he lived.

Eleven days after his death, the newspapers learned of the strangest thing, perhaps that Peacock ever did. He provided in his will for the payment of $10,000 to his secretary and $2,500 to his valet, bequeathed his sons $100 each and left his wife $5. The only member of the family who benefited materially from his estate, which once was estimated at more than $15,000,000, was a daughter.

The terms of the will became public when it was filed for probate by the executors. Apparently Peacock foresaw the sensation it would cause, for he stipulated that any beneficiary who contested it should automatically be cut off from any legacy it bestowed on him.

Clarence Neilson and Roland Bedell Peacock are the sons who receive $100 each. Two daughters, Irene Margaret Peacock and Mrs. J. Laroque Anderson, and a grandson, Alexander R. Peacock, II, received a like amount.

His valet, Aric Wambuchi, gets $2,500, and Aiken, the secretary, gets 150 shares of the Gulf Oil corporation, or $10,000 if the stock does not realize that amount.

In stipulating that his wife, Irene May Peacock, should receive $5, Peacock said:

"It is intended by me to be in full and in lieu and bar of her dower and all and every right of interest in and to my estate. I make only this provision for reasons well known to her, including the fact that I have amply and liberally provided for her during my life time."

BIG DRESSMAKER TO QUIT BUSINESS

Paris, August 4.—(United News.) Paul Poiret, the world's best known dressmaker, is about to retire in disgust and the chic dressers of Paris do not know whether to laugh or weep.

For the great Poiret has convinced himself that women are now spending more time and thought on their heads than on their bodies, and the great Poiret is not one to compete with a lot of barbers.

He has announced his intention of abandoning his dwindling clientele and spending the remainder of his days in quiet contemplation of the foolishness of females in an old-fashioned provincial chateau.

"My work is over," Poiret is quoted by a recent interviewer. "I am no longer necessary. Paris has become a holiday resort, filled with foreigners of every nationality, and the woman of today does not pay the same attention to clothes that she used to."

Pressed for reasons, the great Poiret is said to have snorted into his graying but carefully tended whiskers. It appeared that the modern gal, young, middling, and old, is now much more worried about the shaving of the back of her neck than the hang of her gown. A proper "permanent" has come to mean more than a perfect Poiret.

been passed for its first showing before Princess Astrid of Belgium, wife of the crown prince of that country, with her mother and sister. The royal ladies were reported to have been enthusiastic over the winter styles.

Revival in Hats Too.

Winter hats will also hark back to pre-war days. They show a decided reaction toward trimming although they have not reached the stage of birds nests, artificial fruit, fancy feathers, bands of short fur and brocades used for bonnets that were hailed in the old-fashioned phrase as "creations."

If anyone doubts that a new woman is being evolved in the Paris dress salons, the doubter should observe the conduct of the mannequins who wear the models. They move more slowly and with a carefully cultivated dignity. A lot of favorite hoydens are now registering hauteur. Poise is taking the place of perkness.

Hard-Boiled Flapper Dies;

:: SO LATEST PARIS DICTUM DECREES ::

Now Comes "Perfect Lady"

Paris, August 4.—(AP)—The hard-boiled flapper is dead.

With her short hair and short skirts, she received more publicity in ten years than John D. Rockefeller accumulated in 89. But that gal is gone, according to Paris dictum.

The people who lopped her off in her youth are the dress-makers and their reason was that she was killing the goose that lays their golden eggs.

In her place they have enthroned the perfect lady, a sophisticated female who knows all about clothes appeal and the part that it plays in a girl's life.

Throwback From Nineties.

The perfect lady is a throwback from late Victorian times. She will wear—if Paris puts it over—clothes of exquisite daintiness built along strictly feminine lines. Those lines will be less sporting than heretofore, more sinuous, less suggestive of the golf course and more suggestive of the mystery and expense of her sex.

The perfect lady is to take her cue from hundreds of winter creations which the dressmakers now are showing. Nearly all of these models are in discreet blacks, browns, dark blues or greys for daytime wear that only a lady would put on.

They come well below the knees. They play up feminine frailties which were women's greatest strength before the war. Slender waists are emphasized by more closely fitted lines.

Velvet, the most feminine of all fabrics, is miles ahead of any other at the leading houses.

The newest models, perhaps they are too new for this season, have several other characteristics of clothes of the late Victorian era, including fullness drawn to the back of the skirts and draped into bustles, demure collars, modestly high fronts on evening dresses but astonishingly low backs.

"Quite demure but not quite dumb," was the summary of an American girl who viewed a collection which had

is your answer to OIL HEAT!

NOW you can purchase an oil burner that is perfectly suited to your needs—an oil burner that is reliable and quiet—and a burner that can be depended upon to give you years of satisfaction.

Making Air Do the Work

You will be quick to understand why Petro is sure to give you satisfaction the moment you see how Petro engineers have simplified oil heating by the use of AIR! Air costs nothing and lasts forever. In Petro air alone is made to do the work of expensive gears, belts and shafts. And air does it better and more quietly.

And with all its simplicity, Petro uses the cheapest fuel oil available on the market today.

But no explanation of a theory in the basement can equal the actual experience upstairs. You can shop a whole month among oil burner show rooms and never learn what one day's happiness with Petro means. No one can describe it to you. It is an experience that must be lived.

Petro Oil Heat cannot be compared with coal heat. What it brings to you in a new sense of well-being—a smug complacency—a gratification that goes far beyond the mere relief from the drudgery of a coal-fired furnace. You forget that its hardships ever existed!

Enjoy Petro Oil Heat Next Winter

Now is the best time to install your oil burner. With our unexcelled installations, with such simplicity, and the sponsorship of an organization with a background of 25 years' success in oil heating—there is only one decision for you to make.

Decide now to avail yourself of this opportunity. If your heating plant is suitable for oil heat, or can be made so, we will install the exact size Petro for your particular furnace or boiler. Reasonable terms may be arranged to spread the payments over a period of a year. Phone us today to make a survey of your heating plant and submit the full details of the Petro Oil Burner. Write for a copy of our booklet, "Heating Homes the Modern Way."

Early Sales of Tobacco Find Growers Differing On Opinion of Receipts

Many Declare Prices Unreasonably Low, While Others Point to First Sales Being Low-Grade.

BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.

The first week of the Georgia tobacco markets of the 1928 season has closed with the prospect of better prices in the future, and rapid movement of a crop that probably will exceed last year's production by 5,000,000 or 10,000,000 pounds.

While prices for the first three days of the season, which comprised the first week, were slightly lower than those obtaining last season, growers were not alarmed, declaring they were first moving the sand-lug crop, the poorest grade of the golden weed. The conviction prevails that in general the quality of this year's crop, as well as quanity, compares more than favorably with those of last year. Incidentally, there are 12 more warehouses and seven more markets this year.

Vidalia led again yesterday in sales, selling 317,000 pounds at an average price of 14.17, while Fitzgerald, with average sales, commanded the highest average price, 16.25 cents a pound. Douglas captured second sales honors, disposing of 292,000 pounds for an average return of 16 cents a pound.

THOMASVILLE SUGGESTS LATER OPENING.

Thomasville, Ga., August 4.—The local tobacco market got off to a good start and has maintained a satisfactory gait for the first week of the 1928 season. While there is no real "kick" on the volume of tobacco brought here for marketing, it is realized that opening week sales would be larger in southwest Georgia if the opening date were pushed a bit further into August.

A later sales start would also mean higher average grades of the weed in the early days of the season as the growers would have more time to get their product carefully and thoroughly cured. As it is, some of the tobacco is put up for sale when it is not so dry as it should be. But the producers have to run it through the barns and get it out to make room for other maturing weed. The continued damp weather is having a bearing on this point. Growers whose barn capacity would be ample in real dry weather, find themselves pushed and crowded to care for the maturing leaves when the barn process is retarded by moisture of the atmosphere.

Notwithstanding all of which, there is an evident decrease in the percentage of very low grades of tobacco put on the floor this year, as compared with the offerings of 1927.

BLACKSHEAR EXPERT SEES LOW AVERAGE.

Blackshear, Ga., August 4.—(Special.)—Local opinion on the prices received by growers for their tobacco during the first three days sales on the Georgia market generally showed a tenor of dissatisfaction. According to A. P. Brantley, one of the most prominent citizens of this section, declares that the prices paid this year are from 25 to 40 per cent less than during the 1927 sales.

"I seriously doubt," Mr. Brantley said, referring to reports of good prices for the first day's sales, "if the average price on all the Georgia markets yesterday would average 12 1-2 cents per pound, and there is every prospect that the crop in Georgia this year will be marketed by the farmers at a substantial loss."

DOUGLAS MAN IS DISSATISFIED.

Douglas, Ga., August 4.—(Special.) Scattered pessimism over the prices being received by growers of tobacco who offered their wares on the markets throughout the tobacco belt this week finds concurrence of Charles Stillman, assistant treasurer of the Southern States Development company, one of the largest tobacco growers in Georgia.

"This year's tobacco crop," Mr. Stillman declared today, "is, on the average, bringing a price of at least 25 per cent less than the year previous, which in turn was fractionally below prices for the year before. If prices continue through the present season as they have commenced, we shall probably end up with an average of not better than 16 1-2 cents gross."

VALDOSTA ARGUES PRO AND CON.

Valdosta, Ga., August 4.—The first week of the 1928 tobacco marketing season in Valdosta has closed in a blaze of dissatisfaction, so far as some growers are concerned. There is widespread complaint that the prices paid this season during the first week are much less than were paid for sand lugs during the first week of 1927, and many growers are disposed, according to their statements, to withhold tobacco from the market until there are indications of a stiffer buying spirit.

Buyers, warehousemen and those who know tobacco grades, however, dissent from the views of the growers, and declare that the prices paid thus far are fully up to the warrant of the quality in the weed offered for sale. This same element further expresses the belief that as soon as tobacco of real quality comes on the market the buyers will "sit up and take notice" and there will be an immediate upward tilt in prices.

The amount of tobacco offered next week and the average price paid will, perhaps, indicate which of these positions is correct.

TIFTON LOOKS FOR HIGHER PRICES.

Tifton, Ga., August 4.—(AP)—The first week of the 1928 tobacco season closed today with total sales for the three days of 1,015,500 pounds for an average price of $12.76 per hundred pounds. This was $6.25 under the average for the first week last season, and general dissatisfaction was expressed among the growers, but hopes were held for better prices next week.

Josephus, of Emory, Joins Oscar in Toad Valhalla

:: LITTLE TEXAN PINES AWAY IN NEW SURROUNDINGS ::

BY AL RICHARDSON.

Atlantans will remember the untimely death of Oscar, Oglethorpe university's cornerstone horned toad, who summarily ended his existance early this summer at the Presbyterian sanctum of learning. Now a Methodist horned toad, Josephus, of Emory university, has added his name to the list of deceased horn toads. He died last week and now is preserved for the gaze of posterity in the Emory laboratories.

Josephus was sent to Emory from Texas some six months ago and was given into the keeping of Dr. W. B. Baker, of the Emory biology department, who kept him under observation both in his home and in the laboratory. It was the biologist's intention to investigate the myth which states that horned toads will live for indefinite periods without food or air.

Listless Individual.

Dr. Baker found that Josephus was an extremely listless individual in his new environment. But this probably was due to homesickness for the sands of his native Texas.

After a period of observation, Dr. Baker discovered that Josephus' normal rate of respiration was 16 per minute, but that the slightest exercise would send this rate quickly to 45 or 50. A 10-foot walk back and forth across the desk would accomplish this. From this fact, explains Dr. Baker, it is evident that the horned toad requires quite as much oxygen as any other reptile. The biologist does not believe that the horned toad will live for any appreciable length of time without oxygen, and so firmly was he of this opinion that he would not consent to having his Josephus sealed in a glass jar as an experiment.

The Tragic End.

However, it seemed that the life of a horned toad may end even outside hermetically sealed pjars. The other morning Dr. Baker came into his office and found Josephus dead. Apparently the little reptile had died of starvation, as for several days he had refused to eat the ants and flies which were his daily diet.

Antony Carter, biology laboratory assistant, performed the final rites for Josephus by preserving him in a bottle of formalin.

According to a young woman biology student from Texas, now studying at Emory, there is a tradition in her native state that the horned toad will come to life after being dead 30 years. Several student generations of Emory theologians will have to come and go before they will witness Josephus' rise from the dead.

For the present Josephus has definitely made his demise.

LARCENY CHARGED TO OPTOMETRIST BY GRIFFIN FIRM

Griffin, August 4.—(Special.)—Dr. F. J. Day, former optometrist for the T. H. Wynne Jewelry company here, was bound over before Judge W. H. Taylor today under $9,000 bond, charged with larceny after trust of $10,000 from the Wynne company. Dr. Day was arrested Thursday night on a warrant signed by Dozier Wynne, manager of the company, and was lodged in the Spalding county jail.

After Judge Taylor set the bond, Colonel Chester Byars, attorney for Day, stated that he would appeal the ruling to Judge W. E. H. Searcy, of superior court, in an effort to reduce the bond. T. H. Wynne claims that Dr. Day was short $10,044 in his accounts for the two years he worked for the local company. The defense claimed that the records of the company were open to any of several persons in the store and that the shortage claimed was a theoretical one and that Dr. Day was being "framed" by his former employer. Colonel Byars brought out that Dr. Day had settled with Mr. Wynne for an alleged shortage of $740 for 1927 and that the money had actually been paid to Mr. Wynne. Mr. Wynne stated that he had not received the money. Dr. Day has not made bond as yet.

LIBERAL EXPECTED TO RULE PANAMA

Panama, August 4.—(AP)—Although it appeared today that there would be no organized opposition to Florencio Harmodio Agosemena, liberal candidate for the presidency, in the election tomorrow, the government was going ahead with precautionary measures to meet any emergency which might disturb the peace.

All saloons will be closed from noon today until noon Sunday. Orders were sent out to all provincial and district executives to prosecute relentlessly any attempts at fraud.

Former President Belisario Porras, leader of the party supporting the candidacy of Dr. Jorge Eduardo Boyd, urged his followers to abstain from voting. It was regarded as certain that the Boyd-Porras partisans would follow the advice of their leader and not cast their ballots.

During the campaign liberal papers supporting Dr. Arosemena charged that the Boyd-Porras faction was endeavoring to capitalize the American nationality of Dr. Boyd's wife, Mrs. Elizabeth Bolling Boyd, a niece of Mrs. Woodrow Wilson. Later charges of fraud were filed with the American state department by the faction and intervention was asked. This, however, Secretary Kellogg refused.

The liberals had been prepared to concede victory to their opponents if the United States intervened. They said that the psychological effect on the masses was such as to provoke widespread desertions from the liberal ranks because of the belief that intervention would mean that the United States was in favor of the candidate requesting it.

The governor of the canal zone has issued the customary circular to employees urging all to stay out of Panama cities unless their presence is absolutely necessary. Such advice is always issued by the canal authorities as a preventive measure to avoid foreign elements being accidentally involved in possible disturbances.

Dr. Arosemena is one of the leading civil engineers of Panama. He is 45 years old and was educated in Switzerland, Germany. He did much important engineering work in Latin American countries.

COURT AT JENNINGS RELEASES DAWSEY UNDER $500 BOND

Jennings, La., Aug. 4.—(AP)—Aubrey L. Dawsey, arrested here several days ago at the request of Atlanta authorities on a charge of kidnaping his three-year-old son, Lee, was released under $500 bond today following habeas corpus hearing.

No legal action is involved in his separation from his wife, Dawsey said, and he will attend his extradition hearing at Baton Rouge to fight extradition to Georgia on the grounds that he is as much entitled to possession of the child as is its mother, who brought the kidnaping charge against him after the baby disappeared from its Atlanta home.

GOVERNOR DELAYS SIGNING PAPERS.

Baton Rouge, La., August 4—(AP)—Governor Huey P. Long announced tonight that he had delayed signing extradition papers for the return of Aubry L. Dawsey, alleged to have kidnaped his own child from Atlanta, to Georgia for trial, pending further information.

The governor stated that from limited information available he believed the case might be tried in New Orleans.

Dawsey is charged with abducting his 3-year-old child from the home of his estranged wife in Atlanta, who swore out a kidnaping warrant against him.

$300 BOND TO PREVENT DAWSEY'S LEAVING GEORGIA.

Should Aubrey Lee Dawsey be returned to Georgia under an indictment charging him with kidnaping his own son here, he will be placed under a $300 bond not to leave the state. The order was issued Saturday in superior court on petition of his former wife, Mrs. Edna Woods Dawsey.

At present Dawsey is contesting extradition following his apprehension at Jennings, La. A Fulton deputy is in Louisiana now with papers seeking his removal to Atlanta for trial.

Dawsey is alleged to have kidnaped Aubrey Lee, Jr., from his mother's home here several months ago. Mrs. Dawsey's suit for divorce and alimony is pending in superior court.

At the hearing Saturday she requested and received an order restraining Dawsey from interfering with her custody of the child should he be returned to her.

Studebaker alone has ball bearing spring shackles ...restful riding!

Like the jewels of a watch, patented ball bearing shackles furnish friction-less support for each spring end—poise the chassis on polished balls of steel, sealed in lubricant sufficient for 20,000 miles and more of unattended service. These 172 polished steel balls, rolling in lubricant, permit unhampered action of Studebaker's pliant springs—give to Studebaker's hydraulic shock absorbers their lightning-fast control of every recoil—provide a sum total of travel-ease no other motor car at any price has ever offered.

This restful riding supplements Studebaker's brilliant performance . . . proved by the fact that Studebaker holds more official records for speed and stamina than all other manufacturers combined . . . including the greatest record in the entire history of transportation—25,000 miles in less than 23,000 consecutive minutes.

Drive before you buy!

You may doubt that Studebaker has created the smoothest riding cars ever built—until you ride in a new Studebaker. RIVERS ANSWERS HARDMAN SPEECH

Constructive legislation passed by the general assembly at its session last summer was passed in spite of Governor L. G. Hardman's opposition and not with his help or cooperation, according to a statement issued Saturday by State Senator E. D. Rivers' campaign headquarters. It was stated that "Dr. Hardman failed utterly to advocate any program before the last legislature and failed utterly to cooperate with the general assembly in the progressive measures advocated by the members."

This statement was issued, it was declared, to make "specific and clear" Senator Rivers' position relative to certain recent statements of Governor Hardman.

The statement is as follows:

"Senator E. D. Rivers, on Tuesday of last week, in a speech at Cordele, Ga., replied to the opening speech of Governor Hardman. Since that time he has been answering the speech of Dr. Hardman.

"In order to make specific and clear the position of Senator Rivers in his replies to Dr. Hardman, his campaign headquarters desire to present the following facts:

Administration "Failure."

"Senator Rivers has contended from the beginning of the campaign that the administration of Dr. Hardman is a failure. He says that the most conclusive evidence of the incompetency, tactlessness and autocracy of the present governor is furnished by his opening speech at Cordele.

"In the beginning of the campaign Governor Hardman stated that the failure of his administration was due to the opposition of the last senate. Senator Rivers has smoked Dr. Hardman out on this question so successfully that Dr. Hardman did not even mention this fact in his Cordele speech.

"When the governor saw that he could not make good by trying to place the burden on the senate, he then tried to place the responsibility on the legislature as a whole. Senator Rivers has successfully shown the people of the state the splendid accomplishment of the last legislature. He has shown in his speeches that the constructive legislation passed at the last session of the legislature was passed in spite of Dr. Hardman and not with his help or cooperation. As a matter of fact, Dr. Hardman failed utterly to advocate any program before the last legislature and failed utterly to cooperate with the general assembly in the progressive measures advocated by the members.

Claims Disputed.

"In his speech at Cordele Dr. Hardman attempted to take credit for everything that has been done in the state since the year 1901. The press of the state and Senator Rivers have called attention to the fact that Dr. Hardman was responsible for none of the measures which he claimed for himself at Cordele.

"He took credit for the new hospital at Alto and it has been shown that this hospital was authorized and built when Dr. Hardman was neither governor nor a member of the general assembly and at a time when he had no connection whatever with the institution or with the state government."

"Senator Rivers has shown also that Dr. Hardman tried to take credit for the appropriations made by the general assembly at the last session of the legislature. These liberal appropriations were sponsored in the legislature by the anti-Hardman forces and had the opposition of Dr. Hardman. Dr. Hardman and his supporters attempted to cut the equalization school fund exactly in half and when the friends of the common schools were fighting desperately for a million dollar appropriation, they encountered the opposition of Dr. Hardman.

Supplies in Treasury.

"Yet, he claims credit for the equalization school fund bill, when, as a matter of fact, Senator Rivers was one of the authors of this bill when originally passed and chairman of the appropriations committee of the last session when the appropriation of one million dollars was given to the equalization school fund. It is significant that Dr. Hardman has at no time called attention to the fact that the senate opposed him in this policy and at this late date attempts to take credit for the work of the house and senate during the session of 1927.

"Senator Rivers has shown that Dr. Hardman's statement in his opening speech at Cordele, to the effect that his administration has wiped out a deficit in the state treasury is untrue and that, as a matter of fact, when Dr. Hardman assumed the reins of government there was a surplus in the state treasury of more than one million dollars.

"This statement of the position and contentions of Senator Rivers is made by his campaign headquarters for the purpose of clarifying the position of Senator Rivers and showing the hypocrisy of Dr. Hardman."

chased control of the company in June, 1927, for a sum in excess of $3,100,000.

The alleged shortage is more than $1,000,000 greater than the combined capital stock and surplus of the company, but policyholders and stockholders apparently face no loss as good will is valued at $4,000,000.

The company had $309,115,719 of insurance in force with 160,000 policyholders and assets of $43,186,431, according to the statement of last January 1.

Merger In Prospect.

The Missouri State Life Insurance company, also with headquarters here, has offered to purchase the assets and liabilities of International. The merger would make the Missouri State the largest legal reserve life insurance company west of the Mississippi with more than one billion dollars insurance in force and assets of approximately $125,000,000.

The Missouri State Life has offered to pay stockholders $107 a share. Par value is $25. Market value has been about $75.

ADAMS ATTACKS TALMADGE CARD

Statements of Eugene Talmadge, commissioner of agriculture, denying that he has spent more money for the first six months of 1928 than his predecessor in office spent for the same period the corresponding year, are not based on figures obtained in the office of the state auditor, but were based on figures compiled in Mr. Talmadge's own office, according to a statement Saturday by G. C. Adams, of Newton county, who is opposing Mr. Talmadge for reelection in the September primary.

Mr. Adams refers to the Talmadge figures which Mr. Talmadge declared could be verified by writing to the state auditor. Mr. Adams declares that he has information from the office of state auditor, Sam J. Slate, which shows that no audit of any kind has been made of the books of the department in 1928. Mr. Adams reiterates his charge that Mr. Talmadge has spent more money than his predecessor for the same period and cites figures obtained from the treasury department to prove this. These figures show, according to Mr. Adams, that Mr. Talmadge has withdrawn $194,288 for the first six months of 1928, and that his predecessor withdrew $188,908 for the same period, making $5,379 more for Mr. Talmadge than for his predecessor.

Discussing this phase of the situation, Mr. Adams said:

Unanswered, Adams Says.

"Smarting under the avalanche of charges of incompetency, inefficiency, quarrelsomeness and domineering bossism I made against the commissioner of agriculture last week and which remain totally unanswered, Eugene Talmadge, my opponent in the race for commissioner this year, has at last condescended to come down among the common people and discuss some of the reasons why the state department of agriculture has been wrecked under his administration. In a long and somewhat rambling statement he quotes a set of peculiar figures in an effort to disprove my charge that it has cost the state more money under Talmadge for the first six months of 1928 to run this department than it cost his predecessor for the same period the preceding year.

"Before discussing what these purported figures show, I want to reiterate with all my strength my charge that Talmadge is temperamentally and constitutionally unfit to fill the place as commissioner of agriculture. I want to reiterate my charges that he is simply an overbearing little lawyer who was elected by accident as commissioner and whose proper place is a courthouse, where he can bicker and snarl over petty legal cases rather than in the state capitol, trying fruitlessly to run the most important department of the state as far as the farmers are concerned. I charge Talmadge has connived with members of the legislature in an effort to obtain passage of bills that would give him more money and patronage, and that he has rewarded some of these members by placing them on the state payroll in his departent, despite the fact that these men already are drawing pay from the state as legislators.

No Audit, Adams States.

"Talmadge denies in his statement that he has spent more money the first six months of this year than was spent by his predecessor in the same department the preceding year. He claims to have obtained his figures from the state auditor, and has the glaring effrontery to call on the citizens of Georgia to write to the state auditor to verify his figures. He claims a saving to the state, exclusive of oil inspection, of $51,687. Where did he get this figure? In the first place no audit of the department of agriculture has been made covering the first six months of 1928. Sam J. Slate, state auditor, has no such figures in his office. The figures that are available at the capitol are figures which show how much money Talmadge has drawn from the state treasury to operate these departments. These figures show that Talmadge's withdrawals from the state treasury for the first six months of 1928 amont to $194,288, and for the same period of the preceding year, Commissioner J. J. Brown withdrew $188,908. There are the figures which tell the tale. That is real money—the people's money. Talmadge has withdrawn $5,379 more than Brown did for the same period within a year, after running up and down the state pledging to the people that he would cut expenses one-half after he went into office.

"Talmadge says any person who doubts his figures can write to the state auditor. Why did Talmadge put it up to the people to write to the auditor? Why did he not go to the auditor's office himself and verify them? It is only a few steps from Talmadge's office to that of Auditor Slate. The truth is Talmadge's figures are doctored to please his purpose and do not reflect the real condition in his department. Withdrawals from the treasury show beyond doubt that Talmadge has spent more money than Brown for the same six months' period.

Discusses Oil Inspectors.

Mr. Adams charges that Mr. Talmadge had nothing to do with the passage of laws cutting down the number of oil inspectors from 200 to six. He charges further that Mr. Talmadge opposed that part of the law which provided for the transfer of this work from the department of agriculture to the office of the state comptroller.

It is also charged that Mr. Talmadge has made extravagant claims concerning the number of fertilizer inspections he has made. Mr. Adams said fertilizer samples have been received from all parts of the state and that Mr. Talmadge has been forced to "farm out" 2,000 of the samples to private chemists and that he has failed to make prompt reports to the farmers. Mr. Adams denied that he is a part of any "machine" but to the contrary, he said, he supported Mr. Talmadge, himself, in his last race for this position.

Concluding, Mr. Adams said:

"No, the truth of the matter is that Talmadge has wrecked the department of agriculture and everybody in the state knows it. He has bickered and quarreled with nearly every official with whom he has done business. He is unfit in every way to hold the place as head of the farmers' department, and everybody in the state, particularly those in his own office and other state offices, know this is true. The time has come to rehabilitate the state department of agriculture. We farmers must turn out this lawyer-in-farmer's-clothing and turn to the task of building up, through intelligent effort and constructive plans, a department which will bring the sorely needed relief to the farmers of Georgia. Never before in the history of the state was a real department of agriculture so badly needed, and I pledge myself, if elected, to take off my coat and get down to work and with the help and advice of practical farmers establish a department which in a few years will function for the farmer as no other agricultural department in the union has ever functioned."

PARTY LEADERS DENY REPUDIATION BY SMITH

said, "and no such construction was ever given to such plank either in the committee or on the floor of the convention."

He presents his case:

1—By quoting a colloquy between Glass and Governor Moody, of Texas, who led the bone-dry fight, which was opened when the Virginia senator declared that his plank "does not commit the democratic party to the principle of prohibition" and during which Glass told the Texas governor emphatically that the plank did not commit the party against attempts to destroy the prohibition law.

2—By stating that Moody's own plank, which would have committed the party to such a position, was defeated and that Moody alone voted against the Glass plank.

3—By showing that Senator Wagner, of New York, moved to reconsider the vote by which the Glass plank was adopted, desiring that it be definitely understood that Governor Smith would not be bound by any such plank from expressing his views and that Wagner had withdrawn this motion when he was assured that it would not bind Smith.

"Now, here is a proposition that does not commit the democratic party to the principle of prohibition," Glass said in presenting his plank, the record shows. Later Glass said:

"The resolution offered by me does not bind anybody to anything except enforcement—obedience to the constitution and the enforcement of the law."

TWO TEXAS GROUPS TO BACK NOMINEE.

Dallas, Texas, August 4.—(AP)—Support was pledged to Governor Alfred E. Smith, of New York, at two democratic county conventions in Texas today after heated sessions.

Preceding the convention at Houston a riot call was turned in to quiet an uproar precipitated among a crowd of 200 men and women attending a meeting of the county executive committee when W. W. Moore, Jr., a Smith man, and Alvin S. Moody, chairman of the anti-Smith democrats of Texas, got into a row.

The lie was passed when each man accused the other of having been a member of the Ku Klux Klan.

Big Smith Majority.

In the convention the Smith men overwhelmed their opponents, adopting a resolution pledging support to the democratic ticket from "constable to president."

At Austin the Travis county convention struck the names of Cone Johnson, state highway commissioner, and his bride, Miss Ethel Milton, assistant attorney general, from the list of delegates to the state convention because Johnson had declared his intention to "bolt" the party presidential nominee.

By a vote of 205 to 175 a resolution was adopted instructing delegates to the state convention to oppose repeal or modification of the federal prohibition laws.

Stand By Dry Law.

By a vote of 205 to 175 a resolution was adopted instructing delegates to the state convention to oppose repeal or modification of the federal prohibition laws.

Former Governor James E. Ferguson stepped into the Texas senatorial campaign today with the announcement that he would support United States Senator Earle B. Mayfield for renomination against Congressman Tom Connally, who will oppose Mayfield in the run-off primary.

Mayfield defeated Ferguson for the senate in 1922 and Connally supported Mayfield in that campaign.

"If Connally was for Mayfield when the latter was a member of the Ku Klux Klan running against me," Ferguson said in a statement, "as a choice between two evils, then Connally can't complain if my friends and myself give him a dose of his own medicine."

RESPONSE PLEASES HARDMAN MANAGERS

After their first week of work in their campaign to reelect Governor L. G. Hardman his campaign managers issued a statement Saturday declaring they are "more than satisfied with the result of the first week's work." They stated that they have a corps of stenographers in campaign headquarters which is busy answering letters from people in various parts of the state.

The statement issued by the Hardman campaign headquarters is as follows:

"With the opening of the second week of our campaign we are getting into full swing and are more than satisfied with the result of the first week of real work. The issues upon which we will make our fight to reelect Governor Hardman are clean cut. There is no mystery about them. We have every reason to believe that the people who so overwhelmingly elected Governor Hardman two years ago appreciate the courageous fight he has made against machine domination and are more than satisfied with his administration. We believe that they understand, fully, the source of his present opposition and that they will recognize the old machine, even though it is disguised and under the leadership of Ed Rivers instead of John Holder.

"When Governor Hardman refused to permit a group of senators, in the last sessin of the general assembly, to dictate his appointments and to compel him to violate his promises to the people of Georgia the old crowd became convinced that their only hope of ever again using the state of Georgia as their personal property was to completely eliminate him from public life. They tried at every turn to discredit him and every measure he proposed. It made no difference what the measure was. If it came from Governor Hardman, they opposed it. The good of the state meant nothing to them.

"One more victory for clean, businesslike administration of the state's business will mean that it will be many years before Georgia reverts to the domination of any crowd of 'practical' politicians. And we are keeping a corps of stenographers busy answering letters from thousands of people in every section of the state assuring us that they will vote and work for that victory."

FUNERAL IN AUGUSTA FOR D. B. M'ELHANEY

The body of D. B. McElhaney, of Charlotte, N. C., who was found dead Friday noon in his room at a local hotel, was sent Saturday afternoon to Augusta for funeral services and interment.

A coroner's jury decided Saturday morning that Mr. McElhaney's death was caused from an organic heart trouble.

HARDMAN URGES HEALTH PROGRAM

The problem of public health in Georgia is far greater than any other question facing the people at this time, according to Governor L. G. Hardman in a statement issued Saturday. The improvement of health conditions is of primary importance to the question of crime restriction according to the governor.

There has been material progress in the last 12 months in the public health institutions according to the governor.

"From the date of my inauguration I have labored constantly to improve these conditions," the governor said.

His statement follows:

"There has been material progress during the last 12 months in our public health institutions and in the general health conditions throughout our state. From the date of my inauguration, I have constantly labored to improve these conditions, and through the cooperation with our efficient health department, the state now has health laboratories equal to those of any state in the south.

"With the proper provisions and facilities in the department of health for the prevention of disease, coordinated with the county health programs, still further safeguards will be thrown around the health of our people Additional activity for strict sanitary conditions, resulting in the relief of the expensive burden of the sick and a decrease in human suffering will make more contented and happier homes for our people.

"The problems of good health, together with that of rural education touches a far greater number of the citizens of our state than any other. The improvement of health conditions is of primary importance to the question of crime restriction. It is fully recognized that the protection of health must go forward if the burden of crime is to be substantially reduced. We are blessed perhaps as no other section in having favorable natural health conditions in every section of our state, and with increased facilities, full cooperation among the various health agencies, and the more complete enforcement of health laws, preventable and contagious diseases will soon be reduced to a minimum in Georgia.

"Along with the great importance of better health comes that of highway construction. My views on this problem have been previously discussed and my efforts in behalf of highway construction are well known.

"The construction of a complete system of permanent highways is one of the modern demands upon our government. My pledges to the people in this respect, I now reiterate and reaffirm. The highway department is the largest one in our state government, spending annually the approximate sum of $12,000,000. It should be completely divorced from politics and its operation put upon an economical and business-like basis; as any other large financial enterprise, if it is to render the greatest service to the people.

"The construction and maintenance of the state road system should be borne by the state and the counties should not be asked to contribute another dollar to the state system. A large majority of our counties are rural, a number of them financially poor, and each, should be permitted and encouraged to use all of their available funds for county roads and local schools. Every farmer's boy and girl cannot live on the highways and they must have adequate roads leading to market and to school. With such a complete reorganization, the application of efficient business operation, together with funds now available, Georgia should rapidly complete the highway system.

RIVERS REITERATES LOYALTY TO AL SMITH

Americus, Ga., August 4.—(Special.)—State Senator E. D. Rivers, candidate for governor of Georgia, today reiterated his intention to support Al Smith as presidential candidate of the democratic party, in a speech in which his audience asked him point-blank how he stood on the question.

"I am for Alfred E. Smith," he shouted in answer to the question put by those among the audience. "I will support him and the national party ticket." Senator Rivers continued:

"I crossed that bridge when I qualified as a candidate by certifying what the rules of the party prescribe; that I am a valid adherent of the democratic party in both state and national politics."

Most of his address was devoted to a review of the administration of Governor Hardman which he characterized as a failure. He declared he had made no promises regarding whom he would appoint to office if elected and said he had no apologies to make for his fight against Governor Hardman in the senate last summer. He advocated tax reform; the abandonment of advalorem taxation by the state; adoption of safeguards against excessive taxation of the form by county and municipal authorities and that the solution of new state revenue be worked out by the legislature and governor after advalorem taxation shall have been abolished. Rivers' adherence to Smith as the party nominee for president was roundly applauded in all parts of the house, and at the conclusion of his address he was congratulated by many of those present.

ATTACKS HARDMAN'S "PAID WRITERS."

Douglas, Ga., August 4.—(Special.) Senator E. D. Rivers addressed a large crowd of citizens at the courthouse today in the interest of his candidacy for governor. The senator pointed out that several days ago he had told the people that the governor would soon be bringing his "paid political writers" into play and commenting on the morning statement of the governor in the press said "anyone can take the opening speech of the governor at Cordele and the statement credited to him in today's papers and readily see that evidently the same person didn't write them both."

Continuing Mr. Rivers said, "I think we ought to have a governor who can at least come before the people and tell them what he stands for and not one who has to depend upon employed experts and hired henchmen to compose his speeches and designate his positions. Anyway whatever either the governor or his hired writers say means nothing, for he has been on both sides and in the middle of every public issue that he has not been able to dodge entirely, and furthermore, he has demonstrated an incompetency and tactlessness to accomplish whatever he does happen to be for."

Senator Rivers said he had answered the governor's statement in full in a statement he would give to the press Monday.

W. D. UPSHAW REPLIES TO WM. S. HOWARD

William D. Upshaw, candidate for the nomination to congress from the fifth Georgia district, Saturday in reply to a statement of William Schley Howard which was printed recently in The Constitution, stated that Mr. Howard, chairman of the fifth district congressional committee, was afraid to put Upshaw off the ticket in the primary September 12.

The former congressman said that he is a legal resident of Atlanta and the fifth district and charged that certain statements of Mr. Howard could not be true because Mr. Howard was not a member of congress when certain votes were taken in the lower house.

Mr. Upshaw's statement follows in full:

Upshaw's Statement.

While I was out of the state, fighting at Houston for constitutional Jeffersonian democracy, it seems that the Honorable William "Slippery" Howard (as the Sage of Hickory Hill used to call him), chief advisor of Congressman Steele, made several slips. He evidently started his mouth to talking and went off and left it. More recently he suffered from another violent attack of vacant volubility which needs attention. Bill dodges about so much, changes front so often and sleeps in so many different political beds that it is not always easy to locate him, but I intend to shoot in the hole where he was last seen.

As self-appointed spokesman for the executive committee of the fifth congressional district, Bill, with the consent of Mr. Steele has agreed to allow me to run for congress. How generous and beautiful! Especially after the persuasive powers of that ground-swell rally of my friends among the good people of DeKalb county when many were turned away from the courthouse in Decatur. Neither my friends nor I will ever forget it. Of course Bill says he still feels that I ought not to run, and I believe he really feels that way. His feelings and fears will increase every day between now and the twelfth day of September.

Not Even in Congress.

Bill says he is a prohibitionist and voted to pass the Volstead law over President Wilson's veto. He wonders why I accepted a seat in congress "after Woodrow Wilson vetoed the Volstead law." Sakes alive, my countrymen! As a matter of fact, as the records show, Bill was not even in congress when the Volstead act was voted on, and as a prohibitionist Bill ranks with those illustrious leaders described by Will Rogers as "voting against liquor as long as they are able to stagger to the polls." The Congressional Record shows that I, myself, along with all the Georgia delegation, voted to pass the Volstead law over the president's veto October 27, 1919.

Bill must have been considerably befuddled when he said in his last article that he voted for the Volstead act and also voted to override the president's veto, because he had long since retired to private life and appointed himself as chief advisor of anyone who would try to beat me for congress.

He vehemently declared on the sidewalk the other day in the presence of witnesses that he was going to help see to it, "that hell is beat out of Upshaw." So Bill becomes an evangelist! Like Congressman Steele, Bill can't get very far on a prohibition platform while supporting Al Smith, the arch enemy of sobriety and constitutional integrity, yes, and following Manager Raskob, a wet republican.

Bill also complains that I don't spend much time in my district. What a slap he thus gives to the hundreds of fine traveling men whose legal homes are in Atlanta, like mine has been for more than twenty years, but whose business forces them to stay away most of the time. As a platform speaker in the current of national demands I am invited all over America to address great audiences in the cause of civic progress, education and God-fearing patriotism, and on several hundred platforms every year I pay my tribute to my great home city of Atlanta. But, without apology, my main business for the last four years, after witnessing the boodlum insults heaped upon Georgians and other southern democrats by Tammany Hall in Madison Square Garden, has been an honest effort to prevent Tammany's foreignized, boosecratic hero from taking charge of the white house. There I witnessed the assassination of southern democracy and I refuse to be a party to its further humiliation.

Legal Residence Here.

How utterly puerile and pitifully political for this charge of absenteeism to be made against a man reared in Georgia, who never voted anywhere else but in Georgia and whose identities have been with the people of the fifth congressional district for more than 30 years! When I was elected to congress in 1918 I moved my legal residence from 84 Willard avenue to the Kimball house for the convenience of my constituents who were entitled to a central location of easy access. After leaving congress I moved my legal residence back to my old home ward, the seventh, 974 Gordon street. The effort to banish me from the state of my birth and the home city of my boyhood because, for reasons as sacred as life and death, I am compelled to keep one of my children in the mountains of North Carolina, where thousands go for health from all over the nation, is cruel beyond words. And the fair-minded people of this district have become increasingly disgusted with such political tactics.

I do not blame Mr. Steele for putting his children in school in Washington for his convenience and pleasure, and he and his friends who have persistently refused to allow me a single term in congress without opposition, should not blame me for obeying the doctor's advice and keeping my children most of the time in the mountains, for reasons more imperative and sacred than convenience and pleasure.

Finally, I call the attention of the public to the fact that if I am not really entitled to run for congress in the democratic primary because I refuse to sell my soul and the soul of my party and my country to Al Smith and the undemocratic treachery of Tammany Hall, then they have no right to generously allow me to run, because they were afraid to throw me out, while allowing life-long national republicans to vote in our democratic primaries; they should have called the committee, as William Schley Howard announced he would do before he took "cold feet."

Cites Maddox Bolters.

I awaited the action of the committee with complacent unconcern, knowing that if I was thrown out I would be in such good democratic company as Grover Cleveland, who bolted William J. Bryan, and Bryan himself, who declared before the Chicago convention that he would bolt if they nominated a "gold bug." Yea, verily, and in that illustrious company of Atlanta's best citizens, who paraded the streets in the rain and elected knightly Bob Maddox mayor, they said, "for the sake of the city's good name!" There were thousands of red-blooded bolters then, whose fundamental democracy has never since been questioned, and if they and their children now support this "conscientious objector," who is fighting for America's good name, my majority will break the adding machine!

Bill's vivid imagination pictures me as "praying for Al Smith's nomination for the last six months so I would have an excuse to run for congress."

Frankly, (though Bill may not be able to understand it) I have tried to pray for more than 40 years, and I have voted as I prayed and prayed as I voted. And, therefore, his suggestion is ridiculous! On the floor of congress five years ago and all over the nation, I warned, and have since warned, my party and my country against Al Smith's nomination and election. Evidently, if Bill had prayed much for the last six months he wouldn't have said some things he has said, neither would he have done some things that he has done, and he wouldn't now be trying to turn over the white house in Washington to Al Smith and the foreignized enemies of southern democracy and constitutional sobriety.

Poor, old "Slippery" Bill! You went far afield to say little, childish things about me, but I refuse to be tempted further by your meddlesome mendacity and your meticulous loquacity!

Goodbye Bill! Hail and farewell!
WILLIAM D. UPSHAW.

NORFOLK CITIZENS ASK MARINE GUARD FOR ELECTION DAY

Norfolk, Va., August 4.—(AP)—It has been suggested to United States Attorney General John G. Sargent, that he place marines or U. S. marshals at each polling place in Norfolk for the "next general election Tuesday," W. B. Shaffer, Jr., of this city announced today.

Mr. Shaffer said that a copy of resolutions adopted at a "prosperity and political freedom meeting" held here July 31, was sent with the suggestion. The purpose, Shaffer explained was to insure a "legal election as the last election was plainly illegal."

2,000 REPORTED KILLED BY FLOODS IN CHINESE TOWNS

Shanghai, August 4.—(AP)—Chinese reports from Tsinan state that about 2,000 persons in the towns of Ankiu and Linchu in central Shantung have been drowned in a flood caused by the overflowing of the Tawen river, a tributary of the Yellow river.

The area has been experiencing an unsually heavy rainfall.

STATE POLITICS WARMS UP AS PRIMARY DATE APPROACHES

STATE LEADERS INDORSE FORUM

Governor Hardman is entirely in sympathy with the ideals and prospectus of Georgia's projected first open political forum at Augusta on August 16, he indicated to Thomas E. Merritt, representing the enterprize Saturday morning, but press of official duties may prevent the chief executive's acceptance of an invitation to appear on the program. Forum sponsors have invited every candidate for state office in the September 12 primary to appear.

August 16 falls on Thursday, which has come, by tacit consent and custom, the governor's weekly day to hear appeals for pardons and he told Mr. Merritt that at present he could not see his way clear to attendance at the Augusta forum.

Among other candidates who expressed whole-hearted commendation of the forum plan Saturday was Eugene Talmadge, commissioner of agriculture, who said the forum will fill a long-felt political need in Georgia.

"You young fellows over there at Augusta are making it possible for poor folks to run for office without having to break into banks or penitentiaries," he said, with some vigor. "It will mean the political salvation of the state."

Forum authorities signified that a score of candidates for state office have accepted the invitation to mount the Augusta platform for a brief period. The forum will be held on the shores of Lake Olmstead in Julian Smith park, a large wooded tract which lies within the city limits of Augusta. Plans in the hands of the Augusta Chamber of Commerce include a barbecue for approximately 10,000 guests.

LOUIS FOX FUNERAL TO BE HELD TODAY

Funeral services for Louis Fox, prominent Atlantan, who died Friday afternoon at the residence, 662 Bonaventure avenue, will be held at 4:30 o'clock this afternoon from the chapel of Sam R. Greenberg & Co. Rabbi David Marx will officiate and interment will be in Oakland cemetery.

STATE DRY FORCES TO MEET IN MACON

BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS.

All "dry anti-Smith democrats" were invited to attend an organization meeting of "anti-Smith democrats" at Macon on August 9 in a formal call issued here Saturday by E. J. Forrester, Baptist minister, and Mrs. Marvin Williams, president of the Georgia W. C. T. U.

The call followed announcement of the Macon meeting by Bishop James Cannon, Jr., from Richmond, Va., Friday.

Organization for Georgia and a declaration of principles in the drive to obtain votes for Herbert Hoover were set forth as the program for the session.

"Resently in Asheville, N. C., a conference was held of anti-Smith democrats," the call said. "The purpose of the conference was to consider how the dry anti-Smith democrats might best serve the south at this particular time. It was decided that the most effective way to perform this service would be to organize for the election of dry congressmen and senators and to defeat Governor Alfred E. Smith for the presidency by casting our votes for Herbert Hoover. It was distinctly understood and must not be forgotten that this conference was in no sense a bolt from the democratic party, but a conference of people who felt that to be true to the democratic party they must undertake to defeat Governor Smith, who does not represent the principles of true democracy, and who, besides not being a true democrat, is a most pronounced advocate of the liquor traffic."

The Macon meeting will convene at the Dempsey hotel at 1 o'clock next Thursday.

SERIOUS EXPLOSION OF ITALIAN POWDER MILL IS REPORTED

London, August 4.—(AP)—A dispatch to the Exchange Telegraph from Vienna states that a roundabout report had reached there via Belgrade of a serious explosion in a powder mill at the Italian naval base in Spezia. The agency handles the report with reserve as it reached Belgrade from private sources at the Jugo-Slavian-Italian frontier.

Sheriff Is Denied Use of Machine Left on Highway

A man—and a sheriff, too—may own an automobile in Georgia and still not be able to use it, although he may go to his wits end in an effort to properly license it.

So did Assistant Attorney General T. R. Gress reluctantly rule Saturday in advising Sheriff T. R. Camp, of Campbell county, that neither is the latter able to purchase a tag for the tagless car found by one of his officers abandoned on a highway, nor is he able to operate the machine until he does get a license, which he can't.

A Campbell county officer found the machine, described as an expensive coach of popular manufacture, and examination revealed that not only was the license number gone, but that a portion of the motor number, too, had been effaced.

There is a Georgia statute making it a felony to operate a car which bears no motor number, where intent to deceive is proved. Likewise, it is unlawful, of course, to operate an unlicensed machine. To add to Sheriff Camp's woe, he cannot purchase a tag until he ascertains the motor number, although he is palpably guilty of no intent to deceive.

A letter to the headquarters of the automobile manufactory brought the information that the car was sold to a North Carolina dealer. The latter wrote that he kept no books, Mr. Gress' report from the sheriff said, and consequently the owner of the coach remains unidentified. And he dare not show up, Mr. Gress believed, because to do so would openly stamp him with guilt of felony because of the deliberately effaced motor number.

The assistant attorney general advised Sheriff Camp that he might sell the machine and pocket the funds, but as for operating it, there simply isn't any Georgia statute that will allow him to do it just yet.

SLATER TO REACH ATLANTA MONDAY

Scheduled to open campaign headquarters at the Piedmont hotel Tuesday, John R. Slater, prominent Douglas business man and democratic leader, who has accepted the post of manager of the national democratic campaign in Georgia, will arrive in Atlanta Monday to make initial arrangements for the campaign.

Plans for organizing the men and women in all Georgia counties for aggressive support of the democratic party and its nominees will be put into effect immediately, Mr. Slater said.

Mr. Slater accepted invitation of the Young Men's Democratic league of Fulton county to attend its meeting at 12:30 o'clock Wednesday. Mr. Slater said: "I appreciate your invitation and will be most pleased to attend your meeting. Permit me to congratulate the Young Men's Democratic league of Fulton county upon the splendid service it is rendering the democratic party and to urge it to continue its good work.

"State campaign headquarters will be opened in the Piedmont hotel at Atlanta on next Tuesday, and I wish now to extend an earnest invitation to the officers and members of the league to cooperate with the headquarters force in their work. It will be the purpose of the campaign workers to effect an organization similar to yours in every county. In doing this we will work in cooperation with the members of the democratic state executive committee and the members of the several county democratic executive committees. Every democrat in the state, both men and women and young and old, should line up for the democratic party in which rests the hopes and the best interests of the south now and for the future."

Since announcement Friday that he had accepted the post of manager, Mr. Slater has been the recipient of a great number of telegrams, telephone calls and letters, congratulating the party upon his selection, pledging him cooperation and predicting a splendid victory for the party in November, according to news dispatches from Douglas.

NEWELL-THOMAS SALESMEN GUESTS AT PICNIC OUTING

Salesmen of the Newell-Thomas Office Equipment company, and their families, were guests of the officials of the company, Saturday afternoon at a picnic and chicken supper at Idlewood.

The outing was in celebration of the conclusion of the contest that has been going on between the salesmen during the months of May, June and July. Prizes were awarded the individual winner, and the winning group by several manufacturing plants represented by the local company, George Florence was winner of first place in the contest.

Forty-four persons were present, including the officials of the company.

through the press of the state to all democrats from 21 to 40 years of age who are interested in the success of the democratic ticket and who feel concerned over the present political situation, to attend the meeting and to become charter members.

Some of the invited guests of honor are former Governors John M. Slaton, Nat E. Harris, Hugh M. Dorsey, Clifford Walker and Thomas W. Hardwick; Albert Howell, Jr., Hollins N. Randolph, Orrin Roberts, Richard B. Russell, Jr., speaker of the house of representatives, and E. B. Dykes, president of the state senate, the judges of the supreme court and court of appeals, W. T. Anderson, Pleasant A. Stovall, Bowdre Phinizy, Andrew C. Erwin, Julian Harris, James L. Dickey, James D. Robinson, J. J. Haverty, D. B. Bullard, Frank Berry, director of finance for the democratic party in Georgia, and Henry T. McIntosh.

Members of the organization committee are R. J. Reynolds, Jr., Bruce F. Woodruff, Bond Almand, Dr. Herbert B. Kennedy and John H. Chandler, Atlanta; Louis Fagan and Louis L. Brown, Jr., of Fort Valley; Samuel A. Conn, Savannah; Edgar Dunlap and Herbert Dean, Gainesville; Lovelace Eve, Americus; John Wesley Weekes, Decatur; John O. Mitchell and Frank K. Sims, Jr., Dalton; Gwynn Nixon, Augusta; Frank Scarlett, Brunswick; Lindley Camp, Marietta, and Augustus Sparks, Macon.

The plan of organization contemplates a branch of the league in each congressional district and in turn a branch in every county in the state.

JUDGE WINS FIGHT FOR VOTE RECOUNT

Inverness, Fla., August 4.—(AP)—Four recalcitrant election officials of Citrus county, serving an indefinite sentence for contempt of court, growing out of their refusal to recount votes cast in precinct three, in the June primary, changed their minds today and began a retabulation in the county court house, said Sheriff Bowden.

Their decision to recheck came as a surprise to officials here as their attorneys had intimated the case would be taken to the state supreme court and, if necessary, the quartet would remain in prison until a ruling was handed down in the case.

Two Counts Offered.

Shortly before noon R. J. Murcheson, Joe Trotter, Eugene Gleaton, inspectors, and T. L. Rogers, clerk, announced that they would comply with an order issued by Judge T. Frank Hobson, Pinellas circuit court, to make a second survey of the ballots in the election of a state senator, in which George W. Schofield opposed John E. King.

The order was issued after Judge Hobson recounted the votes and announced Schofield had a majority of 33 votes. The original count made by the officials showed King won by 11 votes, they said. They refused to carry out the judge's instructions on the ground that the ballot boxes had been tampered with.

Course Undetermined.

Judge Hobson then ordered Sheriff Bowden to imprison the men until they "purge themselves of contempt by complying with the order to recount the ballots cast in precinct three."

Judge Hobson declared the recount necessary so that a corrected certificate of nomination could be made to the secretary of state.

Just what course Mr. King will take was unknown here. He may carry the matter to the supreme court, it is said, since the contest was decided against him.

SIMMONS DECLINES TO REPLY TO LEAGUE

Jesse B. Simmons, Atlanta lawyer and candidate in the September primary against Miss Bessie Kempton, incumbent, who is running for reelection to the legislature from Fulton county, Saturday defended his refusal to answer a letter from the Young Men's Democratic league asking him if he would support the democratic national ticket nominees for the "very good and sufficient reason that I do not believe that this league or any other organization or individual has any right to question me as to how I am going to exercise my right of franchise."

Simmons in his defense stated that he was "a democrat after the manner born," but that "I propose to let my conscience and the great God who gave them to me be my guide in selecting the one for whom I will vote for president." He did not state that he would support the democratic nominees on the national ticket.

Simmons in defining his position said as follows:

"I did receive a communication from this Young Men's Democratic league, but I did not reply to it for the very good and sufficient reason that I do not believe that this league or any other organization or individual has any right to question me as to how I am going to exercise my right of franchise in some matter which has no connection whatsoever with the office I am a candidate for.

"I am a democrat after the manner born, and I firmly believe in the principles of that great party, and steadfastly adhere to its doctrines, and for these very reasons I propose to let my conscience and the great God who gave them to me be my guide in selecting the one for whom I will vote for president, and neither you (The Constitution) nor the Young Men's Democratic league nor anyone else have any right to question me about it."

YOUNG DEMOCRATS PLAN BOOSTER RALLY

A booster luncheon rally in the interest of furthering the work of the organization in stimulating interest in the presidential campaign and in enrolling democrats who pledge themselves to support the party in the forthcoming presidential election, will be held by the Young Men's democratic league at 12:30 o'clock Wednesday in the chamber of commerce cafe.

Several hundred young democrats from all over the section are expected to attend, and some of the best known figures in Georgia democracy are to attend the luncheon rally as guests of the league, including Governor L. G. Hardman, Major John S. Cohen, national democratic committeeman for Georgia; Mrs. Edgar Alexander, national democratic committeewoman; United States Senators William J. Harris and Walter F. George; Congressman L. J. Steele, of the Fifth district; G. Ed Maddox, of Rome, chairman of the state democratic executive committee; Mayor I. N. Ragsdale, of Atlanta; Clark Howell, editor of The Constitution; James B. Nevin, editor of The Georgian; ex-Governors Hoke Smith, Hugh M. Dorsey, John M. Slaton, Thomas W. Hardwick and Clifford Walker.

Coming for the purpose of promoting cooperation between the Fulton county league and the young men's democratic organizations in the various congressional districts, representatives from all over the state will attend.

The league has enrolled hundreds of members during the past few weeks, according to Bond Almand, president, and it is desired to increase the membership to include every democrat in this section, it was said.

Reservations for the luncheon may be made by communicating with Mr. Almand, Hurt building, telephone Walnut 4938, or with Roy LeCraw, Healey building, telephone Walnut 0961.

FLYNT SEEKING UNEXPIRED TERM

Judge J. J. Flynt, of Griffin, is running to fill the unexpired term of the late secretary of state, S. G. McLendon and is not running for that part of the term now being filled by George H. Carswell, it was announced Saturday by John I. Kelley, manager of Judge Flynt's campaign, in his race for secretary of state.

Mr. Kelley also outlined Judge Flynt's position on the method of distributing automobile license tags in the office of the secretary of state.

The statement is as follows:

Reports have been circulated that Mr. Carswell was appointed by the governor to serve the full unexpired term of Secretary McLendon, but this is erroneous. Under the law the governor is empowered to appoint a successor to an official to serve until the next general election and no longer.

The wholesome purpose of this law is obvious. It simply empowers a governor to name an appointee to serve until the people themselves will have an opportunity of selecting for themselves officials to serve unexpired terms.

This law is a good as it prevents executives from appointing friends to serve long terms to offices without giving the people themselves an opportunity to have anything to say about whom they desire for these offices.

In this primary the democrats of Georgia have the power to choose the secretary of state who is to serve after the general election in November and to complete the unexpired term of the late able secretary of state, Colonel McLendon.

It is all right and customary for executives to pay political debts by appointing friends to serve until the regular election rolls around. But when that election comes then the people have their opportunity and this is the situation that exists in the race for secretary of state today.

Judge Flynt is a man whose career in Georgia politics is well known to every voter. He is an able and outstanding jurist, he has served in both branches of the legislature and has served as president of the state senate and as chairman of the state democratic executive committee. He is thus thoroughly experienced and capable to fill the post of secretary of state and will fill that position with dignity and credit to the state.

In making this race Judge Flynt has well defined policies concerning the administration of this important office, particularly in reference to the distribution of automobile license tags, one of the most important functions of this office. Judge Flynt believes that the license tags can be more economically distributed through the various counties rather than through one central office located in Atlanta. He feels that the automobile owners who are required to pay the license tags are entitled to better service and that they should not be forced to go through the inconvenience of the present system in order to pay the state money for their licenses.

Through an intelligently conceived plan of distribution these tags can be distributed in the counties at much less expense. They can be distributed without any hardship of any kind on the automobile owner and much more prompt service can be rendered. Records can immediately be forwarded to the secretary of state's office and can be kept just as accurately as under the present system.

From all parts of the state we are receiving wonderful reports concerning the receptions that is being given Judge Flynt's candidacy. His record in public life is one that assures the voters of a clean and constructive administration of the affairs of the secretary of state and one which will render the greatest possible service at the least cost to the tax payers."

INSANE DELUSION BLAMED IN KILLING

Waco, Texas, August 4.—(AP)—Authorities today believed Mrs. B. O. Ashworth, 24, was suffering from a temporary insane delusion when she shot and killed Miss Charlie Lawson, 24, yesterday, then committed suicide by drinking acid after attempting to force a draught of the liquid down the throat of her 18-months-old daughter.

The act occurred in the offices of the Waco News-Tribune and Times-Herald, where Miss Lawson was employed as a clerk. Mr. Ashworth is cashier of the papers, and was in an adjoining office at the time. He declined to make any statement.

Miss Lawson died instantly with two of three bullets fired from a tiny pistol lodged near her heart. Mrs. Ashworth died an hour later in a hospital with her husband at her side. The baby's throat and mouth were seared, but physicians said she was not seriously injured.

Entering the office casually, Mrs. Ashworth engaged the clerk in a low-voiced conversation, which no one else heard. Suddenly the girl ran screaming for the protection of a concrete pillar and Mrs. Ashworth fired three bullets at her.

Holding other clerks at bay with the pistol, the woman reached into her handbag for the phial, and attempted to force part of the contents down her baby's throat. She then drained the fatal container and the baby fell from her arms as she sank unconscious to the floor.

Other employees could offer no explanation of the act other than temporary derangement. The couple had been married five years. Ashworth is 30 years old.

FLIERS OVERDUE ON ATLANTIC HOP

plane approached from westward. Encircled ship at distance of half a mile and height of 500 feet. Disappeared northward flying very fast. No signal."

The position given by the first ship was 480 miles northeast of the Azores Islands on the course to Great Britain, not Cape Race, Newfoundland—the plane's landmark on its way to New York. That given by the Amakura which reported the plane as coming from the west, was 240 miles further toward the British Isles and entirely off the Polish plane's course.

If both positions were given correctly there was no logical explanation for the departure of the plane northward—toward nothing but the north pole—unless it was that the plane was tying to reach the main steamer lane between Europe and America.

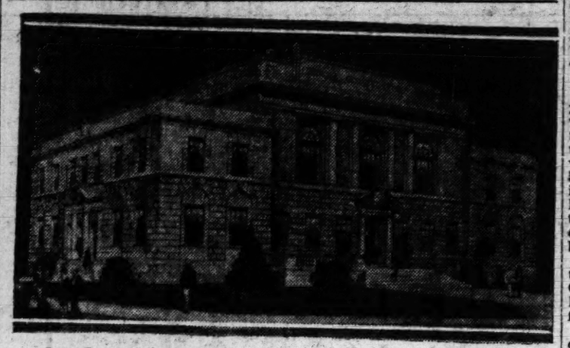

Approach From West.

Its approach from the west to the Amakura might have been merely to enable the ship to sight it and report its position.

The plane itself could not hope to get bearings from the ship, as it carried no radio.

The Polish plane should have crossed the North American coast line in a distance and turned back to show mid-afternoon today, either at Newfoundland or Nova Scotia and be speeding now down the coast toward New York.

It carried fuel for 50 hours—but so did the German trans-Atlantic plane Bremen, that came down on Greenley island, Newfoundland, many hours earlier, with its fuel exhausted after a desperate fight against headwinds that always prevail somewhere on the Atlantic in the path of a westward bound plane.

There was no reason to assume that the plane had lost its course. Kubala is an experienced navigator in addition to being a fine aviator and it was his job to keep the plane on its course.

Last Position.

The last position given was 720 miles from England and 1,120 from France. It was regarded as unlikely that the Poles would have taken the course they apparently did if they were trying to return to Europe, or why, in mid-sea, they turned back unless it was that they had met impossible adverse winds.

In view of the confusing reports regarding the plane, it was possible only to await further word, as had been the case with every other westward flight, only one of which—that of the Bremen—has ever resulted in definite information as to its fate. All others have disappeared at sea.

FRANCE ANXIOUS OVER AIRMEN.

Paris, August 4.—(AP)—Anxiety for the Polish trans-Atlantic fliers increased tonight with reports of storms and violent squalls over the coast of northern France.

Friends of Majors Kubala and Idzikowski refused to believe that the fliers had turned back toward Paris. In any case their retreat would be blocked by adverse weather conditions.

The officials of Le Bourget air field evidently share a widespread view that the positions given by the steamships Aztec and Amakura were inaccurate. The hangars have been closed up and there has been no action to light the revolving beacons.

Turned Back to Ship.

Much speculation has centered around the Amakura's report that the plane had come from the west and turned northward around the vessel. It has been suggested by aviation experts that the fliers saw the ship from themselves, afterward swinging north to resume their course toward Halifax.

Persons most familiar with the plan of the flight and the character of the fliers say that they asked only an even break to the Azores and one chance in five thereafter. The fact that no storm was reported and that the airplane was flying without apparent difficulty has strengthened this argument.

The Marszalek Pilduski was 24 hours out of Le Bourget when it was sighted. The fliers must have had fully half of their fuel left. At the take-off they had a theoretical fuel capacity for 56 hours in the air, but the fliers themselves based their calculations on 48 hours at full speed.

The big four-ton Sesquiplane, which carried its own weight in fuel and crew, had demonstrated in tests that it was able to maintain a speed of 105 to 110 miles an hour. When sighted by the Aztec the plane was flying at only 75 miles an hour. On that basis it is thought that they must have encountered headwinds, although the weather bureau here reported that the wind was partly behind them in the morning.

The decision of the fliers not to take a radio outfit is cited as another illustration of their decision to see the flight through. They considered taking a small radio, but preferred to use the space and weight for carrying gas.

Wait On Conditions.

They had long ago made up their minds to wait until they thought conditions were as near perfect as possible. They were resolved to stake everything on their skill and their powerful airplane.

Aviation experts also regard as unlikely the theory that they lost their way through the failure of their compass. The Marszalek Pilduski carried three compasses, one of them similar to that which Colonel Lindbergh used on his flight to Paris. The other two were French compasses.

The fliers' intimate associates admit that they are puzzled by the reported speed of 75 miles an hour when the plane last was sighted. They say that ther must have been a favorable wind at the start and that much of the flying was done at a speed exceeding 100 miles an hour.

Chances Of Rescue.

Even if the pilots lost their way and came down when their fuel gave out, it is emphasized that they still would have several good chances of rescue. Their reservoirs are equipped with valves which are supposed to discharge all tanks within 40 seconds.

Theoretically this would enable the plane to float although many pilots are inclined to discredit this possibility. They say that the weight of the motor would tip the cockpit in such a way that the craft's floating qualities would be greatly diminished.

In addition, for the purposes of any last emergency, the fliers carried two small rubber boats.

Field Kept Lighted.

As hope diminished today that the fliers would reach America, it was announced that the field here would be kept lighted tonight and watches would be maintained as long as "a reasonable chance" remained that the daring Poles might arrive from Paris.

Mitchel field, because of its flood lighting system, is the usual goal of long-distance fliers.

Opinion was divided among airmen concerning the chances of the Polish team.

"I think they're fools ever to have started," M. M. Merill, manager of operations at Curtiss field, said bluntly.

Merill said that, although the Polish plane has a cruising radius of 4,000 miles with its cruising speed of 80 miles an hour and its supply of gasoline for 50 hours, Atlantic head winds were an almost insurmountable obstacle.

Strong Head Winds.

"Almost always at this time of year," he said, "there are strong head winds for east-to-west fliers across the Atlantic. The average person thinks that a ten-mile-an-hour head wind doesn't mean anything, but in 50 hours that means 500 miles. And if they should run into a 60-mile-an-hour head wind—there are plenty of them at this time of the year—their chances are nil. I hope they get here, but I don't think they will."

On the other hand, Arthur Caperton, one of the crack pilots of the Curtiss flying service, conceded the Poles a good chance. Caperton refused to lose heart."

Lieutenant Colonel Henry C. Pratt, commanding officer at Mitchel field, also said he thought the fliers "ought to get here," basing his opinion on reports of their equipment and careful preparations.

Mitchel field was roped off and private automobiles barred from admission late this afternoon, while 200 soldiers were held ready to take care of the crowds.

At nightfall about 2,500 persons, many of them of Polish descent, were gathered on the edge of the field. The crowd steadily dwindled, however, until only a few were left at midnight.

CITY HALL AWARDS COME UP MONDAY

between Whitehall and Pryor. Present plans in changing the grade of the street to conform to the new grade of the Pryor street approach to the twin viaducts now under construction provide for reduction of sidewalk areas from 10 feet on each side to six feet.

Merchants and property owners have objected strenuously to the proposal on the ground that the six feet on each side of the street will not be adequate to care for pedestrain traffic and therefore would work a hardship on those who are forced to travel afoot. A petition signed by practically all property owners in the affected block will be offered to the bridge committee at a special meeting to be held at 1 o'clock Monday afternoon at the city hall. Results of the hearing probably will be carried to council, at its meeting at 3 o'clock by Mr. Dobbs.

The Perkerson park investigation by a city council committee passed another milestone Saturday morning when the transcribed records of the investigation meeting were turned over to Alderman W. B. Hartsfield, chairman of the committee, by the stenographer.

In speaking of the report to be made to city council, Mr. Hartsfield said Saturday night that the records were lengthy and, possibly, would require several days' study before presentation to a general meeting of council. He added, however, that there was a chance that the report could be gotten in shape to be presented for action at the regular meeting of that body Monday afternoon.

Other routine matters also will be considered at council's meeting.

$1,000,000 WILL FORGERY CHARGED

of a story told by Eldridge Price, wealthy Texas oil man, who claims a part of the property in the estate, authorities said several other persons besides Dr. Fordham would be named defendants in the action. These included the attorney who drew the will, officials said.

Conspiracy Charged.

Price, who recently was arrested in Denver on a charge of defrauding Mrs. F. A. Montgomery, of Memphis, Tenn., of $20,000, said his arrest was part of a conspiracy to keep him from telling what he knew about the will. Dr. Fordham recently was successful in litigation at Hot Springs through which he recovered from Price a large amount of property owned by his former wife.

He charged Price obtained the property through fraud.

An affidavit made by W. Rice Elliott, a farmer living near Littleton, Colo., was presented to the district attorney by attorneys for Price, alleging that during the summer of 1926 Dr. Fordham asked him to sign a will purporting to be that of Leona H. Fordham, who Dr. Fordham said was his sister-in-law.

Elliott set forth that he asked when the will was drawn and when informed it was about a year before, flatly refused to place his signature on the document. Elliott said that Dr. Fordham declared the witnessing of the will was merely a formality and had asked him to sign it as a friendly act.

Witness Admits Fraud.

Mrs. Anna Stokes, one of the witnesses who signed the will, in an affidavit to the district attorney told of signing at the request of the doctor. Authorities said no charges would be filed against her.

Price declared he would go to Hot Springs and attempt to reopen his suit to obtain half of the Sulphur Springs property, which the court had awarded to Dr. Fordham. He said Dr. Fordham and his wife were divorced nearly 20 years ago.

At the physician's home here his present wife said she had heard nothing from her husband concerning the charges.

EMPHATIC DENIAL MADE BY PHYSICIAN.

Hot Springs, Ark., August 4.—(AP) Emphatic denial through his attorneys of charges that he forged his divorced wife's will to become beneficiary to an estate of approximately $1,000,000 was made today by Dr. W. G. Fordham, prominent Denver, Colo., physician and chemist, following his arrest here on a felony warrant telegraphed by the chief of police of Denver. He was released under bond of $1,000 for his appearance next Saturday morning before Municipal Judge V. S. Ledgerwood.

The charge, Dr. Fordham's statement says, appears to have been instigated by Eldridge Price, Texas oil man, who recently lost possession of Potash Sulphur Springs property, six miles from this city, in litigation brought by the physician to set aside the contract of Mrs. Fordham, who died at the state hospital for nervous diseases July 7, 1927, made with Price.

Chancellor Duffey in suit over the property held that Mrs. Fordham was not mentally capable of making a contract and that what Price had offered her in exchange for a half interest in the Potash Sulphur Springs property was not of sufficient consideration.

Dr. Fordham, through his attorneys, denies forging his wife's will and declares he is not guilty of any offense. He stated Mrs. Fordham owned mining interests in California and annually would go there during the summer to look after assessment work on property, always stopping at his house in Denver on her way to and from that state. Although they had been divorced nearly 25 years, they were "most friendly in their regard for each other."

In the summer of 1924, while in Denver, the physician said his wife made her will. Since the divorce, he stated, he has aided Mrs. Fordham financially in sums in excess of the value of the estate.

Eldridge Price, alleged by Fordham to have instituted the action against him, has been defendant in the local courts several times in litigation having to do with his oil and gas lease transactions. Suits against Price are still pending in the local courts.

Extradition proceedings will be started by the Denver authorities immediately, officers here said.

DR. M'CORMACK DIES SUDDENLY

Dr. Robert Frank McCormack, prominent member of the dental profession in Atlanta for the past 17 years, died suddenly Saturday at his home, 509 Angier avenue, N. E., as the result of a heart attack.

Complaining of indigestion shortly before retiring Friday night, Dr. McCormack, who was 53 years old, took the usual household remedies and apparently was relieved.

Going into the room Saturday morning to awaken his father, Dr. R. F. McCormack, Jr., who was associated with his father in his dental practice, found Dr. McCormack just barely breathing. Physicians were summoned, but he died within a few minutes without regaining consciousness.

Mrs. McCormack and their daughter, Lillian who is a member of the staff of the state historian, were en route Saturday from Atlanta to Savannah, where they were to have taken a boat for New York.

Funeral Awaits Arrival.

They were notified by telegraph and will return early Sunday morning. Funeral arrangements will not be made until they arrive.

Born in LaGrange, Dr. McCormack came to Atlanta at the close of the Spanish-American war after serving as sergeant in the second Georgia regiment. On his discharge, he came to Atlanta and entered the employ of Foote & Davies company.

After a few years, he entered the service of the Atlanta Journal and was associated with that newspaper for more than 12 years.

Choosing dentistry as a profession, he took up the study of that science at the Atlanta Southern Dental college, and rapidly became a leader of the profession in Atlanta after his graduation.

Member Dental Body.

He was a member of the Fifth District Dental society and was a member of the executive committee and the mid-winter clinic committee of that body. He also was a member of the Georgia Dental society, the American Dental association and the Psi Omega dental fraternity.

He was a member of Grace Methodist church, Palestine Masonic lodge and the Yaarab temple of the Shrine.

He leaves his widow, a daughter, Miss Lillian McCormack; two sons, Dr. R. F. McCormack, Jr., and Deneen McCormack, a student at Baylor Military academy, at Chattanooga, and a brother, Charles R. McCormack, of Atlanta.

OBREGON'S SLAYER SHOWS REMORSE

so charming that he felt a flash of uncertainty. Then he remembered he was doing what he considered God's work, prayed and fired.

Yes, he loved his wife and children, his father and his mother, Toral said. He reflected fully on the consequences to them of his killing Obregon. But his religious passion was stronger than love for any relatives, stronger than anything in life, therefore he continued steadfast in his determination to kill Obregon.

"I fired," said Toral, "afterward I remembered and have thought much of that smile upon General Obregon's face when he looked at me just before I shot.

"I was aware somewhat vaguely of being taken away and carried to jail. I sat in my cell thinking of God when I became aware that President Calles was there standing before me.

"The president regarded me very gravely and calmly and asked me, 'What induced you to kill Obregon?'

"I replied, 'Senor Presidente, will you promise me that my declaration will not be changed?'

"Calles nodded his head and said 'Yes.'

"Then I told the president: 'I swear by my soul's salvation that I have worked absolutely alone. I considered the death of Obregon necessary that Christ might reign in Mexico.'

"Calles asked me, 'What reign is this?'

"I replied, 'A kingdom over the soul, but absolute, not partial.'"

ONE DEAD, MANY HURT IN ACCIDENTS

noon on Ivy street, between Cain and Marietta streets.

According to police reports, Willie Marble, negro, of 432 Techwood drive, attempted to drive his car past Mrs. Medlock's auto, on the right side, forcing her so far to the left that she crashed into the machine driven by Shope, which was coming towrd her. Cases of reckless driving were made against all three drivers. The child was treated at Grady and allowed to go home.

Struck down late Saturday on Gordon road by an automobile driven by Judge A. L. Etheridge, of municipal court, Comer Fain, 45, of Adamsville, brother of Captain of Police Grover C. Fain, sustained six broken ribs and severe bruises and lacerations.

Crossing Gordon Road.

Mr. Fain, who operates a taxicab from the end of the Walker-West View street car line to Adamsville, was crossing Gordon road toward his own car when he was struck by Judge Etheridge's machine.

No case was made against Judge Etheridge.

A collision with the automobile of Assistant Fire Chief R. H. Pressley, returning from a fire call early Saturday night cost W. D. Heath, of 335 East Hunter street, severe lacerations about the head, and brought charges of reckless driving against him by police.

Police reports said that Heath was driving north on Decatur at Butler when he collided with the fire car. Call Officers John Ector and Bill Holland investigated.

Rains Today, Little Change In Temperature

Local thundershowers, with little change in temperature, are expected today by C. F. von Herrmann, United States meterologist. The week will be mostly fair, with occasional afternoon thundershowers, according to the weather bureau. Temperatures will be moderately warm during the week, Mr. von Herrmann said.

Today's showers are likely to occur during the afternoon, the weather man said. Temperatures today will probably be moderate, he said.

Saturday's mercury hit a high point of 90, with a low for the day of 76.

HOOVER LEADERS IN STATE NAMED

district attorney for the northern district of Georgia; M. O. Dunning, collector of customs, Savannah, and G. F. Flanders, of Swainsboro. Dunning was in Atlanta Saturday conferring with party leaders relative to the campaign.

Plans are being formed for a vigorous two-party presidential campaign in Georgia for the first time since the Roosevelt movement in 1912, developments Saturday showed. Hastings said that the drive would be directed chiefly through Hoover-for-President clubs which are being formed "all over Georgia in a spontaneous movement."

Headquarters to be Named.

Headquarters for the Hoover committee will be chosen the latter part of the week in Atlanta, Hastings said. The committee counts on adding to the normal republican vote the ballots of all democrats who do not wish to vote for Governor Smith, he said. Hastings added that "the Hoover-for-President clubs are enlisting thousands of the best men and women in Georgia, the movement showing beyond question the deep resentment against the sale of the national democratic nomination and organization to Tammany Hall at Houston."

Georgia has not been out of the democratic column since reconstruction days. Cox, the democratic nominee, received 107,162 votes to 43,720 for Harding in 1920; and in 1924, Davis was given 123,200 to 30,300 for Coolidge.

Meanwhile, plans were being laid by rival factions of the state central committee for meetings at Atlanta and Macon next Saturday in a contest for control of the committee. Roscoe Pickett, of Jasper, whom Ben J. Davis, negro, secretary of the committee, claims to have ousted from the chairmanship, has called a meeting for Macon, while G. F. Flanders, of Swainsboro, who claims the chairmanship of the committee as successor to Pickett, has called a session for Atlanta.

Considerable speculation has been caused by the announcement Thursday night by Louis H. Crawford, United States marshal, that republican leaders in Washington had appointed a campaign committee in Georgia composed of H. P. Meikleham, of Lindale, chairman, a neutral in the central committee fight; Crawford and T. N. Hendricks, of Edison, of the Pickett faction, and J. T. Rose and Clint W. Hager, of the Flanders faction.

Chairmanship Accepted.

On the heels of Crawford's announcement, Hastings announced Friday that he had accepted the chairmanship of the campaign committee and was proceeding with the organization of the Hoover clubs.

Crawford announced Thursday night that a meeting of the committee headed by Meikleham had been called for Friday morning. Reports were that Meikleham, Crawford and Hendricks did meet Friday, and that Rose and Hager did not meet with the others.

Pickett said over the telephone from Jasper that he had not been notified of the appointment of a Hoover campaign committee for Georgia, and that appointment of such a committee would not change his plans for a meeting of the central committee at Macon next Saturday. In making his announcement Crawford indicated that the committee, composed of two men from both factions and a neutral member, would endeavor to iron out differences in the party in Georgia.

FUNERAL SERVICES FOR HOMER FORD ARE HELD AT ROME

Rome, Ga., August 4.—(Special.) News of the death of Homer Ford, former Roman, who died suddenly at his home in Birmingham, Ala., Thursday afternoon at 5:30 o'clock, was the cause of much sorrow to his many friends here.

Mr. Ford, son of the late J. G. Ford, was born in Rome December 4, 1886, and resided here until a few years ago when he moved to Birmingham to live. Possessing many fine traits of character his death will be a great loss to all who knew him.

He is survived by his wife and two children, Homer Ford, Jr., and Mary Elizabeth Ford; his mother, Mrs. S. E. Ford, of Rome; two brothers, A. N. Ford, of Rome, and Tom Ford, of New York city, and one sister, Mrs. S. F. Brawner, of Spartanburg, S. C.

The body arrived over the Southern Friday afternoon at 4:30 o'clock and was taken immediately to Myrtle Hill cemetery for burial. The services at the cemetery were conducted by the Rev. O. E. Rutland.

STANLEY INDORSES MAIL LINE PLAN

Movement of southern scope to obtain a mail contract for the American Palmetto line, operating between European ports and Savannah, Jacksonville and Charleston has been given unqualified indorsement of Hal. M. Stanley, Georgia commissioner of commerce and labor.

Commenting on the matter, Mr. Stanley said:

"I have been very much interested in what the newspapers have had to say in the last few days about the American Palmetto line. Most of our people in the interior territory do not come in close enough contact with ocean shipping to perhaps fully appreciate how important it is to the development of the export trade in our section for us to have regular, dependable and rapid ocean service to carry our goods directly to the foreign markets. Congress recognized this in passing the various shipping acts and creating the shipping board, and the shipping board recognizes the importance of the south Atlantic export trade in establishing the Palmetto line as one of the important services that must be maintained under any and all conditions.

"I am not intimately familiar with the various phases of the shipping legislation, but, as I understand it, the Palmetto line can be taken out of the experimental class and put on a solid business basis for making such a contract, but surely there is enough mail business originating in a territory that includes practically all of the southeastern states, to assure the Palmetto line enough mail business to warrant a contract. I am sure, too, that our people, once they realize what it would mean to them to have a mail service operating directly from their own ports, would be glad to have their mail, and certainly their parcel post, go forward by Palmetto line ships.

"Mail service means faster service and regular schedules. It would probably grow and develop into a passenger service, and the time is not far off, in my opinion, when there will be sufficient demand for passenger accommodations out of the south Atlantic to warrant the establishment of passenger service.

"The fruit and vegetable trade in our section is constantly seeking new outlets for their products so as to avoid overloading the domestic markets during the heights of the harvesting period, and the development of the foreign markets would go a long way towards solving this difficult problem. Perishable goods, however, require refrigeration and fast service. If the Palmetto line had a mail contract, it could operate a faster service, and, by providing refrigerated space, assist our fruit and truck growers in a way that would be of great benefit to them."

COL. EB WILLIAMS WILL TAKE STUMP IN SMITH'S BEHALF

Invitation of G. R. Van Namee, New York campaign manager for Governor Alfred E. Smith, to speak for the democratic nominee under direction of the New York speakers' bureau has been accepted by Colonel Eb T. Williams, of Atlanta, it was learned Saturday.

Colonel Williams will speak through the east in October until the close of the campaign.

In 1908 Colonel Williams campaigned over seven states in the east for W. J. Bryan, the nominee, and a part of the time Colonel Williams spoke with Mr. Bryan.

Later he spoke for President Wilson in New York and several other states on invitation of the chairman of the speakers' bureau. At the close of the campaign he received a letter from President Wilson, as leader of the party, thanking him for the excellent and effective assistance he had rendered to democracy.

Shell - Scarred Lamp Post

:: Alabama-Whitehmall Landmark Has Its Own Story ::

Relic of Atlanta War Days

BY MARY DAVIS.

Sixty-three years ago a shell from a union battery screamed its course into the city of Atlant, landed with a crash at the corner of Whitehall and Alabama streets, exploded and fatally wounded a citizen. A part of the detonated shell struck a lamp post on the northeast corner, tore the standard down and knocked off its top.

For many years this lamp post, minus its top and light and showing scars from the shell, has stood in front of the Atlanta and Lowry National bank, in the spot on which it was located during the battle of Atlanta. Then, one morning, Atlantans accustomed to passing the spot every day missed this relic of war times. It had disappeared.

The march of progress called for new viaducts. The lamp post bowed to the call and was uprooted from its place of honor. But not for long, for as soon as the construction work is finished it will be returned to its rightful place.

Has Own Story.

During the years, many people have passed this lamp post, knowing that it had stood during the war but not realizing that it had a story all its own.

On October 26, 1919, the United Daughters of the Confederacy, who always have been interested in marking the historic spots of Atlanta, placed a bronze tablet on the post and dedicated it to the memory of General A. J. West, pioneer of Atlanta and Confederate veteran. The tablet reads: "Erected under the auspices of the Old Guard and the Atlanta chapter of the Daughters of the Confederacy, A. D. 1919, in memory of Andrew J. West, captain, C. S. A., Gen. U. C. V. The damage at the base of this lamp post was caused by a shell during the war between the states at the battle of Atlanta, July 22, 1864."

During the intense artillery duel between ten Confederate and eleven federal batteries, the lamp post was struck by a union shell, which completely shattered the base. A fragment of this shell flew in the direction of several Atlanta citizens who were standing near by. Sol Luckie, a well known barber, was hit and knocked down. Tom Crussell and several others took him to the medical college, where Dr. D'Alvigny amputated his leg. Mr. Luckie failed to recover from the shock, however, and died a few hours later.

Aged Man Struck.

E. C. Murphey, who then was 86 years old, was struck by another bit of the shell but escaped serious injury.

The post, of course, was knocked down, and for a time was kept in the city hall as a memento of the fierce struggle for the possession of Atlanta. In 1880, through a resolution passed in the city council, the post was replaced in the original location.

This lamp post which brings up so many vivid reminiscences to the minds of Atlanta's oldest citizens, will stand in the old place as long as there are Daughters of the Confederacy and other patriotic Georgians to cherish the historic places of the state.

BODIES OF TWO MISSING YOUTHS FOUND BY RIVER

Charleston, W. Va., August 4.—(AP) The bodies of two 18-year-old boys, Robert Brown and Buster Young, missing since they went fishing last night, were found today on the bank of the Kanawha river, ten miles below Nitro. Police believe they came in contact with a high tension wire which crosses the river at the spot.

Hot Water Bottle New Rum Container, Dry Agents Report

A brand-new idea in camouflaging whisky was introduced in evidence before United States Commissioner E. S. Griffith Saturday, when Z. Ligon, barber, of 917 Marietta street, was charged with possessing half a gallon of whisky in a hot water bottle, and a pint in the regulation glass bottle.

Ligon was held for the federal grand jury under $100 bond in spite of his denial of ownership of the whisky. The pint bottle was found in a water cooler, officers said.

J. E. Owens, of 310 Central avenue, admitting ownership of 32 bottles of home brew found in his ice box, was held under $100 bond. Owens told Judge Griffith that he made the home brew himself, and had just finished bottling it when the officers arrived.

Exie Hardy, negress, of 580 Bedford place, got into trouble because she interferred with shurch services of a neighboring negro congregation, Judge Griffith was told. Officers said that they had a complaint that Exie was selling liquor to the brethren on their way to church, and that some of the congregation had been turning up drunk at service. Exie was held for $100 bond on charges of possessing half a gallon of whisky.

NEW YORK PROPOSES WORLD FAIR IN 1932

New York, August 4.—(AP)—An organization to promote plans for a world's fair here in 1932 in commemoration of the 200th anniversary of the birth of George Washington has been formed.

Representatives of virtually every important mercantile organization in the city met and appointed a committee to wait upon Mayor Walker to urge the advisability of city sponsorship of the affair.

Grover Whalen is chairman of the temporary organization.

LAWYER IS FREED IN KIDNAPING CASE

Charlotte, N. C., August 4.—(AP) Thomas P. Jimison, local attorney, was on his way home tonight after his release from the Schuylkill county jail at Pottsville, Pa., yesterday on habeas corpus proceedings. He has been held since Monday with Mrs. Frederick Byrne, of Washington, also released, on a charge of conspiracy in connection with the alleged kidnaping of Henry Grant III by his father, Henry Grant, Jr., of this city.

Judge Hicks granted the writ of habeas corpus releasing the pair when he ruled that it was not illegal for a father to take his own child and that the mere removing of the child from the custody of the mother did not constitute a case of kidnaping. At the same time the charges of conspiracy were nol-prossed. Grant and his wife have not been divorced or legally separated, he told reporters here.

Brother Attorneys Aid.

Four Charlotte attorneys made a 61-hour trip by automobile to Pottsville to aid their fellow barrister. With the aid of attorneys there they succeeded in obtaining the release and having the court nol-pros the case.

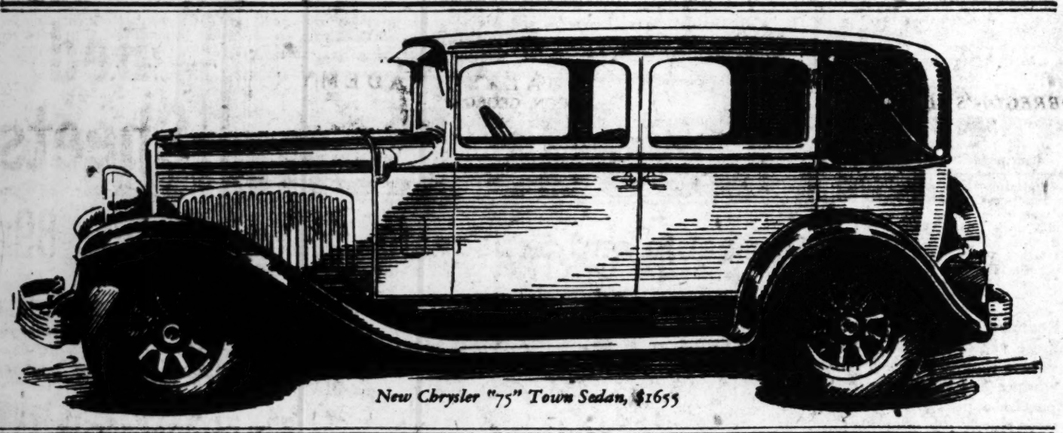

It was explained after the hearing that the mother now would have to institute habeas corpus proceedings here if she wished to obtain possession of the child. She was present in the visitors section at the hearing, but took no part in it.

Jimison and Mrs. Byrne, a sister of Grant, went to a Port Carbon, a village some few miles from Pottsville, with Grant who planned to institute proceedings to secur possession of the child. Jimison was to be his attorney and Mrs. Byrne a witness.

After getting permission from his wife to take their child for a walk, Grant said he decided to take the child and bring him here. An attempt to halt the father failed but Jimison and Mrs. Byrne were arrested and returned to Pottsville.

Agriculture Must Work Out Its Own Salvation, Says Political Economist

Majority Power Is Permanently in Hands of Industry and of Commerce, Declares Dr. Fay.

Williamstown, Mass., August 4.—(AP)—Agriculture must look to itself for its salvation or it will become a lame dog whining for special aid, Dr. C. R. Fay, professor of political economy at the University of Toronto, declared today in an address before members of the institute of politics.

One reason for this, he said, is that majority power is permanently in the hands of industry and commerce. Another is the impossibility for farmers to maintain a standard of life comparable with that of the towns unless their production per man is constantly growing. This means replacement of man power by machine power wherever possible.

Agriculture, he said, is not one, but many industries, each having its own marketing problems demanding solution, whereas government can only legislate for the mass. A measure of farm relief which aids one section, he pointed out, may be of negligible interest to another, or it may be directly hostile to the interests of another, if, for example, its purpose is to maintain the price of certain products which a second agricultural section uses as its raw material.

The important needs of agriculture, he said, are not that it should set the pace to the rest of the nation, nor even that its members should increase in wealth as fast as the ranks of industry and commerce, but rather that as a group of industries it should attain comparative economic stability, that the individual standard of living should rise absolutely, and that the group consciousness of agriculture should achieve content. This latter, he said, probably was the greatest need of all and could be best attained through cooperation.

At another round table discussion Professor Charles W. Hackett, of the University of Texas, speaking of recent inter-American relations and problems said one of the greatest financial problems before Mexico at the present time was that of liquidating her agrarian bonds, some of which are held by American citizens, issued when Mexico appropriated large tracts of land some ten years ago in pursuance of her agrarian policy.

Action taken by the Mexican government to enforce the constitutional provision designed to effect educational and religious reforms, Professor Hackett said, has not been considered by the United States government as subject for diplomatic protest. Nevertheless, because of the action of the Mexican government in enforcing this provision, many individuals and some organizations in the United States have become very antagonistic toward Mexico and in some cases have even demanded intervention by the United States in Mexico.

ITALY AIDS FARMERS WOUNDED IN BATTLE

Rome, August 4.—(AP)—Loans totalling 20,000,000 lire—well over $1,000,000—will soon be available to Italian farmers seriously wounded in the world war. The funds will enable them to buy land, farm implements, and the like. The loans, granted at low interest rates, will run 25 years.

INJURIES MAY BAR STONE FROM STAGE

New London, Conn., August 4.—(AP)—Fred Stone today had only an even chance of returning to the stage whose boards he had trod for a quarter of a century as a vaudeville and musical comedy star.

Both legs, his right thigh, left wrist and lower jaw fractured and with sundry other dislocations and bruises he was "doing nicely" in Lawrence and Memorial hospital where he was taken after the airplane in which he was making a solo flight crashed near Trumbull flying field yesterday.

The doctors said only time would tell whether his broken bones would knit sufficiently for him to resume his antics on the stage. They said it might be two months and it might be a year before he could walk again. He is 55 years old.

Telegrams from friends all over the country were pouring into the hospital today, attesting to the affection in which he was held by members of his profession. Rex Beach, the author, came here from New York to be at the bedside of his friend. Mrs. Stone and one daughter, were with him.

Mr. Stone, an aviation enthusiast, was making one of his first flights alone when the motor failed and the plane nosed down into the ground. He had been taking flying lessons for some time and had hoped to qualify soon for a pilot's license. He already had erected a hangar and leveled off a landing field on his estate near Lyme, Conn.

U. S. WILL BEGIN EFFICIENCY SURVEY OF ALL TRAFFIC

Washington, August 4.—(AP)—The transportation division, department of commerce, is about to begin a study of the relation of traffic departments to efficient conduct of modern business. Facts and figures will be collected on the movement of merchandise by railway, airway, waterway and highway in an effort to determine the place of industrial traffic management as a factor for the elimination of waste in distribution.

LOWNDES COUNTY SHIPS FIRST SWEET POTATOES OF 1928

Valdosta, Ga., August 4.—The first carload of 1928 sweet potatoes was shipped from Valdosta during the week.

The cargo was carefully graded according to the standards and the potatoes were regarded as unusually fine ones for the first "digging" of the season. A good price is expected to be realized by the shipper.

TROOPS REMOVED FROM STRIKE AREA

New Bedford, Mass., August 4.—(AP)—Military forces which have been held in reserve here for the past month, under municipal precipe were released tonight by Mayor Charles S. Ashley when the closing of the sixteenth week of the textile strike was attended by unusual inactivity.

Commenting on his order to Captain Charles F. Perry, Jr., commander of Battery D, 101st Field artillery, national guard, the unit on duty, Mayor Ashley said: "The time or occasion for the services of the military has expired."

The guardsmen were pressed into active duty here only once, last Monday night, when a crowd of about 10,000 persons threatened to storm police headquarters and release 250 strikers who had been arrested for rioting. They dispersed the crowd with fixed bayonets.

For the second time in as many weeks a threatened parade of strikers in face of police opposiiton was postponed today. Elaborate preparations had been made to combat any attempted demonstration and police of Boston and several other cities awaited the call that would bring them here. Although the strikers affiliated with the textile mill committee, sponsors of the parade, announced that contemplated legal steps to compel issuance of a parade permit caused the postponement, it was apparent that commitment of many leaders to the house of correction this week had done much to cripple the parade plans.

Not only were many of the textile committee leaders, the so-called radicals, in jail, but police caused further hindrance in the parade proceedings when they arrested Jack Rubenstein, of New York, on a warrant issued by the Fall River authorities. Rubenstein had been a guiding figure in the parade activities and his arrest was followed almost immediately by announcement of the parade postponement.

120,000 PERSONS SUFFER BY FLOOD

Washington, August 4.—(AP)—The Red Cross reported today that 120,000 persons have been affected by floods in the Mississippi valley this year and that one-half as many counties have been inundated as during the spectacular disaster a year ago.

In describing the situation, the relief organization said the only reason why public attention has not been directed toward conditions this year is because they lack the dramatic features of the 1927 rise.

The Red Cross based its announcement on reports from Robert E. Bondy, manager of the eastern area for the organization who has just returned from an inspection trip into the valley.

Relief Workers Busy.

Twenty-eight relief workers have been stationed in Arkansas, Missouri and Louisiana where tributaries have been flooded since May. Mr. Bondy reported that there has been no loss of life because the water rose slowly, enabling all to reach safety. Another staff of relief workers is on duty at points in Illinois, Indiana, Kentucky, West Virginia, where the Big Sandy, Licking and other rivers have been in flood.

"The economic losses, of these families who have been driven from their homes by the rising waters this year have been tremendous," Bondy reported.

"Red Cross workers, met in St. Louis and Jonesboro, Arkansas for conference, and there they told me that in some of the counties the situation is such as to leave the people with difficult future prospects. Crop failures now have confronted them for the past four or five years. Merchants are hard pressed and credit conditions are not good—and in some cases the larger planters fear they will have to abandon their plantations.

Hope For Improvement.

"It is hoped that employment conditions will improve by fall, thus enabling the farmers to carry on through the winter months without outside assistance. Road and levee work and timber work are expected to supplant the cotton picking and corn chopping which now affords employment to some.

"Red Cross chapters in these communities are preparing to conduct active roll calls for membership in the fall, so that necessary funds will be on hand in case the economic situation does not improve, and help has to be expected through the winter season."

JAPAN WILL RECRUIT MANCHURIAN WORKERS

Williamston, Mass., August 4.—(AP) Japan, turning her eyes from lands across the Pacific, now looks to Manchuria for help in her unemployment problem, Professor R. D. McKenzie, of the University of Washington, today told a conference at the institute of politics.

"Deeply concerned a few years ago over the restriction of emigration to California," he said, "Japan now realizes that emigration to any country will not solve her unemployment problem. In Manchuria—field for her industrial development, she must maintain her present status, even though she has no wish to annex that territory.

An important part of Japan's population problem, he said, is psychological—a matter of national status and dignity, and Japanese experts agree that emigration is not the solution, since her annual population increase is placed at 700,000, and all the emigrants of the last 75 years do not number that many.

"Commercial relations with the United States have become so important to Japan," he continued, "that there is no desire now to endanger those connections by raising questions of restriction."

HECKSCHER ENDS ATTEMPT TO FIND OIL IN FLORIDA

Bartow, Fla., August 4.—(AP)—Operations at the Florida Pioneer Oil Well at Kissingen, started a year ago by August Heckscher, New York capitalist, in an effort to find if there was oil in Florida, ceased today after the expenditure of $100,000 in the project.

Claude F. Palmer, geologist and manager for Heckscher, announced that the well had been drilled to a depth of 4,530 feet and that while the sands were found rich in mineral matter conducive to oil formation, they were barren of necessary organic matter and the well, therefore, was considered a failure. The casing is being pulled up and the equipment dismantled.

A Statement to the Public

For the purpose of selecting a name which itself signifies the line, our firm name is changed to American Surgical Supplies, Inc.

Successors to Perryman-Burson Co.

which has been operating as a wholesale and retail dealer in hospital, physicians', surgical, sick room, invalid supplies, etc., for sixteen years in Atlanta, Georgia.

No change in ownership or personnel has transpired.

This firm has always specialized in fitting trusses, abdominal supporters, elastic stockings, shoulder braces, body braces, leg braces and artificial limbs.

Three years ago Mr. V. E. Perryman sold his half interest to J. C. Burson, owner of the other half.

Then, too, one month later, this firm was extremely fortunate in securing the exclusive Atlanta sales right to the Uncle Sam Truss, which alone closes the internal abdominal ring and holds the rupture more securely, with less pressure, and with more comfort.

Some of our exclusive products in the well-known "Perburco" line are:

Perburco Abdominal Supporters
Perburco Elastic Stockings
Perburco Surgical Instruments
Perburco Clinical Thermometers
Perburco Rubber Catheters, etc.
Perburco Special Mouth Wash
Perburco Aseptoline Mouth Wash
Perburco Three Cresols (Antiseptic Fluid)
Perburco Sanitary Fluid

We are exclusive Southern dealers for the famous Zambeletti Iron & Arsenic ampules; Atlanta preferred dealers for Abbott's Laboratory Ampules and Intravenous Products Company of America ampules.

J. C. Burson, expert fitter of trusses, abdominal supporters, elastic stockings, arch props and Burns' Cuboids, is a public benefactor in rendering skillful service and expert knowledge acquired from more than twenty years' experience.

O. A. Spruell, also a proficient fitter, with ten years' experience, is one of our experts to serve the public.

Spalding County Voters Pledge Faith to Party And Adopt Model Platform

Supremacy of White Race, Religious Tolerance and Law Enforcement Are Indorsed by Citizens.

Griffin, Ga., August 4.—(AP)—Organization of a "Loyal Democratic League" for Spalding county was effected here last night at a meeting in the county courthouse which was addressed by Colonel Lucien P. Goodrich, local banker, attorney and business leader, in advocacy of the presidential candidacy of Governor Al Smith.

Frank Gossett, a traveling salesman, was elected president; Carson Crowley, member of the county board of registrars, vice president and R. E. Arnold, banker, secretary-treasurer. They were authorized to select an executive committee made up of residents of the county with a view of giving Governor Smith a majority in the county.

Colonel Goodrich paid Governor Smith a tribute for his "honesty, efficiency and engaging personality," and predicted that party members who are "led astray by republican propaganda" would return to the fold before the November election.

Adopt Platform.

A clear-cut, democratic platform was adopted by the county organization effected. It stands out unequivocably for religious tolerance, enforcement of constitutional laws and the supremacy of the white race. The platform, as adopted, follows:

"1.—The supremacy of the white people of the state, and their right and duty to control its policies.

"2.—The right of every man to worship God according to the dictates of his own conscience.

"3.—A strict construction of the constitution, in order to avoid the dangers of centralization and imperialism.

"4.—A strict and impartial enforcement of all laws, until the same are amended or repealed by the representatives of the people in congress assembled.

"5.—An honest and economical administration of the government as exemplified in the administrations of Woodrow Wilson and Grover Cleveland.

"6.—An adjustment of the tariff, which will give equal protection to all, and special privileges to none.

"7.—Such fair and reasonable legislation as will give to our farmers the same protection and advantages that the manufacturing and shipping interests of the country have been demanding and receiving at the hands of the government.

And whereas, the fundamental principles and practices of the republican party are, and have always been—

"1.—The political and social equality of the negro, encouraging and foistering upon the people of this state such men as Lincoln, Johnson, Ben Davis, and others of their like, as representatives of Georgia in the national councils of the party.

"2.—A loose interpretation of the constitution, which leads to lax enforcement, and loose morals.

"3.—A tariff which favors one section of the country, and one class of industries at the expense, and to the detriment of the other.

"4.—A saturnalia of graft and corruption, as exemplified in the careers of Daugherty, Fall, and Sinclair, and in the disgraceful sale of public offices and patronage, for which the administrations of Harding and Coolidge will be chiefly remembered.

"5.—The denial to the agricultural interests of the country of the equal protection of the laws, and in refusing to hear their protests when presented by petition on the floor of their convention at Kansas City.

"And believing that these fundamentals and vital differences in the two great political parties of the country are of paramount importance, there being no difference between the platform of the parties upon the question of prohibition.

"We pledge ourselves to vote the straight democratic ticket in both state and national elections."

Diplomatic Change Made.

Washington, August 4.—(AP)—Foreign service changes announced today included transfer of Herschel V. Johnson, of Charlotte, N. C., from first secretary at Mexico City to first secretary Teguigalps, Honduras; Frederick P. Hibbard, of Denison, Texas, from second secretary, Mexico City, to second secretary San Salvador.

TO DEDICATE GRIFFIN SALVATION ARMY SITE

Griffin, Ga., August 4.—An address by Governor L. G. Hardman will feature ceremonies here Sunday at which Commissioner William A. McIntyre and Colonel Alfred A. Chandler, southern territorial executives of the Salvation army, will dedicate the new Salvation army community center.

Salvation army officers will occupy the pulpits at three Griffin churches during the 11 o'clock morning services, Commissioner McIntyre at the Presbyterian church with the territorial staff band, Colonel Chandler at the Christian church and Colonel G. W. Peacock, territorial field secretary at Hanleighter Methodist church. Commissioner McIntyre will preach again at 7:30 o'clock at the First Methodist church.

Dedication ceremonies at the community center will be opened with prayer by Colonel Chandler at 3 o'clock. Staff Captain J. R. Lebby, commander of the Georgia division of the Salvation army, will present J. W. Gresham, chairman of the Griffin advisory board of the army who will introduce Commissioner McIntyre.

Judge W. H. Beck will speak for the city of Griffin and Rev. Malcolm Williamson will speak for the Griffin Ministerial association, after which Commissioner McIntyre will introduce Governor Hardman. Rev. O. K. Cull will make the dedicatory prayer.

The southern territorial staff band will play at the ceremonies.

The Griffin community center is one of the most complete Salvation army plants in Georgia, including an auditorium for religious services, Sunday school room, gymnasium, with shower baths, playground for children, manual training shops for boys an officers quarters.

FLORIDA UNIVERSITY ASKS ARTILLERY UNIT

Jacksonville, Fla., August 4.—(AP)—Application will be made to the war department for the establishment of an artillery unit at the University of Florida, it was announced here today following a special meeting of the state board of control.

A committee from Gainesville, location of the university, will apply to Major General R. P. Davis, of Atlanta, commander of the fourth corps area, for a hearing on Tuesday August 7, at which time Florida's application will be formally entered.

A number of schools in the south are understood to be bidding for the unit, which will include a battery of 75 millimeter guns, including guns, caissons, horses, range finding and signal equipment; one 175 milimeter gun, complete with gun, tractor, reconnaissance car, range finding and signal equipment, and a detachment of 23 enlisted men.

At least three, and probably four additional commissioned officers of the army will accompany the unit. The value of the equipment to be furnished, it is understood, will run between $1,000,000 and $1,250,000, and the upkeep of the unit will run about $5,000 a month.

Sixty students can take advanced training with the unit, it was said, and will be compensated by the war department at a rate of $12.50 a month.

A committee of Gainesville citizens and a representative of the state chamber of commerce are cooperating with the board of control in an effort to secure the unit.

SCHOOL SYSTEM OF M'RAE DISTRICT ACQUIRES COLLEGE

McRae, Ga., August 4.—S. P. Aiken, secretary of the board of education of the McRae-Helena schools, today announced that the McRae-Helena school system had purchased the entire plant of the South Georgia college in McRae. The South Georgia college, a junior institution, was organized nearly 40 years ago, and during that time did a magnificent work in the education of the young people of this section. By order of the annual conference, which met in Valdosta last November, the college was discontinued, and the plant ordered sold.

It was further announced that the board paid for the plant the amount of the indebtedness of the college, thus clearing the South Georgia conference of any further obligations. This announcement will be of special interest to all the members and officers of the conference, as the matter was discussed at length at the last two sessions of the conference.

Bonds were voted some weeks back by the McRae-Helena school district for $65,000, which will pay the purchase price of the buildings and remodel them, thus making one of the best school plants in the entire state. The campus and location of the plant make it an ideal purchase for the local school board.

BUTTON BEARING NAME OF HOOVER CHOSEN BY G. O. P.

Wasington, August 4.—(AP)—Signs of an active campaign are seen by the republican national committee in the demands for the time-honored campaign buttons, the pictures of candidates and the volunteer offerings of slogans, poems and songs.

A button bearing the single word "Hoover" has been adopted as the official lapel tag and several million have been ordered. In response to numerous requests lithographic pictures of Herbert Hoover and Senator Curtis have been ordered, running into many millions. Demand for pictures was reported as unprecedented.

Quantities of automobile tags and stickers announcing for the republican candidate are in the making. As for campaign songs, slogans and poems, the committee reports plenty of offerings but no selections.

BOND COMMISSION VACANCY IS FILLED BY ARTHUR BROOKE

Arthur Brooke, president of the Southeastern Fair association and prominent in civic and fraternal circles of the city, Saturday was named a member of the Atlanta bond commission from the ninth ward to succeed J. Lawrence McCord, who resigned his position Friday. Mayor I. N. Ragsdale tendered the offer and Mr. Brooke accepted.

PHYSICAL TESTS SET FOR PUPILS

All pupils not previously enrolled must stand physical examinations before entering Fulton county schools, which open September 7, it was announced Saturday by Jere A. Wells, county school superintendent.

Beginning Monday, Dr. L. H. Goldsmith, county school physician, will examine new entrants to determine if they are physically fit and properly vaccinated, as required by law.

During August Dr. Goldsmith will conduct the examinations at county schools according to the following schedule:

Olive, 11 o'clock; 17, Morgan Falls, 9 o'clock; 17, Liberty Hill, 11 o'clock; 20, Marion Smith, 9 o'clock; 21, Hapeville, 9 o'clock; 22, E. P. Howell, 9 o'clock; 23, Cascade, 9 o'clock; 24, Mt. Vernon, 9 o'clock; 27, East Point, Central school, 9 o'clock (for all the town); 28, College Park High School building, 9 o'clock (for all the town); 29, R. L. Hope, 9 o'clock; 30, Lakewood Heights, 9 o'clock; 31, Rosserville, 9 o'clock; 31, Mayson, 11 o'clock.

GOOD NIGHT PASSED BY SIR CHAMBERLAIN

London, August 4.—(AP)—Sir J. Austen Chamberlain, secretary of state for foreign affairs, passed a good night. He is suffering from a mild attack of bronchial pneumonia. While his friends have no fear of the outcome, they do not believe he will be in sufficiently good health to permit him to take part in the signing of the Kellogg pact in Paris late this month.

High School Boy Planning Flight Across America

Curtiss Field, Long Island, August 4.—(United News.)—Richard James, 17, Flushing High school student, will attempt to fly across the continent from San Francisco to New York before school opens in September, he announced today, in an effort to win a $1,000 prize offered for the first boy or girl to make the hop.

James has flown solo 20 hours. He will leave Tuesday to fly to Wichita Kansas to accept delivery of a new biplane. From there, accompanied by Oliver Young, a free lance pilot, the boy will go to San Francisco to start the flight.

The $1,000 prize is offered by the American Society for the Promotion of Aviation, James' father, a chemist, is backing him.

NEWSPRINT RATES TO BE CONSIDERED

Chattanooga, Tenn., August 4.—(AP) Nineteen complaints to the Interstate Commerce commission, involving freight rates on newsprint paper from manufacturers in New England, Canada, Wisconsin, Minnesota and Michigan, covered in official classification territory to cities in the south, east of the Mississippi river, have been consolidated and will be heard at one time, according to a notice from the commission received today by Cranston Williams, secretary-manager of the Southern Newspaper Publishers' association with headquarters here.

The commission has set September 12 for a conference in Washington by Chairman Campbell with representatives of state commissions, shippers and carriers to decide upon plans for hearings and consideration of the situation.

PAST PRESIDENTS SPONSOR TRAFFIC PROGRAM MONDAY

The August luncheon meeting of the Traffic Club of Atlanta will be held at the Atlanta Athletic club at 12:30 o'clock Monday afternoon. The program for the event will be sponsored by four past presidents of the organization, G. E. Boulineau, J. W. White, J. A. Streyer and T. B. Curtis, in honor of whom the day will be known as "Past Presidents' Day."

Reservations for the affair may be made by telephone with the secretary, F. B. Porter.

It is also announced through the August issue of the club's publication, "The Traffic Club Broadcast"—that the annual summer outing of the club will be held at East Lake Country club on Friday, August 24.

LATH plus INSULATION

in new form from tough cane fibre that gives permanent beauty to plastered walls

STOPS SCORCHING RAYS OF SUMMER SUN

SOMETHING NEW! Celotex Lath, a plaster base that stops extreme heat, cold and dampness.

That reduces heat leakage and lowers fuel bills.

That keeps plastered walls smooth and unbroken.

That gives you a quieter, more restful atmosphere wherever you live or work.

In summer, Celotex Lath keeps your home cool and enjoyable. During winter it shuts out freezing cold. And at all times of the year it protects you from penetrating dampness.

Moreover Celotex Lath cuts down your winter fuel bill by keeping heat where you want it—inside walls and ceilings.

Celotex Lath provides these remarkable advantages because it is made from long tough fibres of cane which contain millions of tiny sealed air cells—just what is needed for efficient insulation!

This new lath is 18 inches wide and 48 inches long—convenient to handle and ideal for lining attics, closets and other restricted areas.

An outstanding feature of Celotex Lath is its beveled ship-lap edge. The bevel insures extra plaster at the joints, a protection against cracking. The ship-lap joints bring lath edges together, giving continuous surface that eliminates open joints, the cause of disfiguring lath marks.

These construction features enable you to decorate plastered surfaces with permanent effect.

Celotex already is well known everywhere, due to the widespread use of Celotex Standard Building Board for sheathing; for lining basements, garages, attics, roofs and for many other purposes.

Think what Celotex offers you in building economy, fuel saving, quieter rooms, more healthful homes and greater living comfort throughout the year!

All reliable lumber dealers can supply Celotex Building Board and Celotex Lath. Progressive builders and contractors have used these products in more than 250,000 homes.

POLICE ACCUSED IN POLL ATTACKS

Memphis, Tenn., August 4.—(AP)—Five warrants, four charging assault and battery and the fifth grand larceny, were sworn out today by five reporters of the Commercial Appeal and Memphis Evening Appeal as the result of alleged manhandling at the polls in Thursday's primary.

One of the assault and battery warrants was against William E. Gerber, assistant attorney general of Shelby county. Three of the other warrants named policemen.

Billy Sisson, reporter for the Evening Appeal, swore out the warrant against Gerber. Sisson said he was attacked by the assistant attorney general at a polling place.

Police Sergeant Accused.

Police Sergeant W. D. Stallings was charged with grand larceny in a warrant sworn out by Null Adams, Evening Appeal reporter. Adams said he was searched repeatedly by officers primary day and finally was arrested and placed in jail on a charge of threatened breach of the peace. His camera, he said, was taken from his car by officers. It was returned to him last night.

William King and W. J. Mathis, both policemen, and E. A. Laughter were the others named in assault and battery warrants.

The paper had assigned reporters to various polling places to watch the voting and take pictures of any negroes participating in the democratic primary. Cameras of several of the reporters were smashed.

Camera Smashed.

Key Hart, reporter for the Commercial Appeal, swore out the warrant against King charging him with assault and battery. King was one of three officers who signed the arrest ticket when Hart was arrested. The ticket bore the notation, "we smashed his camera," and a photographic reproduction of it was printed in the Commercial Appeal.

Chester B. Stroughter, Commercial Appeal reporter swore out the warrant against Mathis. Stroughter said he was cursed at a polling place, his camera and films taken from him and his notes torn up.

At preliminary hearings before a magistrate this afternoon, Stallings was held to the grand jury under $1,000 bond on the grand larceny charge, and King and Mathis were held to the grand jury under $250 bonds on charges of assault and battery. All pleaded not guilty and waived examination. Gerber left last night for New York on a month's vacation trip and the warrant was not served on him. Laughter had not been located for service of the warrant.

HORTON CONTINUES TO HOLD SLIGHT LEAD.

Memphis, Tenn., August 4—(United News.)—Final outcome of the democratic gubernatorial race in Thursday's primary election in Tennessee may not be definitely established until the official count is announced, August 26, it was indicated here tonight.

Although figures available gave Governor Henry H. Horton a lead of two to four thousand over Hill McAlister, supporters of McAlister refused to admit defeat until the official count. Horton headquarters claimed a lead of more than 5,000.

The latest tabulation by the United News by districts showed tonight that Governor Horton had a vote of 91,856; McAlister, 89,899 and Lewis S. Pope, 23,000.

Indian Sets Fire To Forest, Killing Lover and Rival

Toronto, Ont., August 4.—(AP)—The story of an Indian who set fire to a forest in which the maid who jilted him had fled with his rival, came from the north woods today.

Captain Roy Maxwell, director of the provincial air service, told the story in describing the work of his department, part of which was to aid the Royal Canadian Mounted Police in capturing the love-smitten Indian.

The Indian had been singing love songs to a girl of his race. She jilted him and fled with another suitor into the woods. Following them, the rejected suitor waited until the couple entered a forest area in the Lake Savant region, then he methodically set to work to fire the whole area. A forest ranger surprised him at the task and estinguished the several fires the Indian had set. The brave escaped.

Enlisting the aid of the air service the Royal Canadian Mounted flew into the wilderness to the Indian's camp and arrested him.

SCIENTISTS HUNT FOR 459 BELOW ZERO

Evanston, Ill., August 4.—(AP)—The advice of Professor B. S. Hopkins, of the University of Illinois, is that people should not be irked when the temperature amounts into the nineties.

Professor Hopkins, a speaker before the American Chemical Society institute at Northwestern university today, was describing the attempt of science to obtain a frigidity of 459 degrees below zero.

The substance used is called "cololinium sulfate"—one of the rare earth elements.

"With it," Professor Hopkins said, "science hopes to get to the real bottom of the temperature scale—so-called 'absolute zero'."

At this point, it was explained, molecules cease to move. Everything stands still. Man couldn't exist in anything near such temperature. The lowest temperature at present has been obtained by means of solid helium.

Professor Hopkins, one of the world's authorities on the subject of elements, is the discoverer of illinium, the last of the rare earths to be discovered. It is the only one of the 90 elements which has been discovered by an American.

SOLDIERS FALL DURING PARADE DUE TO POISON

Pittsburgh, Pa., August 4.—(AP)—Believed to be suffering from ptomaine poisoning as a result of eating meat sandwich , 12 members of company E, 112th infantry, Pennsylvania national guard, fell to the street unconscious here today c ring a parade after their arrival from summer training camp.

Those afflicted were taken to a hospital, where the condition of two was reported as serious. Authorities expressed the belief that the meat was tainted. The sandwiches were purchased near the camp and eaten while the soldiers were returning home on a train.

Atlanta Salesmen Foster National Association Plan

First steps in formation of a national association of city salesmen were taken Saturday at the regular meeting of the Atlanta City Salesmen's association, when a special committee was named to begin organization at once, in conjunction with the Savannah association, and other clubs in Georgia, and plans were evolved for the Georgia state division, which, it is expected, will be formed at Macon November 7.

T. L. Simpson, president of the Atlanta club, and D. C. Abbott, for the past five years president of the Savannah group, will take the lead in fostering the national organization work. W. W. Moore, director of publicity of the Atlanta organization, will assist the committee which Mr. Simpson named at Saturday's session to push plans of the national organization.

C. A. Burge, chairman; J. C. Harrison, W. W. Moore, O. T. Camp and E. F. Johnson form the special committee from the Atlanta salesmen's group, which will cooperate with the Savannah committee to be selected later by Mr. Abbott to begin the work. Mr. Abbott announced he will make his selections after returning to Savannah.

Mayor I. N. Ragsdale Saturday introduced Mr. Abbott to the Atlanta salesmen at the meeting held in the city council committee room, and it was during the address, which Mr. Abbott made, that plans for the nation-wide organization were outlined.

The Atlanta association is the oldest in the United States and will foster the movement assisted by the Savannah group. Mr. Abbott called attention to the fact that the Atlanta club is the oldest and, therefore, the logical one to father the move throughout the country.

Mr. Burge's committee will begin at once organization of locals in other large cities of the state, his committe taking the northern half of the state, and the committee which Mr. Abbott will name will take the southern division. Every one of the Georgia societies will be invited to send delegates to organization of the state association at Macon November 7, it was announced.

It is estimated that there are more than 1,000,000 salesmen eligible to membership in the national organization, and the movement is designed to organize them for better ethics and mutural beneficial results.

Peroxide Blondes Called
:: SCIENTIST TRACES THEIR RELATIONS ::
Affinities of Inhibitions

Evanston, Ill., August 4.—(AP)—Peroxide blonds and inhibitions were grouped as affinities of science today by Dr. H. N. Alyea, of Princeton university, a speaker on the program of the American Chemical Society institute at Northwestern university.

Peroxide blondes, he said, owe a great deal to scientific inhibitions, for inhibitions in chemistry, it was explained, are used to keep things fresh and lasting.

"By means of inhibitions," said Professor Alyea, "we can prevent butter from becoming rancid, foodstuffs from spoiling and eventually we may be able, with them, to retard harmful life processes such as the growth of diseased tissue and germs.

"Inhibition will continue to render lasting service to blondes, for less than a drop of acetanilide serves to prevent rapid decomposition in each fluid ounce of commercial hydrogen peroxide."

By use of inhibitors—which retard oxidation—rubber now lasts three to five times as long as it did, said Dr. Waldo L. Semon, of the B. F. Goodrich company.

"Rubber was first used for winter overshoes 100 years ago in New England," said Dr. Semon. "They worked fine until they were put away for the summer, then they simply melted away, leaving a bad odor behind them. "The trouble was that the air had oxidized the rubber. No inhibitors had been used in their manufacture. Science got busy. The result has been the prolongation of the life of rubber, used in 30,000 different products."

JAMES ALLISON, LEADER IN MOTOR SOCIETY, IS DEAD

Indianapolis, August 4.—(AP)—James A. Allison, an associate of Carl C. Fisher in the founding of the Indianapolis motor speedway and in the development of Florida real estate, died at his home here last night. He was 55 years old. Death was caused by bronchial pneumonia.

Allison became ill while spending his honeymoon at his summer home at Port Washington, N. Y. He was married only recently to Miss Lucille Massett, of Miami, Fla.

Funeral services will be held Monday afternoon at Riverdale, Allison's estate northwest of this city.

COOLIDGE ISSUES BLACKMER WARRANT

your custody and conduct him from such place of delivery in France by the most direct and convenient means of transportation to and into the United States, there to surrender the said Henry M. Blackmer to the proper authorities of the United States of America."

Extradition of Blackmer is authorized under the provisions of existing treaty relations between this government and France. The charges against the oil man were contained in indictments after federal tax liens for a total of $8,498,935.78 were filed against his property in Denver and New York on June 4.

Blackmer went to France several years ago when the government began its investigation of the Teapot Dome lease and has refused to return since that time.

CAPITAL OFFICIALS SHED NO NEW LIGHT.

Washington, August 4.—(AP)—Officials available in Washington tonight could throw no additional light on the presidential warrant received in Denver today for the arrest of Henry M. Blackmer, except that this form of warrant is issued in intenational extradition cases.

It was believed, however, that the matter was entirely dissociated from the oil case, in which Blackmer has figured prominently as a missing witness for many years. Atlee Pomerene and Owen J. Roberts, special government oil counsel, were not in Washington tonight. Nor were department of justice officials who have charge of instructions to marshals in such cases as that of the former western oil official."

Green H. Hackworth, solicitor of the state department, said it was not necessary that consent of a foreign government first be obtained before issuing a presidential warrant, but that if the nation in which the fugitive is located refused to give him up such a warrant automatically is cancelled.

Mill Construction Attests to State's Industrial Growth

New $2,000,000 National Biscuit Co. Plant in Atlanta Is Major Project Nearest Completion.

NORTHERN TEXTILE MILLS COME SOUTH

Statistics Show Southern Plants Profitable While Eastern Manufactories Steadily Lose Ground.

With the new $2,000,000 National Biscuit company plant in Atlanta as the major project nearest completion, Georgia is in the midst of a wave of industrial prosperity as evidence by the number of new mills in course of erection, or contracted for, and the additions planned to mills already established, according to statistics compiled by the Atlanta Chamber of Commerce and the F. W. Dodge corporation.

A large part of this development is due to the fact that mills in the north and east have found that they are steadily losing ground, while those in the south are daily obtaining a stronger hold on the textile business.

More than $2,000,000 is being spent in enlarging the old plant of the Frank E. Block bakeries by the National Biscuit company, and work is rapidly being pushed forward. Production is expected soon.

New Rayon Mills.

Due to the fact that it is the largest, and that it combines both Italian and American capital, great publicity has been given the rayon mills now planned for Rome. Bids have been received for the mills to be erected in Rome by the American Chatillon corporation, but so far as known, no contract has been awarded.

This plant is to be erected in five units each of which is to cost $2,500,000 and is to employ at the start 4,000 men.

Of great significance is the recent decision of the Brighton Mills, of Passaic, N. J., to erect another great mill at Shannon, Ga. The company for some years had had two plants, one in New Jersey, the other in Georgia. Company records have shown that the former has failed to make money and that the latter has cleared a profit. So it has been decided to abandon the New Jersey property and concentrate all interests in Georgia. One of the first results of this decision was that the foundation has just been laid for a $200,000 weave shed addition. Three large warehouses also will be constructed. The entire project contemplates a large expenditure.

Hosiery Mill Expansion.

The Archer Hosiery mill, formerly the Mitchell Hosiery mill, at Columbus, is said to be contemplating a $100,000 development.

The Dennis Silk mills, Gloversville, N. Y., is moving to Americus, and will be known as the Sumter Rayon mills.

A new company is being organized at Royston to be known as the Royston Spinning mills. The corporation will install about 6,000 spindles.

The large Scottdale mills have received bids for an addition to the pant at Scottdale. It will cost $100,000. Work is to start within a few days.

The Wilkes county creamery has just let a contract to the Washington manufacturing company for remodeling a building at Washington to be used for a large creamery.

The Sewell Manufacturing company, of Atlanta, has just completed a $5,000 clothing factory at Bremen.

New Cotton Mill.

R. F. Sanford and Grady Richardson, of Buchanan, are interested in the erection of a $100,000 cotton mill at that place. The project now is being financed and probably will mature soon.

Bona Allen, Inc., of Buford, now is finishing a $50,000 chreme tannery plant at Buford. It is built of brick and steel frame and is two stories in height.

The Echota Cotton mills of Calhoun, are now erecting additions to their main buildings and to their warehouse at an approximate cost of $75,000.

A. D. Harris, president of the Commerce Manufacturing company, is said to be contemplating erection of a silk and rayon mill at that place. Maturity of the project, however, is indefinite.

The Cornelia Cotton Mills, Inc., of which A. W. Stubbs, of Atlanta, is president, are now constructing a $50,000 cotton mill. The factory will be one-story, of reinforced concrete and steel.

The Wescott Hosiery mills, C. L. Westcott president, of Dalton, are erecting a $35,000 addition to the present building. It will be of brick with steel frame.

$200,000 Hartwell Mill.

A company now is being formed in Hartwell for erection of a $200,000 mill building. The project is to include 8,000 spindles. E. E. Satterfield and Eugene Mathewson, both of Hartwell, are said to be interested in formation of the company. Just when this project will get under way is considered uncertain at present.

It is reported that the Taylor Textile corporation of which Duke Davis is in charge is contemplating erection of a $100,000 factory at LaGrange, the maturity of this project depending upon the outcome of certain dyeing experiments which are now under way.

The Callaway interest at LaGrange recently purchased a 100-acre site at Manchester and, it is said, expect to erect a mill there.

The High Shoals Manufacturing company, of Athens, A. E. Horn, president, is contemplating rebuilding of their plant recently destroyed by fire. The building, it is said, will be of brick, three stories high, to contain 10,000 spindles, approximate cost $350,000.

A number of other projects have been proposed during the year but no definite progress has been reported on them.

ATLANTA AVIATORS CONDEMN AIRPORT AS ROUGH, UNSAFE

Pilots Take Life in Hands When Landing or Taking Off, Fliers at Candler Field Reveal.

BY BEN COOPER.

Condemned unanimously by the men who daily risk life and limb on its corrugated runways, Candler field, Atlanta's municipal airport and focal point of aviation interest in the southeast, has reached the stage where landing and taking off is hazardous and damage to planes has increased to more than three times that of a model field, it was stated Saturday by several leading Atlanta pilots.

Stories of propellor blades worn to bits by blasts of rocks picked up by air suction, of landing gear treated so roughly that constant replacements are necessary, and of the fear of pilots that at any moment a rain wash or soft spot may trip their plane into a fatal crah, were heard on all sides. And an automobile ride over the field revealed that the surface, the most important feature of an airport, resembles a rough country road more than the runways of a modern airport.

Atlanta has become one of the leading aviation centers of the southeast because of her strategic position, but the improvement of the field lagged until pilots are practically unanimous in condemning the landing surface, it was learned. With this city as a junction point for air mail routes to New Orleans and to New York at the present time, and two additional routes, to Miami and to Chicago, scheduled to open in the near future, the poor condition of the field is apt to discourage aviators from coming here, it was said.

While many fields are rated as "model airport," "good under all conditions," "excellent," in a list of landing fields compiled by Miss Florabel Muir with the assistance of Norman W. Potter, pilot, and printed in Liberty magazine for August 4, Candler field is rated only as "fair." The field at Macon, Ga., is rated as "good."

Rough surfaced over most of its area, Candler field presents a constant menace to ships taking off or landing, and is approximately three times as hard on landing gear as other

JOE BROWN LOYAL SMITH SUPPORTER

Horrors of Reconstruction Days of Republican Rule Cited by Former Chief Executive.

Marietta, Ga., August 4.—(Special.) Ex-Governor Joseph M. Brown, twice chief executive of Georgia, today pledged his wholehearted support to the democratic nominee, Governor Al Smith, and stated that he would of a certainty vote for him at the November election.

"I feel that I would be recalcitrant to my duty as a Georgia democrat," said the begrizzled veteran of many a political campaign, "to vote other than a straight democratic ticket. I cannot so soon forget the horrors of the reconstruction days, when federal bayonets, placed in Georgia under republican administration, disfranchised the flower of Georgia manhood and placed ignorant negroes, just recently released from slavery, into judicial power.

"Neither can I forget that Georgia democrats have twice honored me by naming me their chief executive and I would be an ingrate to turn my back on democracy in Georgia. I cannot believe that the thinking people of Georgia will desert the party of their fathers and break bread with their inherent enemy."

Governor Brown's eyes sparkled with the intense enthusiasm he felt as he remarked:

"Why, the democratic party is the true friend of the south. It proved itself so during the dark days of the reconstruction and Tammany, now held up as a corrupt political organization, befriended the south in the face of republican opposition, I cannot see how any thinking Georgian in whose blood flows one ounce of gratitude can forsake his own party and by his vote, indorse the party who fostered carpetbaggers in Georgia and who stand today a world's example of political corruptness, graft and greed."

Governor Brown expressed his approval of every feature embodied in the democratic platform with the one exception of the labor provision. To this portion, however, he expressed his disappointment and stated that within the next few days he would have something to say along that line that would be of no little interest to every true democrat.

Three Killed As Auto Hits Fast Express

Tourist Crashes Into Speeding Locomotive Near Colorado Springs.

Colorado Springs, Colo., August 4. (AP)—Three women and a man, members of a Dayton, Ohio, family, were killed today when their automobile crashed into the locomotive of a southbound Denver and Rio Grande Western passenger train at a grade crossing 11 miles south of here.

From letters and cards found on the mangled bodies of the victims, the coroner established their identity as:

Earl H. Turner, Beckel building, Dayton, Ohio; Beulah Annie Turner, 228 Central avenue, Dayton; Annie R. Turner and Mrs. John Edward Turner, Dayton.

PRESSING DETAILS OCCUPY HOOVER

Nominee Is Forced To Call Off Week-End Pleasure Trip; Tilson To Head Maine Fight.

BY JAMES L. WEST,
Associated Press Staff Writer.

Stanford University, Calif., August 4.—(AP)—Changing his mind overnight, Herbert Hoover, today abandoned his contemplated trip to Bohemia, Calif., well to the north of San Francisco, to attend "Nanda," the annual play of the Bohemian club, of which he is a member.

After getting his acceptance address out of the way late last night, the republican presidential candidate found such an accumulation of mail and details of party affairs awaiting his attention that he deemed it advisable to give them his attention over the week-end.

May Make Another Trip.

Beginning next Tuesday he may make another automobile trip into the California mountains for a few days of rest and recreation in the redwoods in advance of the notification ceremonies in Stanford university stadium next Saturday afternoon. Details are yet to be worked out, but the nominee will go either to the Yosemite National park or near there. It was stated that the journey would not be as strenuous as that recently to northern California and southern Oregon.

Before leaving, Hoover will confer Monday with Dwight Davis, secretary of war, who is here en route to Honolulu and also with some party leaders, although the more important of his political conferences will be put over until late next week and early in the week following, before he starts back to Washington via his birthplace, at West Branch, Iowa, where he is to make his second speech of the campaign.

Reports to the candidate show that the campaign machinery which has been set up under his direction in all parts of the country is ready to function, but the real drive will be deferred until early in September, thus leaving two months in which the republican party message will be carried to the $98,379 IS GIVEN TO FUND OF G. O. P.

Rev. E. J. Hammond, of Atlanta, and J. W. Long, of Ashburn, Are Among Donors of Contributions

Washington, August 4.—(AP)—The first treasurer's report on the republican campaign made public today showed contributions of $98,379 and expenditures of $48,317.04 up to and including July 31.

Three $10,000 contributions, by Secretary Dwight F. Davis, of the war department; Howard Heinz, of Pittsburgh, and Arthur Whitney, of Mendham, N. J., topped the list of gifts to the fund which Chairman Work, of the national committee, hopes will reach $4,000,000.

J. R. Nutt, new treasurer of the committee, made public the report in accordance with the party's pledge in its platform adopted at Kansas City. The statement was forwarded to the senate and house special campaign funds investigating committees and the committees were informed that complete records covering all transactions were open to their inspection.

Expenditures Listed.

The entire list of 60 contributors was given in the report along with an itemized list of expenditures which included mostly salaries of those connected with the national committee. The two largest expenditures were $7,100 to the republican state committee of Pennsylvania and $5,000 to Horace A. Mann, who has been busy in the south since the convention on behalf of Herbert Hoover.

The Pennsylvania disbursement was listed as "return to Pennsylvania." It was explained this meant probably the return of the state committee's share in the collections from that state. There were many Pittsburgh contributors.

The report, however, did not go into the status of the republican treasury, by taking into account its balance on hand when the campaign opened and the condition to date. The August 1 report of the party compares with $60,000 in contributions and about $21,000 in expenses for the democrats for the same period, as revealed in that party's recent announcement.

From $1 to $10,000.

Contributions to the republicans ranged from $1 to $10,000. Arthur Whitney, who was one of the three $10,000 donors, was chairman of the Hoover-for-President clubs in New Jersey and was a candidate for governor of that state in 1924. Mr. Heinz, who also gave $10,000, is a Pittsburgh business man. O. P. Van Sweringen and M. J. Van Sweringen, Cleveland railroad leaders, each gave $7,500 and the other contributions were of less amounts. Secretary Jardine, of the department of agriculture, was the only other cabinet officer in the list. He gave $200.

Among the large expenditures was one of $2,500 listed as salary for Frank Little, of New York. He also received $661 for "expenses." Franklin Fort, secretary of the committee, explained that Mr. Little was direc-

HOUSER, FORMER NOTRE DAME GRID STAR, IS DROWNED

San Diego, Calif., August 4.—(AP)—Max Houser, 28, all-American end of the Notre Dame football team in 1924 and 1925 and athletic coach at Redlands university in 1926 was drowned at Missions beach, 12 miles north of here this afternoon. PISTOL IS FOUND IN LOS ANGELES MURDER INQUIRY

Trail of Love, Anger and Death Followed by Police But Accused Slayer Sticks to First Story.

Los Angeles, August 4.—(AP)—The trail of love, anger and alleged murder, along with pretty Barbara Mauger went to a greusome death, was restepped today by Russell S. Beitzel in company with officers who charge that he slew the girl after a season of illicit companionship.

A large caliber pistol which detectives said apparently was of the same size as the one used fatally upon Miss Mauger was located late today in a towel in the desk used by Beitzel at his place of employment.

Admits Ownership.

The detectives said Beitzel readily admitted that the gun was his, but that he had taken it for inspection before purchasing it from a fellow employee.

The sight of the gun had been filed off. Officers declared this was to allow the attaching of a gun silencer.

Previously Beitzel had admitted taking a borrowed gun to Mulholland drive to fire it "at a spot" as a test of its action.

Weary from the hours of questioning that preceded the placing of a formal murder charge against him yesterday, Beitzel steadfastly denied that he was responsible for the death of Miss Mauger, whose nude body was found in a mountain thicket north of here Thursday.

Pushed From Cliff.

Evidence at the scene indicated that the girl, a former waitress who came to California from Philadelphia with Beitzel, had been shot through the head and pushed from a cliff where she was left to die.

Beitzel was taken today to the office of a friend from whom he said he borrowed a revolver to practice shooting at a spot only 200 yards from where the body was found. That was two days before he said Miss Mauger left him at the same spot after a quarrel.

From there the accused man was taken to the address where he and the young woman lived unwed to be confronted by neighbors to whom police say he told conflicting stories regarding his "wife's" disappearance.

Returning to the house where the couple lived, police today found tucked carefully under other papers in a dresser drawer a copy of the Philadelphia

SOCIETY LEADERS FACE RUM CHARGES

Prominent Citizens of Philadelphia Likely To Stand Trial After Bootlegger Is Nabbed.

Philadelphia, August 4.—(AP)—Possibility of prosecution of the customers of Joel G. Kerper, alleged society bootlegger, was being studied today.

Colonel Samuel O. Wynne, federal prohibition administrator, has been examining letters and checks found in Kerper's store when it was raided Monday.

The letters and checks, some of them bearing the names of persons socially prominent, are believed to have been sent by the persons whose signatures appear, but Colonel Wynne said he must prove the signatures before taking the contemplated step of charging the signers with conspiracy.

"I cannot say now what we shall decide to do," Colonel Wynne said, "but lawyers assure me that if we can prove the signatures to be genuine we can prosecute the writers for

Spaniel Saves Tot, Attacked By Airedale

Little Pete Dillard Bitten 18 Times Before Faithful Dog Effects Rescue

The story of a water spaniel's love for a toddling youngster whom he had guarded since the swaddling clothes era, and of how that love and eternal vigilance saved the tot's life was revealed Saturday as little Pete Dillard, five-year-old son of B. E. Dillard, of Sutton avenue, East Lake, recovered from 18 bites inflicted upon him by a neighboring airedale.

Young Pete was beset by the airedale, who leaped athwart the lad's shoulders from a high bank while he was at play near his home, witnesses relate. The child's father was first to the rescue, but not all of his inspired might could break the airedale's grip upon the struggling child. Accounts show that the youngster had

HOOVER FLAYED FOR FLOOD STAND

New Orleans Publisher Says Candidate Heard and Obeyed His Master's Voice on Relief Issue.

New Orleans, August 4.—(AP)—Herbert Hoover was charged in a statement today by Colonel Robert Ewing, publisher and democratic national committeeman of Louisiana, with reversing his policy on flood relief because "he had heard his master's voice."

The republican presidential candidate, he said, repeatedly declared both publicly and privately while in the flood district that he believed the government should assume entire financial responsibility for relieving the overflow country, but when he appeared before the senate commerce committee, he testified that he thought the state should pay part of the costs.

"Herbert Hoover heard his master's voice and had obeyed, even though it completely reversed him on his statements in New Orleans."

Colonel Ewing further charged that Hoover attempted to evade testifying before the senate committee.

"Then came the flood hearings before the commerce committee in Washington," said the colonel. "Hoover left Washington. He stayed away from the national capital some ten days. It was common knowledge that Herbert Hoover didn't want to come before that committee.

"But the late Senator Willis, republican, of Ohio, vice chairman of that committee, was equally determined that Hoover should be brought before it, and at last Senator Willis got Hoover before that committee.

"There, to the astonishment of everyone who had heard him in the south, Herbert Hoover completely reversed himself and said that he believed that the prostrated states of the Mississippi valley should pay part of those gigantic flood control costs.

"It is learned on unquestionable

MISS THEA RASCHE, GERMAN AVIATRIX, LEAVES FOR HOME

New York, August 4.—(AP)—Thea Rasche, German aviatrix, whose projected trans-Atlantic flight was balked by legal difficulties, bade farewell to America today and sailed for home on the liner Albert Ballin. She said she would come back in November.

Her departure was announced after the ship had sailed. Officials of the line disclosed that she had remained in her cabin for four hours before sailing time, fearing that further legal complications might ensue if it became known that she was leaving the country. Her plane, the Flamingo, was aboard the ship and Miss Rasche said that if the opportunity offered she might attempt a westward flight across the Atlantic.

THOUSANDS FLEE FROM TORRID CITY TO SEA RESORTS

New York Hardest Hit as Mercury Continues Climb for Third Day During Ensuing Week.

12 PROSTRATIONS TOTAL FOR DAY

Other Towns on Coast Also Victims; No Hope for Immediate Relief Is Seen by Officials.

Three Are Killed By Violent Storm

New York, August 4.—(AP)—One woman was killed by a bolt of lightning, another was electrocuted on an elevated railway third rail, and a policeman was killed as he picked up a fallen "live" wire tonight when a violent electrical storm struck the bathing resorts near Manhattan, skirting the city proper.

New York, August 4.—(United News.)—Two men died in the streets, a man and a woman died in hospitals of prostration and three other persons were killed indirectly today during the hottest August 4 in New York since 1888.

It was the third day of the heat wave that has covered New York and the eastern half of the United States with an oven-like breath broken only by scattered local storms. The general death toll was placed tonight at 44.

91 Degrees at 4 P. M.

New York itself experienced a temperature of 91 at 4 p. m. At that hour 600,000 of its inhabitants were on the beach at Coney Island and hundreds of thousands more had fled to other beaches and parks. Many of them prepared to spend the night in the open.

Twelve prostrations were reported in the city during the day.

A fourth day of the heat, which has averaged above 80 degrees for the past 48 hours was promised by the weather bureau for Sunday.

Tormented thousands fled New York today as the heat wave gave the streets and tenements of the city a record scourging.

More Deaths Feared.

Officials feared a death toll of large proportions because of the cumulative effect of the heat, which has so far hardly abated from the afternoon readings, at midnight.

At midnight Friday night the official temperature was 80 degrees, whence it slowly fell to 76 shortly after dawn and began a climb that brought it to 88 at noon. At 2 p. m. it had reached 90 and hung there until after 3 p. m., while humidity began a climb of a point an hour after a low of 52 at 2 p. m.

Meantime the wooded parks of New York filled with families that had been driven from apartments and tenements and the railway stations were thronged to the point of suffocation with an endless stream of thousands bound for the beaches. Bundles and bags revealed the intention of a large percentage to sleep in the open until the showers promised as "possible" for late Sunday, materialize.

Ship Crews Afflicted.

Although it is customary for first-class passengers to spend the night aboard, only one of the 415 sailing this morning on the White Star liner Majestic attempted it. The decks of this and other ships in the two rivers were littered with crews unable to endure the heat in their quarters below.

Weather bureau officials were scanning old records late today to fix the exact relative strength of Saturday's heat. Friday was discovered to have been the hottest August 3 in 44 years.

Frank Callaghan, 26, dived from a pier in the North river and failed to reappear. Two other heat victims of the day were Harry Sheenin, a woolen merchant, who fell from a fourth story window and was killed while seeking air and Cornelius V. Flint, 71, who died on a Long Island railroad train.

Three Prostrated.

Three men were prostrated by the heat in Brooklyn, one in Manhattan and one in the Bronx during the afternoon.

Other cities along the Atlantic seaboard reported continued high temperatures but slightly tempered by local thundershowers.

Boston reported 96.2 degrees Saturday, a new high mark for the summer. Philadelphia, Pittsburgh, New Haven, Conn., and Albany, N. Y., had temperatures ranging in the 90-degree division.

RELIEF IS PROMISED GREAT LAKES AREA.

Washington, August 4.—(United News.) — Slightly cooler Sunday weather was promised the lake region and the Ohio valley by the weather bureau today. Elsewhere east of the Mississippi river "the weather will continue warm."

Liquor Debate Disrupts Socialists' Convention

:: PRESIDING OFFICER UNABLE TO KEEP ORDER ::

Jackson, Miss., August 4.—(AP)—Inability of the presiding officer to restore quiet following a discussion on religion and prohibition caused the state convention of the socialist party in Mississippi to break up late today without transacting any of the business planned for the session.

W. C. Kennedy, Magnolia, secretary of the state executive committee, said that several "outsiders" attempted to obtain an explanaion of the national platform of the party regarding religion and prohibition, which opened a general discussion and caused "loyal socialists" to walk out of the meeting when the arguments continued despite calls for order.

Secretary Kennedy tried to explain to the inquirers that the platform did not touch on such matters, but that helped matters very little.

Kennedy said the work of selecting a new state executive committee, making plans for a statewide campaign for the socialist nominees for president and vice president and naming of presidential electors would be completed at a later date.

"It is probable that we will petition the secretary of state to allow us to file the presidential electors on the general election ballot in November, he said.

"It is my intention," the secretary stated, "to wage a widespread campaign for the socialist national ticket once the matter of placing electors on the ticket has been disposed of satisfactorily."

Ponderous Fist Bangs Warning to Gangland

:: CHICAGO POLICE CHIEF PROMISES ACTION ::

Chicago, Aug. 4.—(AP)—A ponderous fist that once broke a gangster's jaw in three places, rose quickly and crashed to the glass-topped desk in front of Chicago's new commissioner of police as he told of his hopes of ridding the city of gangs, shootings and bombings. The movement epitomized the spirit of the new chief.

Named to succeed Michael Hughes after a series of sluggings, kidnapings and killings had shaken the city during the recent primary, followed by gang feuds, the sandy-haired veteran straightened in his chair to express his ideas.

"Fist and not words are what count with me," he declared. "It's action I want. Talking policemen will have no place on the force, for I have no time for a policeman who has time to talk."

Action is what Acting Commissioner William F. Russell got within a few hours after his appointment by Mayor Thompson, for he shifted some 21 captains, 13 lieutenants and 300 patrolmen. He will bear the term of "acting" commissioner until the council can sanction his appointment in the fall.

The commissioner lifted the fist from the desk, knuckles protruding as the muscles of his arm tightened. Twenty-eight years on the force, a Spanish war veteran and an athlete at 52, he shoots an eighty in golf and can outrun many a man half his age.

"I don't talk much, but when I move something happens," he said quietly. "I broke a tough's jaw in

TRADE BOOM SEEN IN CHINESE TREATY

Washington, August 4.—(AP)—The consummation of the new commercial treaty with China will have a far-reaching effect upon the United States' future relations with the commercial world of the east, in the opinion of Dr. Julius Klein, director of the bureau of foreign and domestic commerce of the commerce department.

In a speech prepared for delivery over the radio tonight Dr. Klein discussed the main aspects of the new treaty, declaring that "we can take just pride in the fact that the American government, backed by the feeling of friendship of the American people for the Chinese people, has taken the initiative in this matter and by this new treaty has agreed to abolish old provisions which have outlived their usefulness and have been only a detriment rather than a safeguard to the commercial intercourse between the two peoples."

The new treaty, which accords to the Chinese complete tariff autonomy after January 1, 1929, so far as American trade is concerned, does not impair American trade interests in any degree, Dr. Klein said.

American trade in China has increased in recent years in spite of civil wars, Dr. Klein said, and predicted that under the new treaty it would show an even more marked increase.

The commerce department official said that new ideas and new methods were penetrating into the commercial life of China and that changing conditions must be met with new treaties and new commercial agreements.

DETAILS OF CAMPAIGN KEEP HOOVER AT DESK

country by radio, through speeches and publication.

Representative John Q. Tilson, Connecticut, republican leader in the house of representatives, who came here from Washington with Hoover, will leave tomorrow for New York to open the eastern speakers' bureau of which he will have charge. This bureau is to supply speakers for meetings in the various states of the east which will be arranged by the local organizations.

Maine Is Barometer.

From New York Tilson will go to Maine for a conference there with republican leaders concerning the campaign to be conducted in that state in advance of the election early in September of a senator, members of the house and state officials. Since this is the first general election in the country during the campaign, and since the result is regarded as a national political barometer, the republicans will concentrate there for a month.

Tilson expressed the greatest confidence that the republican ticket would sweep the state, pointing out that in 1920, the republican candidates were elected by a majority of two to one, and that in 1924 the majority was almost as great. The presidential election in Maine will be on the same date as that over the country—November 6.

Praises Nominee.

In a formal statement given to newspapermen before leaving the Hoover home here with Mrs. Tilson for San Francisco today, Tilson expressed keen regret that his duties called him back east in advance of the notification and paid high tribute to what he denominated as the human qualities of the republican nominee.

"No one can come close to Mr. Hoover for any length of time without being deeply impressed, not only with his wonderful ability and capacity which everyone recognizes," he said, "but with the truly human side of this remarkable man's character. It has often been remarked that those who have worked with him in any one of his many-sided activities, never failed to admire and love him.

"The reason is not far to seek. Men are not enthusiastic over or loyal to a machine. It is the human side that makes the enduring appeal and when to this is added genuineness and natural dignity without restraint, it invariably commands and holds respect and admiration."

MILLIONS WILL HEAR ACCEPTANCE SPEECH.

Washington, August 4.—(AP)—The largest radio hook-up in history has been arranged for broadcasting Herbert Hoover's speech of acceptance of the republican presidential nomination to be delivered next Saturday at Palo Alto, Cal.

The ceremonies in the huge stadium of Leland Stanford university will be sent through the air from 84 broadcasting stations in this country and from four or more short wave transmitting stations for reception in the territorial possessions and foreign countries.

The notification exercises will begin at 4 p. m. central standard time, 7 p. m. eastern standard time and 8 p. m. eastern daylight saving time.

Governor C. C. Young, of California, will open the meeting, introducing Senator Moses, of New Hampshire, chairman of the notification committee. Upon formal notification of his nomination, Mr. Hoover will deliver his speech of acceptance which will lay down his views on campaign issues. It will be his first address of the campaign and is expected to occupy about 45 minutes.

The following stations will broadcast the ceremonies:

WADC, Akron; WPG, Atlantic City; WBAL, Boston; WCAO, Baltimore; WBRC, Birmingham; WEEI, WNAC, WBZA, Boston; WGR, WMAK, Buffalo; WSAI, WKRC, Cincinnati; WBT, Charlotte WGN, KYW, WMAQ, Chicago; WAIU, Columbus; KOIL, Council Bluffs; WFAA, Dallas; WOC, Davenport, KOA, Denver; WHO, Des Moines; WWJ, WGHP, WJR, Detroit; WEBC, Duluth; WEDH, Erie. MIDWEST VICTORY SEEN BY COMMITTEE.

Chicago, August 4.—(AP)—Herbert Hoover's general staff of republican campaign leaders concentrated their forces in Chicago today for a council meeting on the situation confronting the presidential nominee in the agricultural middle west.

Dr. Herbert Work, chairman of the national committee, was the chief of staff outlining his organization plans and lending an eager ear to the reports of his various aides—national committeemen and women representing the midwest states.

The conference, called purposely to give Dr. Work and his vice chairman, Mrs. Alvin T. Hert, a bird's eye view of the middle west battle front, accomplished its aim, according to reports from the national committee.

While no official statements were given out, reports from the national committeemen and women were made public. Almost as a unit, the delegations presented optimistic predictions for a Hoover victory.

J. Matt Chilton, of Kentucky, one of the original Hoover enthusiasts, said Kentucky was viewing the campaign more as "the people against Tammany hall than as the democrats versus the republicans." He predicted Kentucky would go for Hoover if for no other reason than because the women are opposed to Al Smith.

Hopeful in Wisconsin.

Mrs. Harry Thomas, Wisconsin, regular republican opposing the claim of Miss Elizabeth McCormick, LaFollette republican, as a national committeewoman, described her state as one of many kinds of republicans. However, she said, there was no danger of a democratic victory.

With George Vits, Mrs. Thomas attended the conference while Miss McCormick and Herman L. Ekern, the LaFollette national committeeman, were absent. James W. Good, western manager, said all four of the Wisconsin group had been invited to attend.

The conference served as a means of uniting the republicans of North Dakota into a solid organization to support the national ticket. Judge Fred Graham, of Fargo, leader of the North Dakota non-partisan league, and R. W. Fowler, vice chairman of the North Dakota republican central committee, announced they would lay aside factional differences in the national campaign, although remaining separate on the state ticket.

Mrs. J. C. Griswold, Texas national committeewoman, was applauded when she said her state likely would go republican because Smith had bolted the democratic platform.

MANY WOMEN SEEK WORK IN CAMPAIGN.

Chicago, August 4.—(AP)—From the woman's point of view, an "embarras de richesses" confronts Hoover leaders. In the opinion of national committeewoman attending the republican mid-western meeting here today, organization of the unprecedented numbers of women beseiging republican headquarters for a share in the campaign has become a major problem.

Division of all women voters into national groups, to be handled by separate division heads in Washington, was the solution offered today by Mrs. Alvin T. Hert, vice chairman of the national committee. A dozen other avenues of feminine activity were suggested, from "Hoover Junior Clubs" for first-time voters in Missouri, to extension o fthe "Hoover Volunteers" now being organized for politically inexperienced women under Mrs. Louis Slade in New York.

Farm Leaders Confident.

"Heretofore the urgent problem has been organizing party workers and getting out the party vote," said Mrs. Hert today. "In this campaign the problem is to supply activities for party workers plus large numbers of women who have never voted nor helped to get out the woman vote. We are dividing our women voters into groups: The home-makers, business and professional women, women in industries, rural women, and the first-time voters. At the head of each group will be a regular republican organizer."

Women from the western agricultural states today were unanimous in reporting a strong feminine majority for Hoover, either because of the women's belief in his ability to solve the agricultural problem, or because of their strong dry sentiment.

"The farmers will never vote for Tammany, that's certain," said Miss Dorothy Cunningham, of Indiana. "We will carry Indiana all right."

It was only among the "wets" of non-agricultural districts that the women anticipated difficulty.

Two southern women present, Mrs. J. C. Griswold, national committeewoman of Texas, and Mrs. L. M. B. Rodgers, state vice chairman for North Carolina, declared the dry women of their states will vote solidly for Hoover.

"An electoral vote for him is almost certain in North Carolina," said Mrs. Rodgers.

METHODIST BISHOP COMES OUT FOR HOOVER.

Little Rock, Ark., August 4.—(AP) Bishop H. A. Boaz, of the Arkansas and Oklahoma conferences of the Methodist Episcopal church, south, today made public a statement in which he said he would oppose the election of the democratic national ticket and would vote for republican electors in November.

The statement was issued, the bishop said, to contradict a current report that he was supporting Governor Alfred E. Smith.

The bishop's main opposition to the democratic candidate is based on the prohibition issue.

three places with that fist, and it's for fellows like him that I want to make Chicago too hot."

A report that one of his subordinates had been making indiscreet utterances occasioned the commissioner's tirade against talking policemen. He dismissed the subject with, "I'll fire him if he doesn't learn to hold his tongue."

Two causes are given by the new chief for crime in Chicago and other cities—the eighteenth amendment and the Volstead act. Remove them, he believes, and a great percentage of the crime will cease. The illicit liquor traffic provides the gangster with too much money.

Drafted By Mayor.

Russell, as he says, was "drafted" by Mayor Thompson and given carte blanche to clean up the city, with no "strings" attached. Russell specified that he must be given free hand or he would not take the job, and the mayor acquiesced.

Commissioner Russell served in the Spanish war regiment commanded by Judge Marcus Kavanaugh of this city, and it seems to him that the attitude of many of those who think the sun sets after it crosses the Hudson river has not changed much since those days.

"While we were camped in the east," he said, "the first thing people asked me about were the wild Indians, the bears and the buffalo. I had been raised in Chicago and never had seen an Indian, and the only bear and buffalo were in parks.

"People outside Chicago sometimes get the impression gangsters are running around in armies, firing machine guns and cannon at every citizen in sight, but a very small fraction of the natives of Chicago ever heard a gangster's revolver, saw a slugging, or kidnaping or killing.

"It's a fight between toughs, and they might eliminate themselves eventually, but we are going to do it sooner. Don't get the idea Chicago is worse than any other large city. It isn't."

SOCIETY LEADERS FACE RUM CHARGE

conspiracy with Kerper to violate the prohibition law.

"Some of them may come in and help the government, because our evidence shows that Kerper duped them. He charged them $150 a case, for instance, for what they were led to believe was pre-prohibition rye whisky. Dr. A. C. Motten, government chemist, has found that it was merely alcohol artificially colored. He also found that the so-called champagne was simply carbonated white grape juice mixed with redistilled alcohol and sugar.

"There has been no exaggeration in the statement that the majority of letter writers are socially prominent. I cannot reveal the names, but some of them live right out along the main line. It is true that I know some of them, but they are not exactly intimate friends.

"We found that many of Kerper's customers gave summer addresses in the New England states and winter addresses in the south and that he took care of their wants at their distant homes. Examination of the orders showed that the customers made no bones about asking for what they wanted. There was no code word for any of the liquors."

Kerper is awaiting trial for illegal transportation and possession.

authority that a southerner whose name is nationally known, a figure of great distinction, at this time asked Hoover why he had so completely reversed himself and taken the stand that the states should pay part of those flood control costs.

"'I had to,' Hoover told him."

"We hear much of what Herbert Hoover did when he was sent south by President Coolidge during the great Mississippi river floods. He did splendid work. There is no doubt of that. But out of his work in flood relief and rehabilitation came this curious bit of evidence as to how completely Herbert Hoover takes his orders from his republican masters."

Wartime Record.

Turning to Hoover's record as wartime food administrator, Colonel Ewing declared that through his policies "countless thousands of farmers in the midwest and northwest went bankrupt and what our Louisiana planters suffered they ought best to know and to remember."

He then charged Hoover brought the negro issue into the campaign through his "order that abolished the segregation of the white and negro races in his own departmental office in Washington as secretary of commerce," and concluded:

"If the south will keep these facts clearly in mind we will hear less of 'Hoover democrats' and less of 'party bolts' than we have been hearing thus early in the campaign from the lips of hopeful republican politicians."

given daily. The Eastern Star chapter will entertain Monday night at a reception.

Tuesday the sessions will be held at the Statesboro High school with the following speakers: Miss Rhoda Kaufman, W. G. Edwards, Gordon Saussy, Mrs. Louise Morris, Mrs. Nora Lawrence Smith, Jack Williams and E. A. Caldwell. The U. D. C. of Statesboro will entertain with a luncheon. The evening program will be held at the normal school auditorium with the following speakers: James A. Hollomon, of The Constitution; Mildred Seydell, Atlanta, and W. C. McCormack, American department of forestry.

Speakers on the program Wednesday will be R. C. Norman, state tax commissioner; Sam J. Slate, state auditor; Allan McDonell, Linton K. Starr, Herbert Wind, C. C. Moseley and C. E. Brown. Officers will be elected Wednesday night. The Statesboro Woman's club will entertain with a banquet Wednesday night.

Thursday night the editors will come to Atlanta to enjoy a dinner to be tendered them by John K. Ottley on the roof of the Atlanta Athletic club. Friday morning they will go to Lakemont, where they will enjoy a luncheon. Friday night a barbecue will be given at Press Haven by the Georgia Power company. Press Haven will be dedicated Friday night and a dance will follow the dedication. Saturday the editors will visit Clayton and the Tallulah Falls school. Sunday they will take a motor trip to Asheville, N. C.

TOMBS OF MANCHU EMPERORS LOOTED; MILLIONS STOLEN

Pekin, August 4.—(AP)—The vernacular newspaper, Yishintao, says that the tombs of the Manchu emperors and empresses at Kwaichow recently were robbed by northern soldiers of pearls, jade and jewelry values at millions of dollars in gold.

The newspaper says one pearl alone sold in Tientsin for $25,000 gold.

The tombs are now being guarded by soldiers and the nationalist government has ordered the arrest of the ringleaders.

been thrown to the ground and was in the process of being throttled by the infuriated animal when the water spaniel hove onto the scene. Pete had sustained a vicious bite which pierced his upper lip, in addition to 17 other abrasions about his body.

Knotting his concentrated might for an assault, the spaniel, it is said, launched itself against the larger airedale, bowling that animal several feet away and allowing time for the father to seize the child and rush him to safety.

The elder Dillard seized the airedale and dashed its head against a blunt object, it is reported, but still did not inflict death upon it. Young Dillard was taken to the state capitol for an examination for possible signs of rabies, but it was announced that no danger was feared from that source.

The airedale is the property of Robert Weeks, youthful next-door neighbor of the Dillards.

Food Preservation Show

August 6th Through August 11th
Frigidaire Show Rooms
252 Peachtree St.
9 A. M. to 10 P. M.

Think of the foods you keep in your home. Are you sure they're fresh and wholesome?

Of course, you feel certain they're safe to eat... otherwise you wouldn't think of serving them.

But here's the difficulty. You cannot possibly be sure about the healthful condition of any perishable food ... raw or cooked, liquid or solid ... unless you keep it at refrigeration temperatures below 50 degrees. Above that point lurks a hidden world of danger ... live micro-organisms which thrive and flourish at an alarming rate.

This may seem unbelievable to you! Yet it's true.

We've arranged an exhibit of unusual interest to everybody. We show through powerful microscopes the most common forms of food spoilage ... active and dormant bacteria and mold on foodstuffs. We have an amazing microscopic motion picture of live food parasites ... more thrilling than any feature film you've ever seen ... shown here for the first time in this city.

See for yourself the mold growth on raw fruits. Watch bacteria, taken from milk, actually moving. See the other harmful germs which develop in ordinary food-preserving temperatures.

Then learn the story of how scientific refrigeration safeguards health. See how the modern Frigidaire automatic refrigerator provides this necessary health protection constantly ... day and night, the year around. Be sure to visit our Food Preservation Show starting Monday.

KENTUCKY PARTIES CHOOSE NOMINEES

Louisville, Ky., August 4.—(AP)—W. Voris Gregory, member of congress from the first Kentucky district, was renominated on the democratic ticket in today's primary over Garth K. Ferguson on the face of complete, unofficial returns tonight. The returns showed Gregory 15,386 and Ferguson 11,991. Theirs was the hardest fought race in the state and Grogery will contest in November with Miller Hughes, who was unopposed for the republican nomination, the first, however, is regularly democratic by a large majority.

In the third district John W. Moore, incumbent, had a two to one lead over Thomas Rhea in the race for the democratic nomination. On returns from about half the counties in the district. These figures gave Moore 7,163, Rhea 3,169 and Miss Myrtle Paynther 298. In the republican race C. W. Roark had 1,834 votes to 1,632 for Pleas Sanders.

In the fourth district Representative Henry Dehaven Moorman was leading C. M. C. Porter 5,463 to 3,156 on the face of returns from seven of the 13 counties with two of them complete. J. D. Craddock had no opposition for the republican nomination.

In the second district Representative Kincheloe polled 3,975 votes for the democratic renomination despite the fact that his two opponents had withdrawn late in the race, on the face of returns from the eight counties, three complete. For the right to contest with Kincheloe in November three republicans all together received fewer votes than he did in this democratic stronghold. Charles McDonald had 550, Dr. J. L. Earl 493 and W. J. Jones 298.

The fifth district, composed of Jefferson county, in which Representative Thatcher was unopposed for the republican nomination, on reports from 644 of the 754 precincts Arthur Yager, 2,811 votes for the democratic nomination to 1,366 for Dr. J. I. Whittenberg.

In the seventh district Representative Virgil Chapman won the democratic nomination unopposed and Robert Blackburn was unopposed for the republican nomination. In the eleventh Representative Robinson received the republican nomination unopposed, while H. F. Reed received the democratic nomination unopposed.

Bad weather east of Lexington made it impossible to reach many of the tenth district mountain counties tonight but scattering early returns indicated the renomination of Mrs. John W. Langley by the republicans and of A. J. May by the democrats.

CANDLER FIELD IS CALLED UNSAFE

fields which have been properly improved, according to local pilots. Even the sodding which is now going forward is being done incorrectly, and will result in further bumpy surface for the landing field, it was said.

With the purpose of investigating the condition of Candler field at first hand, the writer visited the airport and consulted Beeler Blevins, hangar operator and prominent pilot. Blevins invited me to ride over the field with him in an automobile. Starting from the Blevins hangar, we eased onto the field at a moderate speed, and after crossing a few gullies and rain washes, reached the section which is now being sodded. As the car rolled over the sod at a 15-mile-an-hour clip, it was all the occupants could do to prevent their being pitched out of the car. The springs groaned ominously, and the fenders bumped wheels with threatening sounds.

Swerving to a grassy portion on the east side of the field, B'evins nearly wrecked the car in several gullies, and was forced to go at a snail's pace to avoid damage to the machine. "This is one of the runways," Blevins said. The machine jerked over to a portion where grass has been grown recently, and the rolling and pitching grew worse, if anything. Blevins narrowly averted a gulch, and bumped over rainwashes back toward his hangar. Arriving at the hangar line, Blevins asked: "If it does that to any automobile going 15 miles an hour, what will it do to a ship going 40 to 50 miles an hour?"

Wing Tip Damage.

The uneven surface of the field has been responsible for a great deal of wing tip damage, the planes dipping wings to the ground at rainwashes and in other rough spots to the extent of breakage, pilots said. And there is a bump in the middle of the field which, pilots say, may at any time cause collisions between planes as the pilots cannot see each other over the rise in time to avert a crash.

The east and west runway needs to be enlarged so as to give about 1,800 feet for taking off and landing, Blevins said. This can be done by enlarging the short runway by filling in the race track and smoothing out the field on the other side to a line of trees to the west of the field, he pointed out. The ridge in the middle of the field, which has rock outcroppings, should be taken down three feet and the dirt excavated feathered out so as to build up the outer edges of the field, giving a nearly level airport, Blevins said.

The only runway of any real service to pilots at the present time is the one at the southwest corner of the field which was used before the field was enlarged, Blevins said. The original grass on this runway has been replaced in spots with soft dirt, however, and holes are thereby easily created, he said.

Traffic congestion at the airport also needs attention, it was pointed out. Lindbergh day and similar events, where automobiles have been tied up in a jam, show the necessity of providing additional entrances and exits to the field, it was said. At present the only entrances are two in number, one the road from Whipple avenue to the middle of the western section of the race track and the other the gateway at Whipple avenue, to which lead the roads from the eastern and western sections of the race track, at the north end of the field. Whipple avenue recently has been paved, but the congestion continues when large numbers of automobiles are at the field, it was said.

Bumpy, Davis Says.

Douglas Davis, head of the Davis Flying Service, said that the field is dangerously bumpy, and liable to cause trouble to strange pilots. It is even bad to local planes, though the Atlanta pilots know what parts to avoid, he said. The field creates a hazard where there is great danger of breaking landing gear, he said. He expressed the opinion that there would be sufficient room in the field if it was smoothed out, though the east and west runway needs enlarging, he said.

M. P. Hanscom, mechanician of the Pitcairn hangar, said that the field causes tires, shock absorber coils, tail skids and other parts to wear out about three times as fast as those on other fields. Propellers do not last any time at Candler field, because they pick up rocks and are literally eaten up, he said.

"I put a new propeller in a ship ten days ago, and now its a ruin from these rocks," Hanscom said. "The suction causes a little whirlpool under the propeller, and rocks fly up, knock dents in the propeller, and soon the thing gets unbalanced and the ship sounds as though the engine was coming out."

Worst on Record.

The surface of Candler field is about the worst he knows of, and he has visited a great many airports, Hanscom said. In some places, its like going through a swamp, with hummocks of grass rocking the ships until the tips hit the ground, he said. "It's hard on experienced pilots and not fit for student work, Hanscom said. "And in the shop, we cannot overhaul a motor for the dust."

A. L. McCullough, Pitcairn instructor, said that Candler field is the roughest airport he has ever operated on, that wing tips are broken by the rough ground, and that tail skids and shock absorber coils suffer terribly. The field is in very poor condition, he said.

W. R. Vine, of Cincinnati, Ohio, of the Embry Riddle company, holders of the Chicago-Cincinnati air mail contract, said that the field is very rough in places, and that the hump in the middle should be taken down. Concrete aprons should be placed by the hangars to keep down the dust, he said.

Work Going Forward.

"We canont wave a magic wand and have the field grow up overnight," declared Alderman William B. Hartsfield, chairman of the municipal landing field committee, in discussing the condition of the field. Alderman Hartsfield admitted that the landing field is rough in spots, but said that the work of sodding the expanse is going forward as rapidly as possible.

Obtaining an absolutely smooth surface at Candler field will take a great deal of time, as nature must be depended upon to assist by growing the grass, Alderman Hartsfield pointed one. Te said that the field will be in good condition when the grassing is completed and the holes are filled in. "We are going ahead as fast as it is humanly possible with the funds available," Mr. Hartsfield declared.

The project of cutting away the hump in the middle of the field has been abandoned this year because the city has not the necessary funds and the county is unable to step into the breach, Alderman Hartsfield said. Extension of the east and west runway has also been given up for the present because the county is unable to do the work, he said.

Alderman Hartsfield said that the option for the purchase of the field from the Candlers expires in February of 1930, and that he has put council on notice to this effect.

Atlanta Airport Low in Nation's Ranking

Bumpy and filled with washes, Candler field, Atlanta's municipal airport, is a bane in the existence of all pilots who must use the field, it developed Saturday. Dangerous to life and ship, the field on which United States air mail, passenger and visiting pilots must use, is feared by the men who take-off from and land upon its surface. The photograph above, shot by Kenneth Rogers, staff photographer, from a Beeler Blevins plane last week, shows a rough surface, dusty and unsodded, filled with bumps and washes. Broken wings tips, shattered propellers and smashed landing gears, all are resulting almost every week on this field. The field ranks only "fair" in a nation-wide rating of America's airports, a rating below Macon's airport and three-fourths of the other fields in the country.

The dark line to the left from the center hangar in the above picture is a cinder track over which pilots must taxi several hundred yards before they reach the only usable portion of the field, which is located at the left, two-thirds of the way to the top of the picture. Just inside of the road junction at the top center, several pilots have found a short, fairly smooth stretch on which they can land and take-off with a light plane. This can be done on several other parts of the field, if the pilot is well acquainted with the surface. The portion around the center of the picture is now being sodded.

been shot and tossed over the hill brink. Stains were plainly visible on the papers which were sent to the police chemist for analysis.

Also the officers found in the car several beads similar to those picked up near the body. The theory advanced by detectives, who believe the stains were of blood, was that a struggle had taken place some time during the death trip.

Defense Strikes Back.

While detectives, who brought about Beitzel's arrest within a few hours after two boys found the body sought to break down the man's story, the latter's attorney struck back in defense.

Verne Hamilton, retained by Beitzel, announced he would seek shortly in court to bring about his client's release on a writ of habeas corpus. Detectives permitted Hamilton to confer freely with Beitzel, but the lawyer had no statement to make regarding what defense his client would offer. He did say, however, he understood detectives had found a quantity of poison in the bungalow in which Beitzel and the girl lived. This led to reports that Beitzel would set up a theory that the young women killed herself.

A coroner's inquest will be held Monday afternoon.

The nude body of the girl, who bore only a platinum wedding ring as a means of identification, was found in a remote spot yesterday. She had been dead more than a month. The body had been badly torn by wild animals.

Ring Is Clue.

The ring, a shield behind which the love affair between Beitzel and the girl had been concealed, was the clue that led police to his door.

The gruesome touch was added to the slaying when the county autopsy surgeon found that the bullet wound in the head of the young woman would not necessarily have been fatal had she been given immediate medical treatment.

The surgeon said it was possible that the bullet merely blinded and stunned her and that she might have lived as long as three days, finally dying slowly and in agony.

Under vigorous questioning, Beitzel told the police he had separated from his wife and his two small sons when he met Miss Mauger—whose name he first gave as Barbara Morrow—a waitress in a Philadelphia cafe. He became infatuated with her. He confessed that he stole $300 from the safe of the Philadelphia dry goods store, of which he was credit manager, and the pair came to Hollywood where they lived together.

Admits Quarrel.

Then Miss Mauger found she was to become a mother and quarrels followed, the girl asking that he obtain a divorce and marry her. On June 24, he said, while in his automobile in the hills above Hollywood, just a few hundred yards from the spot where the body was found, they had another quarrel and she leaped from the car and disappeared. That was the last time he had seen her, he declared. The day before he had borrowed a gun and gone to the same spot to practice shooting, he said.

Neighbors told the officers he returned from that June 24 ride and said his "wife" had gone and would not return. In storage, the police found a complete layette of baby clothes.

The officers said they found Beitzel had sent a bundle of his wife's clothing to a fictitious address in Phoenix, Ariz., with a fictitious return address in Sattle, Wash., on the outside of the package.

Wife Identifies Girl.

Dispatches from Lancaster, Pa., where Beitzel's wife, Mrs. Jean Mellinger Beitzel, lives with their two children, told a different story from that of her husband of the events which took place in the east. She said the slain girl was the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Mauger, of Philadelphia, and that it was the affair between Beitzel and the girl which caused her to leave her husband.

Mrs. Beitzel said Mr. Mauger had asked her to divorce Beitzel in order that he might marry Miss Mauger, who was to become a mother.

Beitzel, according to the officers who questioned him, maintained an attitude of cool indifference. Standing at the spot where the body of the girl was found, he looked up at the detectives and grinned broadly as he answered some of their questions.

Police are looking for a chorus girl with whom Beitzel is said to have become infatuated. They state that he was seen with her in a cafe on June 24, the day Miss Manger disappeared.

A woman whose name was not disclosed and who had attended a theater with Miss Mauger told police the girl had pointed out a member of the chorus and remarked that her "husband" (Beitzel) was in love with that girl.

"I don't believe I will be alive three weeks from now," Miss Mauger was quoted as having told her friend.

44 PERSONS DIE IN EASTERN CITIES

brisk cool breeze gave Washington some respite from terrific heat and humidity. None was added today to the six who were prostrated yesterday by heat. The temperature at 2 p. m. was 95.2 but the comparative lack of humidity tempered discomfort.

The outlook is for showers Sunday afternoon or night in southern New England, the middle and south portions of the middle Atlantic states, the southern Appalachian region and the east gulf states, the weather bureau forecast, and for showers tonight and Sunday in northern New England, northern New York, the lower lake region and portions of the Ohio valley. Elsewhere the weather will be fair tonight and Sunday in states east of the Mississippi river.

FLOOD FEAR GRIPS MIDDLE WEST.

Kansas City, Mo., August 4.—(United News.)—While several sections of the southwest welcomed the drenching rains of the past 48 hours as a boon to crops, other districts lived in fear of floods and prepared to evacuate lowland territories lying in the path of swollen rivers.

Already the rising waters of the past two days have caused considerable damage to railroad properties. Tracks of the Frisco and Missouri-Kansas and Texas railroads were washed out in the neighborhood of Waggoner, Okla. One passenger train was waterbound at that point for several hours today while repairs were being made to tracks and bridges.

Considerable damage also was done by a cloudburst in Mayes and Waggoner counties, Oklahoma. Railroad transportation was disrupted and high ways in the district were impassable.

A score of persons were stunned by lightning which struck a building at Carthage, Mo., but none was injured seriously. Rain fell for 14 hours and the precipitation was more than three inches.

Additional rain was forecast for tonight and Sunday. Temperatures remained near the 90 mark despite cloudy skies. Several heat prostrations have been reported in Kansas City and vicinity but no deaths.

OVERNIGHT RAINS RELIEVE CHICAGO.

Chicago, August 4.—(United News.) Chicago enjoyed slightly less torrid weather today, due to overnight rains and occasional showers during the day. More rain was threatening tonight.

Deaths directly attributable to the heat wave and storm mounted to 11 with the electrocution of Henry Schnur, killed while attempting to pump water from a flooded cellar. He came in contact with a live wire.

Expenses for Allen.

Others on the salary list included George Akerson, a secretary to Mr. Hoover, $1,800; Lawrence Richey, a representative of Mr. Hoover in the preconvention campaign, $500 and $476.71; Henry J. Brown, of the publicity staff, $469.43, and Donald M. Ewing, of the publicity staff, $507. Henry J. Allen, director of publicity, was down for $250 for "executive expenses."

The $5,000 for Horace A. Mann was itemized as "adv. exp." and it was explained that this was for advance expenses rather than for advertising. No advertising bills were listed.

Traveling expenses listed included Allen L. Holsey, Tuskegee institute, Ala., $225.

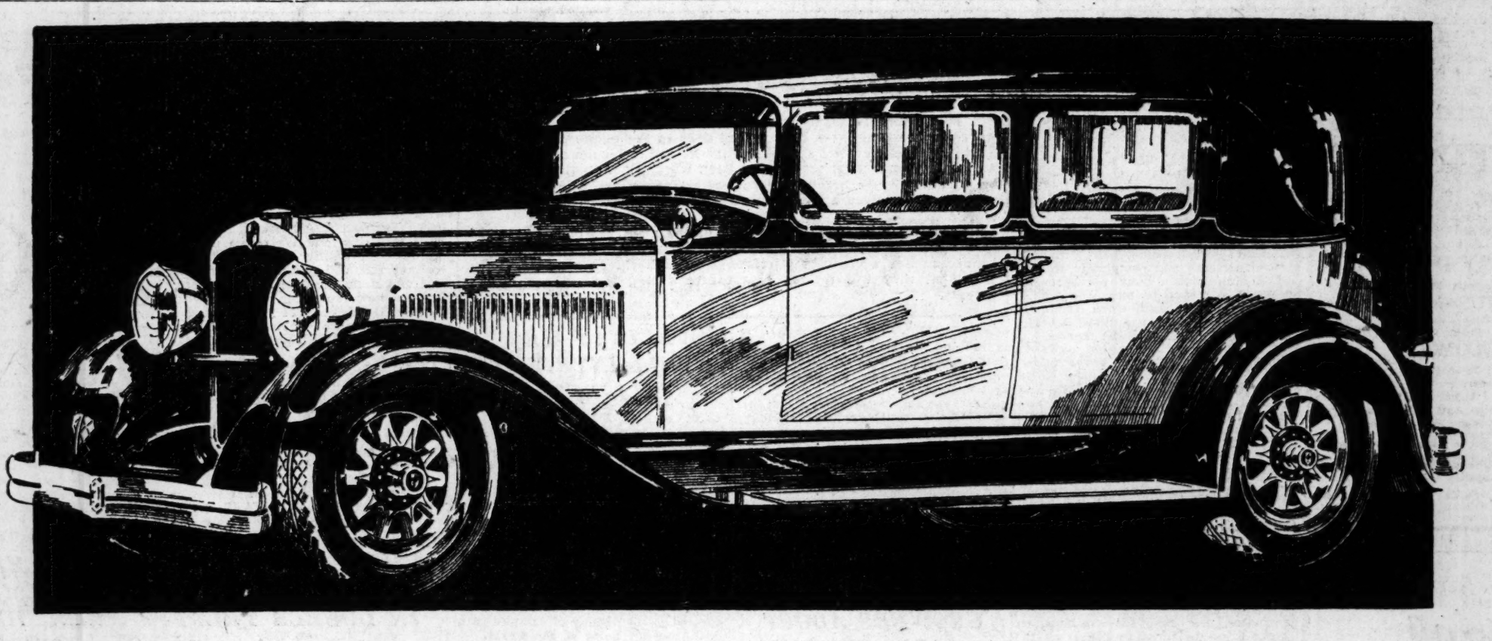

Other contributors included the Rev. E. J. Hammond, Atlanta, Ga.; M. E. Clark, Pensacola, Fla., and J. W. Long, Ashburn, Ga., $10 each.

Press the Pedal and oil your Car

Motor cars of high price, such as the Rolls Royce, prize Bijur centralized chassis lubrication as an invaluable feature.

Nash, at moderate price, has it as standard equipment on all "400" Advanced Six models.

Bijur operation is simplicity itself—and it is invariably efficient regardless of changes in temperature. There's a lever conveniently placed for your left toe at the floor board.

Simply depress it once and 21 points are automatically oiled, including all spring shackles.

Bother and expense of service station lubrication are eliminated.

Wear at all vital chassis points is avoided.

Annoying squeaks and groans are stopped before they start.

The world has a new and finer motor car, with features of excellence hitherto found only on very costly cars. Bijur Centralized Chassis Lubrication is one of them.

PUBLIC IS INVITED TO INSPECT GREAT CHEVROLET PLANT FOR FIRST TIME DURING THREE-DAY OPEN HOUSE EVENT

GUESTS WELCOME MONDAY, TUESDAY AND WEDNESDAY

Plant To Be Operated for Inspection From 7 to 9 O'Clock on Each of Three Opening Nights.

The marvels of mechanical efficiency which for four months have been veiled by the walls of the new Atlanta Chevrolet plant on Sawtell avenue, this week will be disclosed for the first time before the gaze of the public.

The Chevrolet assembly plant Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday will observe "open house" from 3 to 5 and 7 to 9 o'clock each day, during which hours the general public is cordially invited by the management to call and witness the assembly lines in action and the plant actually engaged in turning out finished Chevrolets.

Special provisions for visitors have been arranged, plans being to show them the full operations of the industry under care of guides who will explain the work of the machinery and the men. Signs will be placed over the assembly lines to identify them and the part they plan in Chevrolet assembly, and other signs will give the staggering figures that mark Chevrolet's national production, use of material, number of employees and other interesting items.

No Children Allowed.

Comfort of visitors will be amply taken care of. There will be a rest room manned by nurses to care for children while their parents tour the plant, and orchestra music will enliven the occasion. In addition, there will be a movie display on the show windows of the main building.

Plans call for entry of all visitors through the entrance of the main building, a route down the assembly lines to the rear of the Chevrolet building; a tour of the Fisher body plant and exit through the employees' entrance.

When Atlantans see the Chevrolet plant at work for the first time it will have been in production since last April 13 and will turn out cars at the rate of one a minute. The combined Chevrolet and Fisher plants employ from 1,200 to 1,500 men regularly, practically every one of whom come from Atlanta or its immediate surrounding territory.

Building a Chevrolet car starts with the motor assembly. The motor block first is placed on the line—which is in the form of an endless chain moving forward to a certain point and diving under the floor to complete its circuit and start work all over again.

Placed on the line at its beginning, the motor block moves forward on the chain to certain points where are stationed men entrusted with the commission of a single operation. One man fits on a fan belt; another checks the valves; another adds this and still another that—until at the end of the assembly line the complete motor is ready to be set into the frame.

At the end of the motor assembly line, the completed motor is raised on a hydraulic hoist and swung across an aisle to the beginning of the frame assembly line. It is "rocked" into its bed in the frame and securely fastened there. Then it starts on its forward march to final completion again.

As the frame and the motor go down the assembly line they come to positions where other Chevrolet workers are stationed. And steadily they acquire fenders and wheels and tires and other component parts of the chassis.

At this point, the assembly line of the Fisher Body corporation joins the frame assembly line—and from that point forward is the main assembly line. Bodies that are built from the smallest wooden parts, bolted, upholstered, covered and completely finished in the Fisher body plant—move along a conveyor to meet the frame assembly line. And when the two merge the bodies are lifted by air pulleys and fitted onto the frames.

The assembly line moves onward, timed meticulously and never pausing unless one of the workmen fails to do his appointed duty in his appointed time. At its end the cars are cranked under the power of their own batteries and run onto the test track. This is a long concrete affair on which the Chevrolet cars built here are subjected to careful investigation before they go to dealers and ultimately to private owners.

Built by Harry W. Celander, construction engineer of the Chevrolet Motor company, the great industrial plant cost more than $2,250,000. It covers 32 acres and has 410,000 square feet of floor space on Atlanta real estate.

Strategically located for shipping purposes, the plant is equipped to make rapid deliveries to the six southeastern states it serves, including Georgia, Alabama, Florida, South Carolina and parts of North Carolina and Tennessee.

More than $750,000 worth of parts and stock is kept on hand at all times, and this makes Atlanta the major depot for Chevrolet parts for the entire southeast. Costs of shipments of cars and parts runs into many millions of dollars in the course of a year.

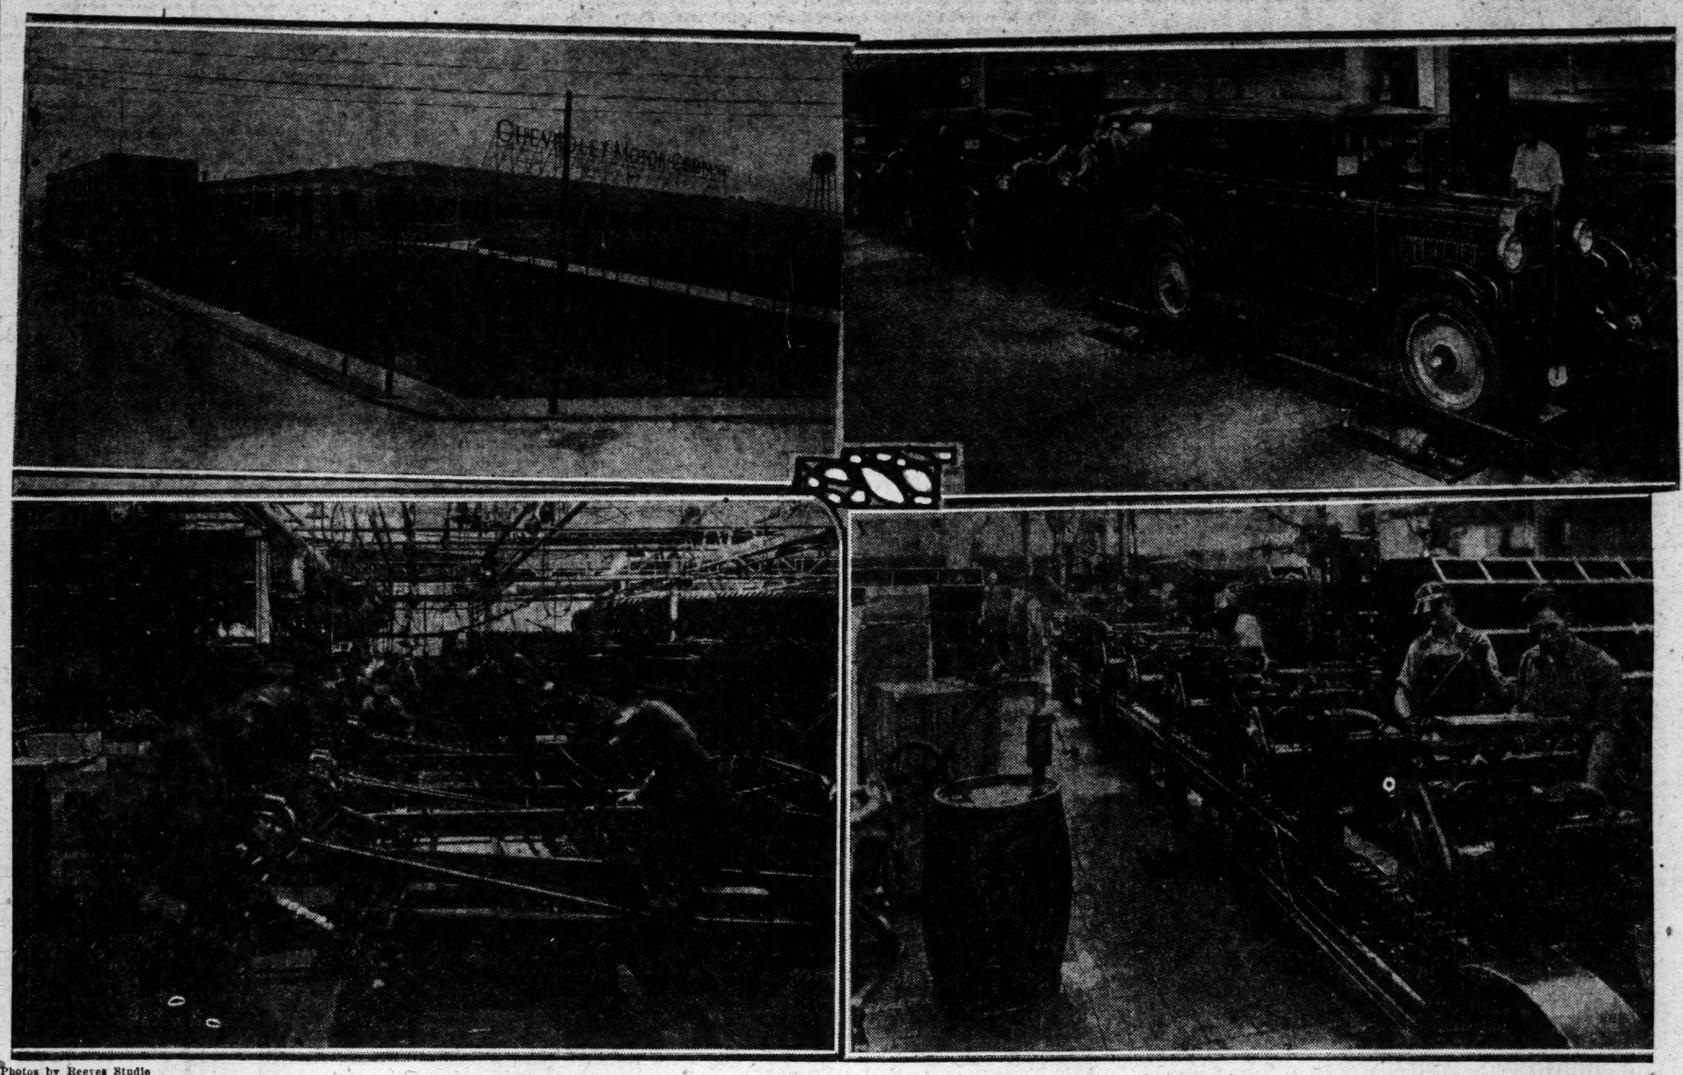

Realizing the policy of Atlanta to beautify every section of the city as much as possible, the Chevrolet Motor company has spent more than $8,000 on shrubs, grass, pine and shade trees and other things which will enhance the appearance of the plant, and instead of being a blot on the landscape they have made it attractive to look at as well as a pleasant place in which to work.

An interesting sidelight is the fact that the construction of the Chevrolet assembly plant has increased the value of the adjoining land from 300 to 400 per cent, according to L. S. Costley, sales manager for the southeastern region of the United States. It is nothing unusual to find property that formerly sold for $50 a foot now difficult to purchase for $400 a foot, he points out.

Everyone in this section is cordially invited to visit the plant Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday, and adequate facilities have been provided to take care of any size crowd, according to W. S. Roberts, plant manager.

The plant embraces six units: The main building which includes Chevrolet and Fisher body assembly, a three-story office building, driveway shed, loading dock, parts warehouse and pump house.

Great Auto Industry Which Will Entertain Visitors for First Time

Parking Space Provided for Visitors to Chevrolet Plant

Five acres of parking space, in which 5,000 automobiles may be stored at one time, have been turned over to the public during "open house" at the Chevrolet assembly plant for the convenience of visitors. An efficient numerical scheme has been worked out so that there will be no difficulty in finding the cars after inspecting the plant. Each visitor will be given a slip which will show the exact space his automobile occupies.

Also a section of the first floor of the plant has been converted into a nursery and mothers may leave their children in the care of trained nurses while they go through the plant with absolute assurance that they will receive expert care during the absence of the parents.

FLORIDA CITRUS GROWERS ADOPT JARDINE'S PLANS

Winter Haven, Fla., August 4.—(AP) Members of the Florida Citrus Growers Clearing House association have adopted proposed changes in the by-laws of their organization suggested by Secretary Jardine, of the federal department of agriculture. This announcement was made public today by Judge A. E. Walker, president of the association, after a canvass of the votes yesterday.

Only nine members voted against the amendments which would admit independent growers to the clearing house, formed to handle Florida's $50,000,000 orange and grapefruit crop. The board of directors was to meet August 9 to discuss questions of interest to citrus men, Judge Walker added.

Ballots came from members in Hawaii, Canada and 21 northern states, he said.

NOVELTY FAIR WILL INTEREST ALL RETAILERS

Any merchant visiting Atlanta at this time of the year will find it greatly to his advantage and profit if he will visit the mammoth toy, doll and novelty fair now going on at the C. E. Allen company near the Terminal station at 228 Mitchell street, S. W.

This firm has just added another large warehouse and sample room, having more than 5,000 square feet devoted to the display of samples gathered from all parts of the world.

The large lines of new and up-to-the-minute, well-selected holiday merchandise from over 100 of the leading toy and novelty makers of the world are here; and the merchant, whether he be visitor or Atlanta man, can have the opportunity of looking over the largest assortment of holiday toys and novelties ever seen in the south.

In this large assortment of new goods Mr. Allen has gathered the best for the world's markets, and the visiting merchant, should he choose, can have toys and novelties that are made in America or select those made in France, Belgium, Germany, Sweden, Switzerland, Italy, China, Japan and a score or more of other countries in all parts of the world.

Due to the great variety of toys and novelties to be seen at this big display, it will be one of the most interesting sights of the entire fall for the visitors to see. Mr. Allen and his coworkers are inviting every visiting and home merchant to come in and look their line over and to consider their display rooms their headquarters while in Atlanta.

GRIFFIN DISTRICT NEGRO BOYS' CLUB TO MEET THURSDAY

Griffin, Ga., August 4.—(Special.) Heck's Methodist Episcopal church (colored) of this city is to be the scene of the fourth annual conference of the Griffin District Boys' club, which meets here August 8, 9, 10.

Between four and five hundred boys are members of this club, and all are expected to be present. Three years ago the work among these boys began. It was born of a desire on the part of those promoting it to encourage the negro boys in every community within the district to live more serviceable lives. The district was of the opinion that a church situated in a community ought to make that community better by giving it a higher type of citizen. It began at once to encourage those things that made for self respect. The Sunday school classes were organized into corn clubs, cotton clubs and pig clubs and a special worker employed to promote the work. These boys will make reports on their corn, cotton and pigs. Each club is hoping to be the leader at the conference.

New 4-Door Wolverine Is Latest Reo Feature

Beauty of line, rich color combinations and advanced performance make the new Wolverine five-passenger sedan, recently announced, an outstanding automobile even when compared with cars much higher in price. In every detail, officials state, Reo has built into this new Wolverine utmost quality and ability to perform in a manner that will please the most critical of automobile owners. Long and low, the new Wolverine sedan is styled to meet the demand of years to come, and from bumper to bumper it reflects the trend of the highest priced automobiles.

Two standard color combinations—one of denarara brown and rose beige and one of bay berry green and mermaid gray—give the new Wolverine sedan a distinctive and beautiful appearance. Special type paneling on the sides just below the windows adds materially to the beauty of the color scheme and a new narrow type radiator gives the car an unusual streamline effect. The use of all metal sections in the rear of the body has enabled Reo designers to add new beauty to the rear end of the car and at the same time give this new Wolverine roominess and riding comfort that is unusual in a car of moderate wheel base. A luxurious interior with a vanity set and smoking outfit adds to the completeness of the new Wolverine sedan.

Nothing has been spared to make both the appearance and the quality of the car compare with the finest automobiles of the day, Reo officials state. It is completely equipped from stem to stern. New grooved type bumpers on the front and rear. Four-wheel internal expanding hydraulic brakes that insure certain stopping. Hydraulic shock absorbers on the front springs that add to the driving comfort. An advanced type of six-cylinder motor that more than meets the demands of modern travel whether in the city or on the open road. Cam and lever steering that insures perfect and easy control, and many other features have been incorporated in this new type of motor car which Reo has made available to motorists who want a moderate priced automobile, yet demand the finest performance.

3 COBB COUNTY YOUTHS ARRESTED IN DOUBLE THEFT

Three youthful residents of Cobb county were apprehended by county police on burglary charges early Saturday in connection with looting a grocery store and garage on Bankhead highway during the night.

A large quantity of pennies and $30 in silver were recovered by police, who held Charley Knight, 19; Frank Knight, 13, and Walker Kalb, 19, alleged to have had the money and a quantity of garage accessories in their possession.

Ivan Rolander told police the money was taken from his store at Bankhead and Morris Mill road, while the nearby garage of J. M. Jameson was robbed of the accessories, the proprietor said.

Kalb and the elder Knight were lodged in the Tower in default of $1,000 bonds, while the 13-year-old boy was held at the Juvenile Detention home.

VETERAN HEARST EDITOR MARRIES GIRL HE HIRED

New York, August 4.—(AP)—Victor Watson, veteran Hearst editor, was married today to Mrs. Kathleen De Sano, whom eight years ago he hired as New York's first girl newspaper photographer.

The girl, Kathleen Nolan then, left the New York American, of which Watson was managing editor, to go to Hollywood and there she married Marcel Dragusenelnu, movie director, known professionally as Marcel De Sano. They had one child. They were divorced in 1926.

A few days ago Watson relinquished his post as editor of the Daily Mirror, which he assumed after Philip Payne was lost in the trans-Atlantic airplane Old Glory, and after the honeymood will become an executive editor in the Hearst organization.

NEW YORK MAYOR RETURNING HOME FOR WORK, REST

Chicago, August 4.—(AP)—Mayor Jimmy Walker of New York city is going back to New York "to get down to work and get some rest." The New York mayor arrived in Chicago from St. Paul today "late as usual," he smilingly admitted as he told of an uncomfortable night up near the engine and an hour's delay "due to a hot box or something." Mayor Walker said he had stopped in the Canadian Rockies for a rest but had been unable to get much and was on his way home to recover from his vacation.

He refused to talk about politics, remarking crisply that "anybody who talks politics before notification ceremonies have been held is foolish." He departed for New York later in the day.

PLAN BIG CHAIN CLEANING STORES

Atlanta is to be the headquarters of another large commercial enterprise it was learned Saturday when George T. Gray, eastern capitalist and a former resident of Vermont, announced that he will open the first of a series of chain cash and carry dry cleaning stores simultaneously here and at Savannah, Augusta and Macon early this fall.

He will file a petition within the next few days in superior court asking incorporation of the new firm to be known as the "Cash and Carry Cleaning Company of Georgia." The firm will be expanded until it will reach into every state in the entire southeast, according to plans of the promoters. About 50 will be located in Atlanta in order that the service may be placed conveniently within the reach of citizens throughout the city.

The sites for a considerable number of the stores have already been selected and negotiations are under way for the leasing of several others, according to Mr. Gray. This means that cash and carry dry cleaning service will be made available to everyone in every section of Atlanta and suburbs. Mr. Gray also states that about a dozen sites for similar establishments have been decided on in Savannah and that tentative selections of sites have been made in Augusta and Macon.

Attracted to South.

Mr. Gray states that he was attracted to the south by the fine impressions he has received of the growth and progressiveness of the section and to Atlanta because this is naturally the place to make headquarters for such a large chain as he expects to establish. The south is a virgin field for the cash and carry dry cleaning idea and Mr. Gray is very enthusiastic about the possibilities of its development in this section.

While the opening of the new system of cash and carry establishments will be an innovation in the south, Mr. Gray states that it is a plan that has been worked out with much success in the north and east. In his opinion the south is ready for the development of this idea. The new chain will be amply capitalized and will be equipped to handle all classes of dry cleaning work in the most sanitary and most modern manner. Mr. Gray says that the service offered to the public will be all in the way of quality and convenience that modern research, experience and skill make possible.

Open in Fall.

It is quite probable that other cities in addition to Atlanta, Savannah, Augusta and Macon will be added to the chain from time to time and that this new Georgia company will eventually become a great south-wide chain serving every state in this section.

"I shall be ready tto open the Atlanta establishments in the early fall and will be ready for a big volume of fall dry cleaning business. I am looking forward to a very busy fall and winter for my company. I am sure that just as soon as the people of Atlanta and Georgia become familiar with the quality of our work and our very reasonable prices we shall have to keep on the jump to take care of our volume. I feel confident," continued Mr Gray, "that the decision to open this new chain in Georgia and to make Atlanta headquarters was a very wise one. I like Atlanta and am sure that I have made no mistake in coming here."

MOTHER OF EIGHT DROWNS HERSELF IN SHALLOW POND

Washington, Ga., August 4.—(Special.)—Driven to self-destruction by brooding over her continued illness with pellagra, Mrs. James Short, the mother of eight children, was found drowned in a shallow pond of water near her home at Rayle, Ga., early this morning.

Mrs. Short was about 40 years, the wife of James A. Short, well-known merchant and farmer of Wilkes county. She was at home about midnight Friday to welcome the older children back from a fishing party and was in a cheerful mood as she told her oldest son of work she had planned for him to start this morning.

When the family arose the wife and mother had disappeared and a search led to the discovery of her lifeless body in the pond. Funeral and interment will occur Sunday morning at Sardis Baptist church, near Rayle, at 10:30 o'clock.

GEORGIA FARMER MURDERS WOMAN AND KILLS SELF

Ball Ground, Ga., August 4.—(Special.)—Dot Gaddis, a farmer, living about five miles from Ball Ground, yesterday shot and killed a Mrs. Miller, who was a tenant on his place and then turned the gun on himself, killing himself.

Mrs. Miller's husband is a disabled Indian war soldier and is at the home in Johnson City, Tenn. Gaddis was about 60 years old and Mrs. Miller about 50. It is thought the trouble arose over the crop.

Wooding Heads Haas & Howell Residence Sales

Direction of the residential branch of the Haas & Howell real estate department has been assumed by N. J. Wooding, Jr., according to announcement Saturday by Edgar H. Sims, head of the real estate department. Mr. Wooding is widely known in local property circles and takes charge of the residential sales after five years of specialization in this field.

N. J. WOODING, JR.

Prior to connection with the Haas & Howell organization Mr. Wooding was in the residential sales department of one of Atlanta's prominent agencies for more than three years and had two years of real estate experience in Atlanta property transactions in advance of that. He is a native Atlantan and spent a number of years with the Retail Credit company and Western Electric company before entering the realty profession.

Gratification over the new connection was expressed by both Mr. Sims and Mr. Wooding. Due to the rapid growth of the real estate department of Haas & Howell, long established Atlanta firm, the opportunity that has been opened to the new residential sales manager is regarded as one of the most promising in that branch of the realty field. Mr. Wooding's appointment constitutes the latest expansion of the department.

BIG PLANS UNDER WAY FOR SHOOTING TOURNEY

Enough ammunition for a small military campaign will be required for the twenty-ninth Grand American Championship and Handicap tournament, which will be held on the grounds of the Amateur Trapshooting association of America, at Vandalia, Ohio, the week of August 20.

Approximately 1,000,000 shells will be fired, according to Horace Bonser, former member of the Olympic trapshooting team, who will manage the championship shooting events again this year.

The grand American handicap alone, premier event of the trap shooting world, which will be held August 24, will require more than 100,000 rounds of ammunition and as many targets. Each of the contestants—and it is anticipated that there will be over 1,000 entrants—will have 100 shots at the swiftly moving targets. The winner will receive $1,000 in gold; a beautiful Frigidaire; a $200 gold watch and a replica of the Gates trophy.

Otto Newlin, of Georgetown, Illinois, won this event last year when he broke 98 targets from the 20-yard line. He will be on hand to defend his title this year. Only two men in the history of the big events have succeeded in getting 100 breaks out of 100 shots. Riley Thompson did it in Chicago in 1910 and C. A. Young made a perfect score at the Vandalia grounds in 1926.

A crowd of at least 15,000 persons is expected to be on hand for the grand American handicap, which is not only the principal match of the tournament but has elicited especial interest among the shooters because of the value of the prizes which go to the winner.

SPARTA CHAPTER OF D. A. R. MARKING ANCIENT GRAVES

Sparta, Ga., August 4.—The Sparta chapter, Daughters of the American Revolution, are planning to mark the graves of every revolutionary war veteran in the county where the sacred spots may still be found. It will not be possible to do all of the work at one time, but the markers will be placed as rapidly as the chapter receives funds for doing this important work.

At least one governor and prominent men in days gone by sleep beneath the soil of Hancock county, many of them in unmarked graves, and the ladies expect to pay them this tribute. Much good work has already been done by the local chapter along this line, as quite a number of the markers have already been placed. A large granite boulder cut into a marker with appropriate inscription on same was set several years ago on the road between here and Greensboro which permanently marks the old Creek Indian trail in this county. The people of the city and county are justly proud of the ladies' organization and their good work.

AUGUSTA TO HOLD POLITICAL FORUM FOR CANDIDATES

Augusta, Ga., August 4.—(Special.) What is said to be one of the most unique public events in the state of Georgia and one that is attracting the attention of voters all over the state will be the result of an invitation by Augusta, Ga., to candidates who are in the race for all state offices to appear together on the same platform and speak to a large assembly of voters in this city.

This action, it is understood, is not to precipitate public debates between the opposing candidates but it is intended to serve as a public introduction and get-acquainted meeting for the candidates and the general public.

Response from the candidates has been enthusiastic and about a score have accepted the invitations.

Chicago, August 4.—(AP)—Bright prospects for big yields sent values downward today to the lowest level reached this season by any wheat or by December or March corn. September delivery of corn, although not representing the new corn crop now in the fields, was especially weak as a result of persistent selling on the part of holders.

Closing quotations on wheat were heavy, 1 1-4c to 1 3-4c net lower; corn, 1-4c to 1c down; oats, a shade to 1-4c off, and provisions varying from 2c decline to a rise of 20c.

Outdoing the season's latest previous low record, which had only been established 24 hours before, wheat values gave way from the start. Houses with foreign connections were prominent in the selling and meanwhile dispatches told of extra auspicious weather in spring wheat territory. Besides, authoritative advices said winter wheat harvesting had progressed to the northern limits of the belt with returns considerably better than expected, and that spring wheat is maturing rapidly with cutting going on as far north as the Dakotas.

On the breaks in wheat prices today, some speculative buying developed on the ground that wheat is selling below the cost of production and that present low prices will increase consumption. Closing figures, however, were but little above the day's bottom level, and for the week the market showed 61-8c to 61-2 a bushel decline. Export demand today for wheat was slow, as the Liverpool market was closed because of bank holidays and will remain closed until Tuesday.

Excellent crop advices regarding corn made it difficult to encourage buyers either of old or new corn. Leading owners of cash corn reported good sales for shipment, but they gave no actual figures. Shipment out of Chicago though totaled 261,000 bushels and vessel charters were made for 250,000 bushels of corn to Buffalo. Oats held better than other grain, notwithstanding that oats trade was light.

For the most part provisions showed little change.

Cottonseed Oil.

NEW YORK.
New York, August 4.—Cottonseed oil was quiet and steadier, closing 5 to 10 points net higher. The upturn was influenced by the firmness of cotton and the steadiness of lard, and led to covering for over the week-end and some fresh outside buying. Sales, 4,600 barrels. Prime crude nominal; prime summer yellow spot, 9.50; September closed, 9.34; October, 9.40; December, 9.50; January, 9.60; March, 9.71.

NEW ORLEANS.
New Orleans, August 4.—The cottonseed oil futures market after opening rather easier owing to pre-bureau liquidation became a trifle firmer in later trading today on the announcement that the govenment would allow for average abandonment of acreage in making its crop estimate. Prime summer yellow oil closed at 9.40, up 5 points, and prime crude closed at 7:50 to 7.75. Futures closed steady: August 8.45; September 8.49; October 8.60; December 8.62; January 8.67.

Dry Goods.

New York, August 4.—Cotton goods sales for the week exceeded production. Many mills were closed during the entire period. The markets closed fairly steady and quiet. Moderate amounts of suedes and broadcloths were bought for ladies' coats. Business on fancy tropical worsteds for men's wear for the coming spring has been fair, but staples have been quiet. More interest developed in fine and fancy fabrics for the coming spring with a larger inquiry for sample lots reported in the gray goods division.
Silks are being cut up very freely, chiefly velvets, satin and Canton crepes, and some of the high novelties in metallic silks.

Flax.

Duluth, August 4.—Flax: On track $2.13¾@2.15¼; arrive $2.13¾; arrive September $2.14; September $2.13¾; October $2.15¼.

Total stock sales 952,500 shares.

BY STANLEY W. PRENOSIL,
Associated Press Financial Editor.

New York, August 4.—(AP)—Speculators for the advance retained control of the price movement in today's brief session of the stock market, bidding up a select list of specialties to new high records. Despite the extreme heat which kept many traders away from the financial district, total sales for the two-hour session ran nearly to 1,000,000 shares.

Wall street apparently was not worried over the action of the New York Clearing House association seeking to restrict the volume of corporate loans on securities collateral. Brokers acted on the theory that there were still sufficient funds available for legitimate stock market purposes without encroaching on the needs of business and agriculture.

Week-end trade and business news was largely favorable. Bullish enthusiasm was created by reports of further improvement in the steel industry, record-breaking midsummer sales of leading automobile producers, an increase in bank clearings and announcement of recapitulization plans of Atlantic Refining company and Pittsburgh Plate Glass company.

Chrysler was again the leader of the automobile group, climbing 3 points to 86 1-2 and then slipping back about a point on realizing. Pierce-Arrow preferred recorded an extreme gain of 4 points, and Packard, Timken, American Bosch Magneto sold 2 to 3 points higher, but lost part of their gains of profit-taking.

General Motors failed to make any progress, presumably on selling inspired by an unconfirmed report that no extra dividend would be declared at next week's meeting of the directors.

New high records for the year or longer were established by American Ice, Union Carbide, American Sumatra Tobacco, Electric Auto-Lite and Motor Wheel. Mathieson Alkali ran up 5 points and Allied Chemical 3. Good demand also was noted for such issues as Congoleum, Kroger Stores, South Porto Rico Sugar and Goodyear.

Rails were quiet and featureless.

Foreign exchanges showed some improvement. Sterling was fractionally higher and the yen moved upward from yesterday's low of the year, but lire and belga were somewhat lower.

LIVERPOOL CLOSED.

Liverpool, August 4.—The Liverpool cotton market was closed on account of a bank holiday. The grain market also was closed.

New York, August 4.—(AP)—The cotton market was comparatively quiet and steady today, trading being largely for evening-up of accounts for over the week-end or in preparation for the government crop report Wednesday. December contracts sold up to 19.65 on covering, but lost part of the gain, closing at 19.54. The general market closed steady at net advances of 8 to 21 points.

The market opened steady at an advance of 11 to 21 points and worked up a few points more in early trading. Some trade buying was reported as well as covering, and there may have been some buying early on belief that the extent of the recent decline, combined with the uncertainty of the approaching government report, should entitle the market to a week-end rally.

October sold up to 19.77 and January to 19.60, net advances of 20 to 25 points on active months, but the covering movement failed to become general or urgent, and the market sagged off from the best later under realizing or reselling by recent buyers. Closing quotations showed reactions of 9 to 12 points on the active positions.

Two more private crop reports were published, one making the condition 67.8 and the indicated yield 14,300,000 bales, while the other made the condition 68.8 and the indicated yield 14,973,000 bales. Up to the close of this week 13 of these private crop reports had been published in the market here, pointing to a condition of 68.8 on the average and showing an average crop indication of 14,737,000 bales. The figures on the indicated yield, however, have ranged about 14,220,000 up to 15,240,000 bales, and the difference between the minimum and maximum view of the yield has been commented upon as tending to promote uncertainty on the showing of the government's report next Wednesday.

Owing to the holiday, there were no cables from Liverpool to influence sentiment here either way. The Liverpool market will not reopen for business until Tuesday.

The amount of cotton on shipboard awaiting clearance at the end of the week was estimated at 40,000 bales, against 47,000 last year.

NET GAINS SHOWN AT NEW ORLEANS.

New Orleans, August 4.—(AP)—The general reluctance of traders to enter upon new commitments in advance of next Wednesday's government crop report with its attendant influence on price movement held the cotton market quiet today, but the general undertone was steady with prices tending upward despite liquidation for over the week-end and in advance of the report. Closing prices showed net gains of 12 to 15 points, with the tone of the market steady.

October contracts after trading up to 19.24 or 24 points above the previous close, eased off to 19.10 and closed 2 points up from the low at a net advance of 12 points for the day.

The market was without the influence of Liverpool at the start, as that center was closed in observance of the three-day bank holiday. First trades here, however, showed gains of 16 to 20 points. The early steadiness was attributed to a report from Washington that the government would base its condition and probable yield report on the estimated acreage to be finally harvested, thus accounting for acreage abandoned during the season. This announcement somewhat modified traders' expectation of the size of the crop to be shown in the coming report.

Prices eased off a few points after the start under liquidation, but the market rallied promptly under trade buying and covering for over the week-end, December deliveries advancing to 19.25, or 21 points net up. This advance was not maintained, however, as liquidation again developed and prices made new lows, December selling off to 19.16, and closing at that figure, net 12 points up for the day.

Many Dealers Are Absent Because of Torrid Wave

New York, August 4.—(AP)—Heat and worry combined to keep the bond market quiet today. The heat kept many traders from the floor and uneasiness over the credit situation served to limit the volume of sales, although prices were somewhat firmer in reflection of the strength of stocks.

Dodge Brothers 6s again attracted most trading in the industrial group, but after opening at 97 1-8 the issue sagged to 97. American Agricultural Chemical 7 1-2s, Kayser & Co. 5 1-2s and United States Rubber 5s also moved lower, the decline probably representing week-end profit-taking. Cuba Cane Sugar debenture 8s and convertible 7s advanced about a point each, recovering more of the ground lost in the recent slump. Utilities were firmer, with American Telephone & Telegraph debenture 5 1-2s, Detroit Edison 5s and Public Service of New Jersey 4 1-2s leading the advance.

Rails were not especially active New Orleans, Texas & Mexico 5s advanced more than a point on a small turnover and Pennsylvania 7s, Frisco 4s and St. Paul 5s improved.

The foreign list was steady, but featureless.

United States government bonds again were soft. The dullness of the group, particularly the Third Liberty 4 1-2s, which are exchangeable for the new Treasury 3 3-8s issue, is said

PRODUCTION INCREASES, PRICES DROP, U. S. BANK REPORTS

POTATO MARKET SHOWS RECOVERY

Washington, August 4.—The hoped-for recovery in the potato market seemed nearer realization by the end of July. A sudden decrease of shipments, particularly from Virginia, resulted in an advance of about 25c per barrel at shipping points. Shippers in the middle west were appealing to growers and country dealers everywhere to stop the digging and shipping of all potatoes for 10 days, in order to let supplies clean up and to put markets in a better condition. Prices recently have shown an upward trend in consuming centers, and improvement in the middle west is expected to follow the strengthening of eastern markets. The only thing which may prevent any great advance of prices is the ever-increasing volume of potatoes now coming from New Jersey, Long Island and northern and western states.

Peach Shipments Heavy.

Peach movement is in full swing. Output of this product filled 8,200 cars and exceeded the movement of any other fruit or vegetable. Shipments the week before were 5,200 cars and a year ago the total was only 2,100. Georgia forwardings increased to 3,550 cars for the week; the Carolinas moved 700 cars, Arkansas 1,080, and California 2,675. New York city received 700 cars. Elbertas were carrying much better than some of the earlier varieties and weather was favorable in most of the southeastern peach districts. Under the heavy shipments, f. o. b. prices in Georgia declined to 85c-90c per crate. North Carolina Hileys and Belles brought only 75c per crate or 50c per bushel basket in the Candor region, but ring-packed bushels of Elbertas brought $1.10-$1.25 in eastern Texas. City consuming centers reported a range of $1-$2 on Georgia Elbertas and $1.50-$2 on Arkansas arrivals. Belles from Georgia ruled 85c-$1.75, while Hileys and Belles from North Carolina sold at $1-$1.50. First cars of Tennessee peaches have already moved, and 3,000 cars are expected from that state, compared with 500 last season.

Eastern Potato Prices Advance.

As the active season for eastern shore potatoes approached an end, markets showed signs of strengthening. East Shore Virginia shipments dropped sharply last week to 2,150 cars, while Maryland forwardings increased to 675. Kansas shipped 350 cars and Missouri 215. Total from all states was only 3,925 cars, compared with 5,480 the week before and 4,420 cars during the same period last season. Local reports from the eastern shore indicate that some 2,000 carloads of potatoes may be stored there for future shipment, because of the relative weakness of the market and the present low prices. One grower has stored quite a lot of barrels of potatoes under a large tent; sweet potato storage houses also are being utilized. By the end of the week, the f. o. b. price had advanced to $1.40 per barrel and terminal markets quoted a range of $1.25-$2.40. Barrels of Long Island Cobblers trucked into New York city brought $2-$2.50. New Jersey stock was jobbing at 75c-$1 sacked per 100 pounds, while Delaware and Maryland arrivals in Philadelphia brought 75c-90c. Some growers in the Kaw valley of Kansas are leaving fields undug, because of the very low returns of 40c-45c per 100 pounds. The f. o. b. range in that district was 50c-55c, and the Chicago carlot market quoted Kansas and Missouri Cobblers at 75c-90c. Prices of mid-western potatoes in other cities were somewhat higher than those in Chicago.

Melon Prices Low.

Shipments of watermelons decreased rapidly to 4,600 cars, of which Georgia furnished 2,285, South Carolina 1,080, Texas 425 and California 430 cars. Most of the decrease was in Georgia and Texas. Markets have been sluggish and weak, under the heavy receipts and rather inferior quality and condition of some arrivals. New York received 700 and Chicago 500 cars during the past seven days. Tom Watsons were bringing only $75-$140 per carload at central Georgia shipping points, while Dixie Belles returned $60-$100. These southeastern melons ranged $150-$300 per carload or 20c-35c per melon in city markets, though Detroit quoted some sales on a unit basis as high as 60c. Shipping-point values in northern and eastern Texas advanced slightly to 50c-75c bulk per 100 pounds, and Kansas City reported this stock at $1.10-$1.25 per 100 pounds or $225-$275 per carload.

Cantaloupe prices were still moderate, though shipments decreased one-third to a total of 1,440 cars for the week. Central California started 700 cars to market while Arkansas shipped 300 and North Carolina 150. Arizona is about finished, with a season record of 5,200 cars, compared with 4,600 last year. Cantaloupe movement was getting under way in Virginia, Maryland and Indiana. Flat crates from California could be had as low as 50c-$1.50, and standard crates of Turlock section melons ruled $1.75-$2.75 in terminal markets. Baltimore dealers quoted east shore Maryland arrivals at $1.25-$1.75 per standard crate, but best South Carolina stock sold at $2-$2.25 in Washington. North Carolina green meats were weak at 50c-$1. Late arrivals from Arizona—salmon tints—ranged $1.25-$2 in consuming centers, compared with Arkansas cantaloupes at 75c-$1.75. Fort Worth quoted bushel baskets of local Texas melons at 25c-50c. Condition of the cantalope crop is 90 per cent of normal, or 14 points higher than a year ago.

Onion prices were very moderate, but lettuce still ruled fairly high. Good lettuce was in demand; much stock of inferior quality was reaching city markets. Shipments of string beans were very limited, but home-grown supplies are rapidly increasing. Plantings of beans in six fall shipping states are 20 per cent lighter than last season, or only 7,300 acres. Forwardings of cucumbers dropped to 260 cars during the week, chiefly from New Jersey, Delavare and Maryland. Most of the carlot supply of cabbage was coming from Virginia and Iowa, but only 140 cars were shipped. The f. o. b. market for Colorado cabbage was dull at 50c per 100 pounds. Tomatoes were selling somewhat lower than the week before; four-basket crates from Tennessee brought 60c-75c in city markets. About 640 cars of tomatoes rolled, and Tennessee, Ohio, Maryland and Missouri were the principal sources. Bushel baskets of green peas from New York state declined to a jobbing range of $1-1.75, while the 45-pound crates from Colorado and Washington ruled $4.25-85 in Chicago. The Colorado shipping-point price was $3-$3.50.

Fruit of various kinds was plentiful. Pear shipments from California increased to 1,340 cars. Grape output for the week totaled 700 cars, as agaist 430 a year ago. Apple forwardings decreased temporarily to 440 cars from the west and 400 from the east. Shippers of California Gravensteins were having some difficulty in maintaining the prices they originally asked. Eastern apples dropped to 50c-$1 per bushel basket, but Illinois transparents still brought $2-$2.25, in Kansas City. Total movement of 28 fruits and vegetables decreased to 26,990 cars, which was 1,700 less than the week before, but fully 6,000 more than during the same period last year.

Californian Hears Lille.

Lille, August 4.—(AP)—The radio station here has received a letter from M. MacDonald, Chula Vista, Calif., indicating that he had heard the local transmitter on 264 meters.

Blow by blow descriptions of boxing matches held at Ebbetts field, Brooklyn, N. Y., are broadcast each Wednesday evening by WGBS, New York.

Constitution Swimming Meet To Be Held Labor Day

Breast Stroke Is Explained By Miss Lane

Position of Arms and Legs Important in Performing Stroke.

(Editor's note: Jewell Lane, instructor of the Atlanta municipal pools, in this issue tells of the breast stroke, one of the most difficult of all strokes to master. She has taught hundreds to swim since the city-owned pools opened this spring and in future articles will discuss life-saving methods.)

BY JEWELL LANE.

In previous articles, I have discussed the trudgeon crawl and the back strokes, and today am going to talk of the breast stroke.

The head is held under water in swimming the standard racing breast stroke except at the end of the arm drive when it is raised to inhale.

When the body is in starting position for the stroke, it lies flat on the surface of the water, face submerged, arms outstretched above the head and resting on the water, palms down, thumbs touching, legs straight and close together with the feet pointed.

When the arm drive is begun the hands are turned so that they form an angle of approximately 120 degrees. The arms then are driven vigorously downward and outward describing an arc of about 60 degrees. When this operation is completed the hands should be about 12 inches under water. Here the hands are brought inward, retaining the pressure on the water. Then the elbows are moved close to the sides. Hands are thrust to the chest and turned palms downward with the fingers pointed ahead. From this position the arms are thrust forward to the starting position again.

As the arms are performing their part of the operation and complete their drive the legs are set in motion. Simultaneously the legs bend, and the knees and feet are drawn apart. Then with virtually a single movement, the legs are straightened out and whipped together vigorously. The kick should give an opening of from 15 to 20 inches and the legs should be brought into position for the kick, known as the frog kick, gently to prevent undue water resistance.

The kick should be so timed that the closing and propelling act occurs as the arms are about to obtain their full reach. This will place the body in the starting position for the next stroke.

Breathing should be done as follows: inhaling should take place when the downward pressure of the hands forces the shoulders upward. This permits the head to be lifted above the surface of the water easily, and exhaling should be done while the stroke is progressing, preferably through the nose.

The head and shoulders should be held rigid in the breast stroke, and as the stroke is finished the swimmer will be able to glide on the impetus secured from the forward propelling motion.

PELS GO UP.

New Orleans, August 4.—New Orleans took both ends of a double-header today from Chattanooga, the opener, 4 to 3, in 12 innings and the second, 4 to 2, in five innings. The second game was called after the fifth because of darkness. Phil Collins went all the way in the opener, holding the Lookouts to six hits.

VOLS BEAT BEARS.

Mobile, Ala., August 4.—The Vols won a close 3-to-2 game from the Mobile Bears today. Glasner and Frey staged a pitchers' battle for seven innings. Glasner cracked in the eighth when the visitors did all their scoring. The Bears scored two runs in the ninth and left the tiening and winning runs on the bases when Frey pitched out of a bad hole.

THREE 'BEARDED BEAUTY' STARS

The three bewhiskered gentlemen pictured above are the trio of House of David stars who play the leading roles in the "pepper game" to be staged prior to the baseball game Wednesday at Spiller's park, when the famous team meets the Buick amateur outfit. The three players above give an exhibition of ball juggling prior to each game they play on their tour of the United States. The House of David team has a very enviable record in the southeast, having played seven teams in the past ten days winning all seven of the games. They are reading from left to right: Smith, Ayers and Perez.

COMSTOCKERY, AN OUTSIDER, WINS FEATURE

New York, August 4.—(AP)—Ridden hard and pressed at the finish by no fewer than three rivals, a rank outsider, Comstockery, owned by Mrs. Payne Whitney, galloped off with the United States hotel stakes, worth $13,275, today in a thrilling race that featured Saratoga's card.

Driving hard and only a nose to the bad came G. D. Widener's Jack High with the Glen Riddle Farm's Battleship Grey third and the Loma stable's Twink fourth. Crowding in the stretch hurt the chances of Twink. Battleship Gray and Jack High suffered but Comstockery ran clear of the tangle and won on his merits. The six furlongs were run in 1:13.

In the fourth race, the Miller stakes, worth $5,325, Mrs. John D. Hertz' Kentucky Derby winner, Reigh Count, scored an impressive victory in his eastern debut. It was Reigh Count's first start since the Derby in which he was kicked at the post. He showed he had returned to top form by taking some of the east's leading three-year-olds into camp today. Gerard took the place, two lengths back of the leader and four lengths ahead of Penalo, the show place winner. Reigh Count ran the mile and three-sixteenths in 1:59.

Martie Flynn, owned by Stuyvesant Peabody, won the $5,000 Hawthorne special handicap at a mile and one-sixteenth. Seven scratches reduced the field to four, Blackwood taking second, Solace third and Blassfield fourth and last. The time was 1:49 2-5.

The Creech stable's Cameo took the $3,000 Cleveland News handicap, day's feature at Bainbridge. Peter Parley was second and Broad Axe third. The mile and one-sixteenth was covered in 1:49 1-5.

Reigh Count Wins After Long Lay-Off

Saratoga Springs, N. Y., Aug. 4.—(United News.)—Reigh Count, winner of the Kentucky derby, made his first start since that race today and again demonstrated his great qualities as a thoroughbred.

After his long lay-off, the Hertz colt won the thirty-ninth running of the Miller stakes in convincing fashion, leading George D. Widener's Gerard to the wire by more than a length. L. Waterbury's Penalo was third, followed by the Wheatley stable's Divolo. W. S. Kilmer's Sun Beau, second choice in the betting, stopped badly and finished last.

National League

GIANTS DOWN REDS TWICE.

New York, August 4.—The Giants advanced a game nearer the Cardinals by sweeping both ends of a double-header against the Reds here today, 13 to 3, and 10 to 9, while the league leaders were dividing a pair in Boston. The Cards now lead the Giants by five and one-half games. The double victory gave New York four straight in the Cincinnati series.

In the first game the Giants knocked Eppa Rixey out of the box in the seventh inning and continued their attack against Ray Kolp, while Vic Aldridge was holding the Reds at bay. The second clash was one of many pitchers and more hits—20 for the Giants and 19 for the Reds. Benton finally saved the decision for New York.

Lindstrom got a homer in the opener, and Welsh and O'Doul followed suit in the nightcap. The Reds ran their double play total to 133 as Hughey Critz extended his consecutive-game hitting streak to 23.

LEADERS BREAK EVEN.

Boston, August 4.—After the league-leading Cardinals had gained a 3-to-2 verdict over Boston in the first game of today's double-header in 10 innings, the Braves defeated Alexander, 2 to 1, in the finale. Both games were well pitched. Brandt held the visitors to four hits in the first game and fanned nine, but in the tenth St. Louis made a hitless run on a base on balls, a bunt, a steal of third by Pinch Runner Martin and Haines' grounder to Bell which Martin beat to the plate. St. Louis' single run in the second game came from Bottomley's home run drive over the right field fence. It was his twenty-fourth homer of the season and put him in a tie with Hack Wilson, of Chicago, for the National league home run leadership. Boston made two in the seventh inning on four singles and R. Smith's sacrifice fly.

CLEAN SWEEP FOR BUCS.

Philadelphia, August 4.—Pittsburgh made a clean sweep of its four-game series with the Phillies by winning a double-header today by the scores of 14 to 8 and 11 to 4.

The Pirates maintained the hitting clip that distinguished their playing against the tail-enders and by scoring 25 runs today ran up their total to 57 runs for four games.

Glenn Wright sent the Pirates ahead in the seventh inning of the opening game by hitting his second home run of the game with one on base. Grantham also hit a home run in this game, as did Klein and Whitney, of the Phillies.

Fred Brickell hit for the circuit in the close and so did Don Hurst, who cracked his eighteenth of the year, and Chuck Klein, who hit his second of the day.

Ernest Quigley, veteran National league umpire, was forced to retire because of the heat, at the opening of the second game. He was behind the plate in the first game.

Crackers Drop Second Game, 8-2, and Even Series Count

Three Hurlers Are Routed By Travelers

Niehoffers Invade Memphis for Game With Chicks Today; Eckert Goes Well.

BY BEN COTHRAN.

Lumbering about the field with all the lithesome grace of an aged bull elephant taking a mud bath, your Crackers Saturday managed to lose the ball game to Little Rock by a score of 8 to 2.

Possibly this needs explanation. Direct the accusing finger toward pitcher Eckert, of Little Rock, for we "seen him when he done it."

For seven innings Mr. Eckert allowed Atlanta five hits so widely scattered that you could hardly find them. Towards the last, when the Crackers scored their two runs, he weakened, being touched for six hits in two innings. But all the Crackers could get out of 11 hits was two runs.

Cast-Offs Battered.

Meantime, the local cast-offs received rude treatment at the hands of Little Rock. First Rube Robinson, who pitched for 49 and one-half years at Little Rock before coming to Atlanta, went out to see what could be done about it and came back to the dugout in the fourth inning, with the Travelers still at bat, and announced that it was a hopeless job.

Mr. George Dumont, another Traveler cast-off and optimistic to a fault, bustled out to the mound and fared a little better than did his coworker, Mr. Robinson. Having done with the Rube in four innings with six hits and five runs, the Travelers got five hits and three runs off Dumont in four more.

Dumont retired in favor of a pinch-hitter in the ninth and Art Olsen succeeded him, giving up one hit. That made three for Atlanta and who'll pitch today in Memphis the Skipper doesn't know. That will be decided on the long hop to the Bluff City where the Crackers play the Chicks this afternoon in a one-game series, coming back here tomorrow to take up where they left off with Little Rock.

Crax In Second.

No matter what happens in Memphis today from a riot to the Crackers' losing, nothing can dislodge the Georgians from second place. For while Little Rock was battering and pounding the two cast-offs all over the lot, Birmingham was giving Memphis a severe 9-6 licking, which leaves the Chicks still a game and a half behind the Crackers.

For the first three innings yesterday Mr. Robinson made quite a game of it, matching balls and strikes with those thrown over by the effective Eckert.

In the fourth a typhoon of base-hits swirled and twisted across the field. When it had passed over, gone from the scene was John Henry, five runs were chalked up for Little Rock where there had been none before and it began to appear that school was out for the Crackers and they might go home and get ready for supper.

It took less time to score those five runs than it usually takes to score a couple. Oliver began it by singling to center. Weiss laid down a sacrifice bunt and Oliver bounced down to second. Klinger and Rube fussed around at the plate until the former had two strikes on Klinger. The next pitch hit the rubber, bounded back to the grandstand and Klinger, having swung at the ball, went to first and Oliver to third. Then Gooch slammed one to Gilbert, it bounced off his leg, Oliver scored, Klinger went to second and Gooch was on first.

That was just a sputtering. The fireworks began shortly. Blair singled to right, scoring Oliver and Klinger. Then Cronin doubled to left so that Blair might come home and Dickey followed this up with a single that scored Cronin. Dumont came in to pitch, Eckert sacrificed Dickey to second and when Dickey tried to steal third he was out, Brook to Gilbert. That was all of that.

Klinger's single and Gilbert's wild throw scored another run in the sixth. Then in the seventh four singles and another wild throw scored two more runs.

The Crackers opened up in the eighth when Walter Gilbert dumped the ball in left field and it hopped up in the bleachers for a home run. There were, of course, two men out when this happened. Two singles, followed the four-base blow, but nothing came of them. It was the same way throughout the game. The Crackers couldn't get their hits connected, due to the constant effort of Mr. Eckert.

In the ninth, after the usual two outs had been made, Johnny Brock bounced the ball off third base and was safe at first. Skipper Niehoff elected to hit for Olsen and doubled to left, Brock stopping at third. He paused momentarily and then scored when Gooch threw the ball into right field. After Zoeller singled to left, sending Niehoff to third, Gilbert flew to center and it was all over.

Johnny Brock is putting the ball on Klinger, attempting to score from third after Blair flew out to Blethen in left field in Friday's game.

'Jumbo' Barrett Asks Chick Fans To Be Good Sports

There has been much speculation in the minds of Atlanta baseball fans as to the treatment of the Crackers in Memphis when they meet the Chicks in the Bluff city this afternoon. Many had the opinion "that it would be just too bad" for the Atlantans when they made their appearance in Russwood park again. Some held the contention that another "Battle of Atlanta" would be reenacted when the Crackers arrived in Chicktown. And, to a certain degree, because of the tenseness and roughness of the recent Memphis-Atlanta series, these contentions and opinions might have some foundation.

In the midst of all these predictions comes the following message which is expected to oil the troubled waters. "Jumbo" Barrett, who had the misfortune of breaking his leg during the final Chick-Cracker game and who is now convalescing at the Georgia Baptist hospital, dispatched the following telegram to his home town fans. His message:

"To Memphis fans:
"The Atlanta club will be over Sunday and I want the fans and all the fellows to treat them nice. I don't hold anything against any of the boys. I don't believe that Cullop intended to injure me. It was just one of those bad things that happen in baseball. While I am here at the Georgia Baptist hospital thinking of the game and you fellows I'll consider it a special favor to me if you will forget that anything has ever happened to me. Let's beat them playing ball and treat them clean and white. My leg is not paining me so much now and I am feeling a great deal better. Best wishes to all the fans.
"JUMBO BARRETT."

It can be readily discerned that the star Memphis backstop is a true sportsman, a believer in fair play. His plea is likely to have much bearing on this afternoon's matinee when the Chicks and Crackers tie up before a large crowd of Bluff city fans, who are no doubt, muchly irritated over the outcome of the recent four-game series at Spiller's park.

Following today's contest the Niehoffmen will board an eastbound "rattler," arriving back home early Monday to resume hostilities with the Little Rock Travelers at the dell Monday afternoon.

GOOSE EXPECTS WINTER REST TO CURE ARM

Washington, August 4.—(AP)—If "Goose" Goslin, slugging Washington outfielder, is able to even raise his throwing arm when the season ends he believes he will be able to get it back in shape with the rest cure before next year.

Goslin, who consistently has led both major leagues in hitting this season, is and has been for some time a "lame duck." Too strenuous work during the spring training period just about ruined the big hitter's wing. But he is confident the rest from September to March will restore his once deadly peg.

Club officials realized long ago that they should give Goslin a vacation until his arm improved, but they found they simply could not spare a player who has hit around .400 all year.

Goslin manages to get along in the field with the help of fellow outfielders and the infielders who, the minute a ball is hit in Goslin's direction, race toward him to make the relay to the infield.

This arrangement is far from satisfactory from a fielding standpoint and opposing teams score many runs they otherwise would not get. But the big slugger has been getting these runs back and more too and since he is perfectly willing to stay in the game to try to help Bucky Harris's club out of the mire, the club officials permit him to do so.

Patsey Holds Lead At End of First Day

Gosport, England, August 4.—(AP) The American boat Patsy, held a short lead at the end of the first day's racing for the international cup. Skipper Joe Weaver of the Patsey and A. Jones, owner and skipper of the British defender, Little Nell, furnished a keen competitive struggle, first one and then the other forging ahead.

The American boat led with a score of 35 for the first day while the British craft scored 31. The French yacht, Argo, with Jacques Sottas, as skipper, was third with a score of 12. German and Swedish boats withdrew.

Enthusiastic.

All of Spain is getting enthused over sports. Boxing is popular everywhere and 'El Futbol' is beloved everywhere in the land of Cervantes.

HELEN JACOBS WINS TOURNEY AT SEABRIGHT

Seabright, N. J., August 4.—(AP)—Miss Helen Jacobs, of Santa Barbara, Calif., won the women's singles of the Seabright invitation tennis tournament today in straight sets by defeating Miss Marjorie Gladman, Santa Monica, star of the University of Southern California, 9-7, 6-3.

Dr. George King and Watson Washburn, New York veterans of many tennis wars, defeated Wallace Johnson, Philadelphia, and Fritz Mercur, Bethlehem, Pa., who have the right to wear several service stripes, in the finals of the men's doubles in straight sets, 6-4, 6-3, 6-3.

Miss Marjorie Morrill, of Dedham, Mass., and Berjeley Bell, of Austin, Texas, captured the title in the mixed doubles through a victory over Miss Gladman and Louis Thalheimer, of Dallas, Texas, 6-2, 5-7, 6-3.

Miss Jacobs becomes the youngest Seabright champion at 20 and succeeds to the toga of Mrs. Molla Mallory.

Washburn, of the winning doubles team, has been three times before a member of a winning team here, in 1920, 1921 and 1922. Neither member of the winning mixed doubles team ever has held Seabright titular honors.

PUBLIC LINKS GOLF CHAMP RETAINS TITLE

Philadelphia, August 4.—(AP)—Carl Kauffmann, the lanky Pittsburgh golfer, is still national public links champion.

In the final round of the championship today, on the Cobbs Creek municipal course here, he buried Phil Ogden, of Cleveland, under a barrage of near par golf, 8 and 7, to retain the title he won last year at Cleveland.

Kauffmann, who has been finalist in the championship three times in the last three years, won the first five holes in the morning round, and Ogden, though playing stubbornly was never in the match thereafter.

Stroking the ball from the tee, and through the fairways like a mechanical man and putting with a putter that could never err, Kauffmann was never under the slightest strain. Ogden surpassed him from the tee on most holes but could not match the champion in his deadly accuracy of approaching and putting.

At the turn of the morning round, Kouffmann was six up. He had increased this to 8-up when the match was recessed for lunch.

On the nineteenth and twentieth holes, Ogden rallied to score birdies and win both holes but Kauffmann would not yield more of his advantage and immediately set to work to regain some of his lead.

He was 7-up at the afternoon turn and after halving the twenty-eighth hole, won the twenty-ninth with a par 5 to close the match.

Kauffmann, the first player ever to win the public links title twice, is 32 years old and a stenographer. Ogden, a year his senior, is assistant superintendent of Cleveland's street railways.

Le Roux Tossers Defeat Kirkwood

After losing five games by one run the LeRoux Motors jumped on the fast Kirkwood team with a vengeance Saturday afternoon and reversed the one-run jinx winning a hard-fought game by the score of 13 to 12. The LeRoux boys bobbled afield in the fourth inning allowing seven Kirkwood runners to cross the rubber and then settled down to some fast snappy ball and finally winning an uphill battle by scoring two runs in the ninth inning. Barron, who started for the Motors, was a trifle wild but kept his hits scattered while Stonecypher, who took up the burden with the score 11 to 5 against him, held the Kirkwood batters in check while the LeRoux boys kept hammering away at McGuffey. Barren was the hitting star of the game, hitting two home runs each time with a man on base. Jones made four hits, one of them a triple, and Tolbert accepted seven chances in left field and also made three very timely hits. This is Kirkwood's first defeat of the season.

HAWK-EYE-ING SPORTS

BY DICK HAWKINS

Welcome Announcement.

The Constitution makes an announcement this morning in its sports section which will answer an important question for the swimmers of Atlanta's municipal pools. The Constitution WILL again stage its annual city championship swimming meet at Piedmont on Labor day. The huge meet will be run off with the cooperation of the parks department, as usual, and The Constitution will offer medals for all place winners and cups for high point winners in all classes.

Year by year a very noticeable increase in competitive swimmers is noticeable in the Atlanta pools. The first year The Constitution held its swimming meet the entry list included only about 50 swimmers of all classes. The second year there were more than 75, and last year it took all afternoon to run off events for more than 100 natators. Judging from the number of phone calls and requests for information received at this office during the past few weeks the entry list this year will be even larger than usual.

The city championship meet staged by The Constitution has purpose much more comprehensive than a mere competitive event at which a few swimmers and divers win medals and acclaim. It has as its purpose the development of swimming in Atlanta and that such a result has been gained is evident by the growing interest in swimming.

The athletic heads of the Atlanta Athletic club, whose swimming team has carried away all the honors in the southeast for many years, believe sufficiently in the good work of The Constitution along this line to have representatives at all the annual swimming meets for the purpose of "scouting" the swimmers. During the past few years many natators have been selected for training by the club, and it is their avowed purpose to offer instruction to any swimmers they find in the competition who show promise of future greatness.

New Promoter.

We are informed by the boxing commission that a new promoter has applied for a license to stage boxing matches in Atlanta and they are now considering his application. Let us express a fervent hope that a promoter is about to appear who will be able by some hook or crook to lure the fans from the firesides to see boxing bouts.

A number of cards have been produced in the recent past which have offered much of pleasing quality, but the fans failed to respond. The game has "gone sour" in Atlanta and it will take considerable sweetening that will flavor the pudding satisfactorily is the expenditure of considerable money by some promoter. We do not know the new promoters' name, nor his business, nor his address, but let us take this opportunity to suggest publicly that he will have to spend money to get good boys here if he wishes to draw a house, and the first few expenditures will not be repaid in kind at the box office.

We still are possessed with enough childish faith to believe that Atlanta fans will respond in time to good boxing cards. But it will take time. If some promoter were to match Al Smith and Herbert Hoover here next week the fans wouldn't turn out for fear of having Nick Altrock and Pussyfoot Johnston substituted at the last moment.

MANY FANS ENTERING  WORLD SERIES CONTEST  AS TIME DRAWS NEAR

With only a short time remaining until the questions are printed from which the winner of a free trip to the world series or the optional prize of $200 will be determined many eleventh hour contestants are declaring themselves. Everyone is eligible to compete. The prospective entrant need only secure a copy of "The National American Fan" along with the back scores and unusual events in the National and American leagues from the beginning of the season. This booklet can be obtained by sending 50 cents to National American Fan, Atlanta Constitution, Atlanta, Ga. The booklet itself contains spaces for listing all information necessary to supply the correct answers to the questions appearing in the Sunday paper about September 1. In addition it gives considerable interesting baseball information and many photographs.

No baseball expertness is essential to become winner of the generous prize. With the back scores and future information appearing in The Atlanta Constitution anyone can figure out the proper answers. The best reply, as determined by a board of impartial judges, will be based on accuracy and appearance.

The dream of many a baseball fan is to some day see an entire world series. That dream is about to be realized by some successful reader of The Constitution. Or, if such a trip is not possible for the winner, a prize of $200 in ready cash will be awarded.

There is very little time left in which to prepare for the big prize. In a short while the entry list will be closed and those who are late will win nothing but regrets. It is well, therefore, to delay no longer. A copy of "The National American Fan," with back scores, will be forthcoming upon receipt of 50 cents at the headquarters oof National American Fan, The Atlanta Constitution, Atlanta, Ga.

July 28—Chick Hafey in the doubleheader between St. Louis and Philadelphia got six hits in a row.

July 29—Cleveland defeated the Yankees, 24 to 6, Hodapp and Sewell leading Cleveland's hitting with five hits each. A total of 27 hits, only three for extra bases.

July 30—The Phillies and Cardinals engaged in a 16-inning game, requiring four hours to play, Philadelphia winning. Cleveland made it three out of a four-game series by defeating the Yankees, 4 to 2.

August 1—Johnson pitching for the Yankees allowed the Browns only seven hits, while he himself was getting five hits in five times up. The St. Louis Browns took a 15-inning game from the Yankees, while Philadelphia was winning, thus reducing the Yankee lead to four and one-half games.

KIRBY SMITH WINS LEGION BALL TOURNEY

Orlando, Fla., August 4.—(AP)—Kirby Smith, Jr., baseball team of Jacksonville, will contest the right of Tampa's all-stars to enter the district American Legion tournament in Atlanta.

After winning from St. Petersburg yesterday, Kirby-Smith came back in the second game today to clinch the second tournament under the auspices of the American Legion.

Just before the final game of the regular tournament yesterday, Paul A. Hoxie, senior vice commander of the legion in Florida, ruled Tampa and Miami, the finalists, ineligible for further play and put Kirby-Smith and St. Petersburg in a new tournament. The Jacksonville team defeated St. Petersburg, 8 to 2, yesterday.

St. Petersburg came back this morning to even the series by taking the contest, 7 to 2, pounding the offerings of Fernety, Williams and Gregory for 10 hits. Kirby-Smith collected both its scores in the first inning when Floyd drove out a homer with one on.

In the afternoon game, the Jacksonville players took advantage of breaks when the west coast team blew up in the sixth and seventh and held off late rallies to get a 7 to 6 verdict.

HAPPY HUNTER REAL PUNCHER, SAYS MANAGER

One of the hardest slugging negroes in the south in his class. That is the claim of Billy Lotz for his boy, Happy Hunter, who is the holder of the 175-pound crown of Dixie and who meets Charles Booker Monday evening at the auditorium annex in one of the two main bouts of Bill Hooper's show.

His record is Captain Billy Lotz's reason for proclaiming his star high in his class. Victories by the kayo route over Clarloe King, Eddie Cox-Cecil Flowers, Tex King, Bid Johnson and Battling Jimmie. And his showings against such boys as the late former middleweight champion, Tiger Flowers, Bob Lawson, Homer Robinson and Battling Mims is impressive.

Booker is out to give him a real scrap, though, and believes Lotz's protege will have a lively evening of it. As to the two other main participants, Cowboy Kid and Kid Miller, have been matched.

In the two six-round tussles the fans will have the chance to witness four hard punching young negroes in action. Joe Petty meets George Rains and Gene Thomas tackles Willie Reynolds.

Rivalry in Home Prepares Youth For Big Chance

Seattle, Wash.—(AP)—A kid brother's ambition to excel his oldest brother in sports since grammer school days gave Herman Brix the impetus to come within a quarter of an inch of the then world's mark of 51 feet in the shot put, a feat that placed him on the American Olympic team.

The strongest rivalry prevailed between Egbert and Herman Brix all during their school day sports.

Egbert was a little better than his brother until they entered the University of Washington.

He was two years older and at the time Herman enrolled was the University's best shotputter.

Egbert would heave the shot 42 feet and Herman 40. Day after day they tossed the ball, always striving to beat each other.

Before long Herman had equalled his brother's longest put. After that Egbert didn't turn out every day but Herman kept on.

When Herman reached 44 feet, his brother laid his track suit aside. That was two years ago. The rivalry had ended but Herman continued, raising his mark inch by inch.

Sandlot League Meets Wednesday

Members of the Sandlot Baseball league will meet at 7:30 o'clock Wednesday night at the city council chamber to discuss plans for next year, it was announced Saturday by park department officials.

L. L. Wallis, superintendent of parks and playgrounds; Councilman John A. White, of the fourth ward and chairman of the parks committee of city council, and Sam Slatzman, secretary of the league, will be principal speakers.

Shades Cancels Bout.

Chicago, Aug. 4.—(AP)—Dave Shade, San Francisco middleweight, has canceled his 10-round match with Joe Anderson, of Cincinnati, scheduled here for Monday night, because of cuts in the face received when he lost to Rene De Vos in Philadelphia last Wednesday.

Tight.

James V. Giblin, forfeited the Waterbury franchise in the Eastern league because, he stated, he had lost a lot of money and didn't care to lose any more.

Atlanta Man To Promote Boxing Here

Local Business Man Makes Application to Commission for Permit.

Application for a permit to promote boxing matches in Atlanta has been filed with the city boxing commission, so it was learned yesterday. The application was filed by a prominent Atlanta business man, so it was said.

The boxing commission is expected to act on the request some time this week, at which time an announcement concerning the future plans of the promoter will be made, if his application is granted.

Members of the boxing commission were reticent about discussing the application, refusing to reveal the identity of the party concerned, saying that:

"After we have acted on the matter the applicant will very likely make some interesting announcements. In the meantime it would not be fair to give out any information regarding the matter."

Atlanta has been without regular boxing programs for some time, although shows have been offered at rare intervals. However, it is understood that the new promoter intends starting right out in the endeavor to build the game up from the bottom and revive the fans' interest in pugilism.

DURAY WINNER OF UNOFFICIAL TRACK TITLE

Salem, N. H., August 4.—(AP)—Leon Duray won the unofficial world speed crown here today when he defeated Ray Keech, holder of the world speed record on a straightaway track for automobiles, in two of their three five-mile heats on the Rockingham track.

Duray's margin of victory was only a half length, which he gained after passing Keech's car in the last 500 yards of the third lap. Duray's time was 2 minutes 21 4-5 seconds and his average speed was 127.1 miles per hour.

Duray won the first heat by traveling the five miles at a rate of 132.4 miles per hour, but Keech led in the second heat. His time was 2 minutes 21 seconds and his rate of speed 129 miles an hour.

Though this contest was not sanctioned by the American Automobile association, governing body for all automobile races in this country, it was held to settle an argument which started here on July 4 when Keech defeated Duray, holder of the world's curved track speed record and 13 other drivers in a 200-mile race.

Benning Net Star Loses in Finals

Washington, August 4.—(AP)—Captain R. C. Van Vliet, Jr., of the Panama Canal Zone, won the Sheridan cup and national army singles tennis title today by defeating Lieutenant David D. Hedekin, of Fort Benning, Ga., in straight sets, 6-4, 6-2, 6-2.

Captain Van Vliet, teamed with Colonel W. C. Johnson, Fort Sam Houston, Texas, won the doubles championship yesterday when they defeated Major L. S. Hobbs, Washington, and Captain C. W. Christenberry, New York, 6-4, 6-3, 6-3.

U. S. Fencers Lose.

Amsterdam, August 4.—(United News)—Defeated by both France and Belgium, the United States fencing team was eliminated from further Olympic competition today. Portugal, Italy, France and Belgium entered the final round.

Foy Stars on Mound as Druid Hills Nine Wins Title

Grace Outfit Is Shut Out In Title Tilt

Twirling Ace Holds Foes as Mates Cop American S. S. Rag.

An unwavering demonstration of stellar mound performance by the blond-headed Eddie Foy, who went about the task of hurling against the Grace Methodist nine for the American league championship with such easy but grim determination, that today the Druid Hills Baptist nine is undisputed champions of the circuit.

His victory was a margin of 6 to 0. His efforts were a brilliantly pitched three-hit game. He walked only one opponent and was accorded sparkling support both afield and at bat.

But Eddie was the master of the ceremonies. Gulledge was the only Grace player to reach third. This came as the result of his double and a sacrifice by Van Brocklin.

This triumph gave Foy two victories this season over the Grace team, and it was the third straight time the Methodist nine had conquered them.

Forster was the leading batter with two singles and a triple, Reeves got two hits, Langford cracked a triple, while the other three singles went to Singleton, Langford and T. Hoard.

Cody Laird was routed and Van Brocklin finished the game. Two fast double plays were the big fielding gems of the game.

Some of the best umpiring of the season was dished out by the veteran, Sam Glassman, and Harvey Weatherly. Much praise without criticism resulted.

This victory for Druid Hills Baptist puts them in the two-out-of-three-game play-off with Edgewood Baptist, champions of the National league, the first game of which will be played next Saturday at southwest Piedmont diamond.

A RIOT.

With apparent ease, the Morningside nine closed their season by defeating the Capitol Avenue crew, 12 to 3, in a lively hitting bee. This was an upset due to the weak showing by the Morningside nine but they rapped 13 hits for 12 runs, eight of these being made by three players with Poole and R. Humphries securing three apiece and two for Baker. Capitol obtained 11 hits but were not hitting in the pinches.

REAL CLOSE.

The second pitchers' battle of the afternoon found Smithy, of Jackson Hill, and Wilkerson, of Gordon Street, twirling great ball, while the Hiller checked a ninth-inning rally of the Presbyterians to eke out a 3-to-2 victory.

Wilkerson struck out eight opponents while Smithy had one less. Each gave up five hits. Two double killings pulled Smithy out on two occasions. Doggert and Bray got four hits, two apiece to cop batting honors.

Jackson Hill finished runner-up to the Edgewood crew after a fast season of hard playing.

WALT READY TO COMEBACK AT NEWARK

Newark, August 4.—(AP)—The right arm of Walter Johnson, which for 20 years fooled American league batsmen, may be brought into play against International leaguers.

Johnson, managing the Newark Bears of the O'Toole circuit, has been working out for the last month in the hope of doing relief duty for his team, which has flopped badly.

The Big Train, incapacitated by illness the first part of the season, has regained much of his lost weight. Although 41 years old he believes the old wing still has enough power to enable him to work two or three innings occasionally.

Johnson has appeared on the mound but once this season and that was six weeks ago when, to satisfy a "Johnson day" crowd, he pitched to the first batsman and then retired.

If the former smoke ball artist finds his arm fit he may give it a trial during the current home stay of the Bears.

The Big Train's outfit has been one of the biggest disappointments of the International league race. Pre-season dope favored them to win the 1928 pennant, but a series of misfortunes, climaxed by Johnson's illness, weakened the club until it has had difficulty leading the second division.

FLEMING HITS PERFECTLY.

A timely rain finally stopped the slaughter of Marietta by Smyrna. Up to the time of the rain Smyrna had managed to score 19 runs off of White. Waits pitched a good brand of ball, giving up only three hits and allowing only three runs.

The fielding of the Marietta team was marked by seven errors while Smyrna only made one.

Fleming and Arrington were best at the bat, Fleming getting five hits out of five trips to the bat and Arrington three out of five.

Cartersville, Ga., August 4.—Pinion, stellar Cartersville hurler, pitched his teammates to a 10 to 6 victory over Tate. He allowed only six scattered hits, none of them being responsible for Tate's scoring. Tate's six tallies came as the result of errors made by Cartersville players.

Pinion, Goode and Bryan each hit for a home run. Bozeman was beat at the bat for Tate. The feature catch of the afternoon was made by Hill, local catcher, who made a pretty run.

POWDER SPRINGS WINS.

Powder Springs defeated Acworth, 13 to 3, in a hitting bee and pilfering contest Saturday. There were a dozen stolen bases and 15 hits on the score sheet. Miller struck out 11 men, for a good pitcher's record in seven innings, and he also contributed a triple to the excitement.

Powder Springs is improving and should make a better showing in the last round of play than in the two previous rounds.

A GOOD GAME.

The Atlanta Terra Cotta bunch upset the dope by defeating General Electric, 3 to 0. The defeat was partially due to the loss of their best pitcher, Owens, whose finger was broken in the third inning by a hit ball. Williams, of the opposing time, pitched a steady game of ball, allowing only five hits. Williams was best with the bat, getting three out of four. London and Stephens, both Terra Cotta, were also good with the stick.

Fulton League

AN EASY VICTORY.

W. S. O. Class continues to set the pace in the Fulton league, and added another victory to their long string Saturday afternoon at the expense of the Center St. Methodist boys.

Henderson, for the losers, was the ace of the hitters, getting three out of four, with Hull and Harper hitting for the five hundred mark.

Doolittle pitched his usual good brand of ball, and the outcome of the game was never in doubt as his mates got away to a four-run lead in the first frame.

CLOSE GAME.

The Grant Park nine won a close affair from the Vanguard team to the tune of 7 to 5. Casey, hurling for the winners, allowed only four scattered hits during the game and got three hits out of five tries.

Numerous miscues by both teams kept the game in doubt throughout with four for the winners and three for the losers. Grant hit 14 safeties off the offerings of Ogle, pitching for Vanguard.

Human, at second base for the winners with the score tied, came up in the tenth with two down and hit a homer to win the game.

ONE-SIDED.

The Antioch nine handed the J. O. Y. class an overwhelming defeat, scoring 23 runs to their opponents 4.

The artillery for the winners opened fire in the first and second innings scoring four runs in each frame. The fourth proved to be the only inning in which the winners failed to score.

Hobgood and Wray, on the mound for the victors, hurled masterful ball all the way at no time were in danger. They held the enemy batsmen to eight scattered hits and were well backed by their teammates.

STONEY M'GLYNN CLIMBS BACK INTO SPOTLIGHT

62 Years and Is a Lifeguard in Wisconsin

BY RICHARD S. DAVIS,
Written Exclusively for The Constitution and the North American Newspaper Alliance.

(Copyright, 1928, by North American Newspaper Alliance.)

Manitowoc, Wis., August 4.—The spotlight which now and then picks up old-timers who have drifted away from the center of the stage paused on the Lake Michigan beach here the other day. And right in the glare, as natural as you please, was "Stoney" McGlynn.

Two boys had climbed on a raft and cut loose. The wind was blowing like all get out and soon the boys were far from shore. Somebody saw them and told "Stoney." He called a helper, got into his boat, rowed a mile or two and rescued the lads.

The reason "Stoney" was on the job is that he's the life guard at South Side beach. The city of Manitowoc employs him. He's the best man the town ever had.

Pitching Fool.

Time was when "Stoney" McGlynn was a pitching fool. He started as a professional ball player at 17—he was a catcher then and "the youngest in the world"—and he wound up his career in 1912, when he was 46.

Big leagues and little leagues knew "Stoney." He was with the famous Baltimore Orioles in the palmy days of McGraw and Jennings. He played with the Boston Braves, the St. Louis Cardinals and the Philadelphia Athletics. He had his ups and downs in plenty.

"Stoney" came here and got a position and he has remained. In 1913 and 1914 he had the job of guardian of the beach, but gave it up and resumed it only at the earnest solicitation of the city fathers. They wanted a man who could be trusted in a pinch.

Rules the Beach.

"Stoney" rules his beach like a kindly tyrant. He has a whistle he blows when a swimmer gets out beyond the life line. When he lets go with a resounding blast it means, "Come in there, you idiot." And if the idiot doesn't come, there's the dickens to pay.

"I run two of 'em off the beach for good just the other day," the guard confided, "and that girl you see out there monkeyin' round is a-goin' to get it, too, if she don't show more sense. The city pays me to keep this place safe and you can take it from me that's what I do."

The old-timer admits to 62 years, but he doesn't look it. He is straight and sound. He swims a mile or two every day, just to keep his hand in.

"How's the old souper?" the veteran was asked.

"Say, listen," he replied, "that old arm of mine is almost as good as ever. The zip is kind o' gone, but the curve is there as good as before. I keep a workin' out all the time. I'm president of the county league and I work out with those boys. I show 'em plenty. I could go right in there and pitch any day."

Bum Hurlers.

McGlynn has no use whatever for the frailties of the present-day pitcher. He declares that any pitcher who can't work three times a week is a bum.

It was his ability to pitch game after game that gained McGlynn the name of "Stoney." Double-headers were his speciality. As a youngster, playing with the York, Pa., team he once pitched 77 out of the season's total of 126 games, and out of the 77 he won 70. He liked to pitch double-headers, and he gives the following instance:

"Old John McCloskey, who was managin' Milwaukee, used to say 'Well, Stoney, we're playin' a double-header. I guess I'll start you in the first game.' And I'd say, 'the hell you will.' And he'd ask, what's the matter?' Then I'd say, 'if I can't work in both of them, damned if III start.' So he'd let me go in both."

McGlynn's only regret is that he wasn't born 30 years later, so he could be pitching now.

"You could easily get $25,000 a year at present," the reporter suggested.

High-Priced.

"Say, listen," was his positive reply, "if I was a-goin' to pitch now I wouldn't look at less than $60,000 a year. I just wouldn't touch a ball."

His salary at St. Louis was $2,500 a year at a time when the famous Rube Waddell, just getting started, was drawing $1,300.

The money "Stoney" will never get is, however, going to be won by the old-timer's son, Charlie, who is hurling in the county league and bowling 'em over.

"That kid," says his father, "has got everything I ever had. He's got my drop perfect. And I've taught him all of the rest. Just watch that kid. He's 'Stoney' McGlynn all over."

All of which, it is to be hoped, is true.

Finnish Athletes Carry Off Day's Honors at Amsterdam

Nurmi, Ritola Are Winners In Two Events

Yrjola Sets Record in Winning Decathlon; Rain Turn Track Into Mud.

BY FRANK GETTY,
United News Sports Editor.

Amsterdam, August 4.—(United News.)—Finnish athletes dominated the seventh day's program of the Olympic games, finishing one-two-three in the 3,000-meter steeplechase and one-two in the decathlon. They rolled up 34 points in those two events.

Toivo Loukola captured first place in the 3,000-meter steeplechase, going over the hurdles and hazards in 9 minutes 20.8 seconds for a new Olympic record. Ten yards behind came Paavo Nurmi, taking his second defeat in two days from a compatriot, with Ove Anderson, another Finn, in third place.

Sets New Record.

Paavo Yrjola won the decathlon and set a new world's record of 8053.29 points for ten event competition. Jarvinen, Finland, was second with 7931.50 points and then followed three American athletes, Kenneth Doerthy, Cadillac A. C., Detroit, Mich., 7706.65 points, Jim Stewart, University of Southern California, 7624.133 points and Tom Churchhill, Oklahoma, 7417.115 points, in third, fourth and fifth place, respectively.

The former world's record for the decathlon was 7710.775 points made by Harold Osborne, Illinois A. C., in the 1924 games at Paris. The former Olympic record for the steeplechase was 9:33.6, made by Willie Ritola in the 1924 games.

The two victories marked Finland's fifth championship of the Olympic games, only one less than the United States. Besides the two victories today, Paavo Nurmi won the 10,000-meter title, Harry Larva the 1,500-meter championship and Willie Ritola the 5,000-meter crown.

Three American relay teams qualified for the final today. The American 400-meter relay team of Frank Wykoff, Glendale, Calif.; Jimmy Quinn, Holy Cross; Charley Borah, University of Southern California, and Henry Russell, Penn A. C., won the third heat in 41.2 seconds, only one-fifth of a second lower than the world's record.

The American 1,600-meter relay team of George Baird, University of Iowa; Fred Alderson, Illinois A. C.; Bud Spencer, Stanford, and Ray Barbuti, Syracuse, who returned to the track today after his sensational victory yesterday in the 400-meters, won the third heat by ten yards in 3 minutes, 21.4 seconds. Winning the second heat of the women's 400-meter relay trials, the American girl's quartet of Mary Washburn, Jessie Cross, Loreta McNeil, all of the Millrose A. A., and Elizabeth Robinson, Illinois Women's A. C., qualified for the final. Their time was 49.8 seconds.

The Canadian girl's quartet set a new world's record of 49.4 seconds in winning the first heat of the 400-meter relay trials.

Terrible Weather.

All performances of the day were exceptional in view of the terrible weather conditions the Olympic athletes were called upon to battle.

A driving rain turned the soft Amsterdam track into a sea of mud. Dull, leaden skies either dripped or poured rain from morning until night. Seldom have Olympic athletes been called upon to face more adverse conditions than they found today.

The decathlon events were started early this morning, and it was dark before they were dragged to a finish. Pure grit brought the Americans through to score nine points in this event.

As a result of today's work the American team's chances for a brilliant finale to the ninth Olypmiad appear vastly improved.

The United States victories in both the 400 and 1,600-meters relay trials were impressive, in view of the weather. The rising morale of the team gives promise of better performances than were hoped for during the midweek decline.

U. S. TO MAKE TEST BID FOR HONORS TODAY.

Amsterdam, August 4.—(AP)—America's last bid for another Olympic track and field championship will be made tomorrow, when the strongest American marathon team in years, led by Joie Ray, meets the cream of the world's distance runners in the 36 miles 38 yards grind.

The Americans are in perfect condition, and confident of victory.

"They have trained religiously, all according to their own pet methods, and they have not overeaten," Trainer Tim Sullivan said.

The chief obstacles to a victory for the United States, Sullivan believes, will be Harper and Ferris, of Great Britain; Cliff Bricker and Johnn Miles, of Canada, and Koski, hailed as the best of the Finns.

Sullivan thinks all marathon records will be broken.

TODAY'S EVENTS.

Amsterdam, August 4.—(United News.)—The final day's program of the Olympic track and field games tomorrow follows:
Running high jump (women's trials).
Throwing the discus (men, final).
400-meter relay (women's final).
400-meter relay (men, finals).
Running high jump (women, final).
1,600-meter relay (men, final).
Marathon race (men, final).

The 'Big Six'

BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS.

Paul Waner made a clear gain of four points on Rogers Hornsby in the contest for the leadership of the Big Six yesterday by helping himself to five hits out of 10 official times at bat in the double-header at Philadelphia, while the Boston manager remained out of the game in the Hub. Hornsby's average is .383 and he leads Waner by 14 points.

Babe Ruth registered his 43d home run as the Yankees shaded the White Sox in Chicago, but got no other hits. He remained in third place because Cobb did not play and Frisch got nothing in seven trips to the plate.

Around the Ring

Fighting at 43. Spoiling a Shot.

BY EDWARD J. NEIL,
Associated Press Sports Writer.

New York, August 4.—(AP)—Prior to his bout with Heeney there were rumors that Tunney was to retire from boxing, win or lose, but champions as a rule seldom do that while there is financial profit in sight for them. In modern ring history the only heavyweight champion to quit the ring while he held the title was Jim Jeffries, but he didn't stay that way.

After the crown had passed from his protege to another and finally to Jack Johnson, the big boilermaker was induced to emerge from his retirement in an effort to win the title back for the white race. It was a sad attempt and deprived Jeffries of the distinction of being the only retired, undefeated heavyweight champion.

Two champions who retired when they were real champions, each at a time when his crown was anything but heavy upon the head that wore it, were Jack McAuliffe and Benny Leonard. Oddly enough, both were of the same class—the lightweight division—but many years apart.

Neither could be induced to return to the ring after hanging up his gloves, and today both confine their interest in the manly art to the role of spectators.

It's always an interesting part of the big titular shows to witch the champions, past and present, mill about the ring, with a few of them sifting through to gain formal introduction from within the hempen square.

One old champion who was A Champion still is making a living fighting at the age of 43 years. He is Jack Britton, whose 44th birthday occurs October 14.

Jack, who has been actively engaged in the cauliflower industry since 1904, was one of the greatest welterweights of modern ring history. During his 28 years in the ring he has fought more than 300 times.

Britton boxed only five times last year. After winning three bouts in a row he ran into two tough engagements, which went against him, and it appeared for a time that the native New Yorker would hang up the gloves.

But making a grand or two for 10 rounds still appeals to Jack, so he takes on an occasional headline scrap in the metropolitan area. He has been doing most of his ring work this year at the suburban resort shows.

There was an aftermath to the rise and fall of the flying caravan at Speculator that brought chuckles to many of the newspapermen who crowded to the scene of the mishap.

An aged and rather cranky golfer was just about to drive from the third tee when the plane, containing Bernard Gimbel, New York merchant, and a party of friends, ambled down the fairway for the take-off and then crashed into a tree along the rough when it failed to gain altitude.

One wing crumpled and the plane came down with a grand smash right in the line of the aged duffer's drive. No one was seriously hurt, but with absolute disregard for that possibility, the golfer stormed up to the wreckage and berated each member of the party as he struggled from the wreckage.

It did seem to the chap whose drive had been ruined that no one had any rights anywhere any more. What was the idea, anyway, of planting an airplane right on the No. 3 fairway just in time to spoil his best drive? It was time some people gained a proper idea of the rights of others. There should be a law, and by cracky, if there was he'd have it on them.

Amsterdam, August 4—(AP)—mAerican tourists, failing to make advance reservations for the Olympic swimming events, are finding last minute conditions similar to those at the big football games at home.

It was impossible to obtain admission cards as all places were sold in advance. Fans from nearby Germany purchased blocks of seats. The Dutch, too, bought many tickets. Only 6,000 tickets were available.

Kid Herman, Ptomey Mix August 16

Popular Indian Scrapper To Fight Doughboy at Auditorium Here.

Atlanta ring fans this month are to get another chance to see Tillie (Kid) Herman in action when he meets Willie Ptomey, all service middleweight champion from Fort Benning, in the feature bout of a card to be presented at the auditorium on the night of Thursday, August 16.

Both boys have performed here against Stiles Attaway and both have made impressive showings, Herman especially.

He and Attaway met in a ten-round bout at the Atlanta theater last winter and staged a battle the like of which hasn't been seen here in a great long while.

At the end of the fourth, fifth, sixth and seventh rounds Herman was on the floor being counted out when the bell rang. He staged a great comeback in the closing rounds, however, and though he lost, there were many who thought he should have had a draw.

Herman is a puncher and can take punishment. He gives plenty of action when he's in the ring and his one fight here has made him very popular with the fans.

Ptomey looked very good when he fought Attaway here and made a very good impression on the local fans. He won the all-sesquicentennial service championship at Philadelphia in 1926, wading through the best the navy and marines had to offer. Since that time he has met and defeated a number of good boys in this section of the country.

The bout is being promoted by a number of Atlanta sportsmen with Jimmy Mayson acting as matchmaker. The rest of the card will be announced later.

INDIANS NOSE OUT.

Cleveland, August 4.—Garland Braxton, the star southpaw of the Washington pitching staff, held the Indians to four hits today but nevertheless the tribe took the first game of the series, 2 to 1.

George Grant, Cleveland hurler, gave several exhibitions of pinch pitching that got him out of trouble. The Indians' right-hander allowed seven hits but kept them scattered over as many innings.

CROWDER HURLS WELL.

St. Louis, August 4.—A disastrous third inning in which the St. Louis Browns reaped a harvest of six runs off three singles, a double, and two errors assisted materially in sending the Boston Red Sox down to defeat here today, 11 to 3.

Alvin Crowder, showing a return to form, allowed only three hits. Two of those came in the fourth when the Red Sox manufactured their three runs out of a double, a single, a base on balls and an error.

MACKS COP ANOTHER ONE.

Detroit, August 4.—Seven hits, which netted five runs in the first two innings gave the Philadelphia Athletics a 7-to-4 victory over Detroit in the opening game of the series here today. Holloway, who started for the Tigers, was knocked out of the box in the second inning. The hitting of Simmons, Philadelphia left fielder, who got four hits, including two doubles and a triple, in five trips to the plate, featured the game.

THE BABE HITS AGAIN.

Chicago, August 4.—A two-base hit in the tenth by Benny Paschal, a pinch batsman, drove in two runs and decided today's game in favor of the Yankees, 8 to 6, after the White Sox had played the champions on even terms through the regulation route. George Pipgras pitched against Grady Adkins.

Babe Ruth made his forty-third homer, with Pipgras on base, in the fifth, and assumed a position 22 games, 27 days and nine home runs ahead of his 1927 record.

The victory forestalled a further loss of ground by the Yankees to the rushing Athletics, who defeated Detroit by 7 to 4. New York leads the Mackmen by four and one-half games.

WIN ONE, LOSE ONE.

Gadsden, Ala., August 4.—(Special.)—After taking the opener 10-8 Gadsden dropped the second game of a double-header here Saturday afternoon 4-1.

A ninth-inning rally in the first game netted Cedartown four runs, but fell short when Allen was relieved by Floyd with the bases loaded and none out. Allen issued a pass forcing in one run. A double play and a short fly retired the side.

Gadsden threatened in the seventh frame of the nightcap when Hydinger hit Howell and Garner beat out an infield hit. But Schepner went out on called strikes.

Yanks Get New Man.

St. Paul, Minn., August 4.—(AP)—Fred Heimach, southpaw pitcher with St. Paul, of the American association, and one of the leading hurlers in the league, today was traded to the New York Yankees for three players.

The Saints will get Al Shealy and A. Campbell, pitcher, and Julian Wera, third baseman, who is being recalled from Hollywood, of the Pacific coast. Shealy and Wera formerly were with the Saints.

California '8' Is Victorious In Shell Race

Oarsmen Battle Wind and Rain To Beat Out Dannish Eight by Three Lengths.

BY FRANK H. KING.

Sloten, Holland, August 4.—(AP)—Pulling into the teeth of a Dutch storm of wind and driving rain the University of California eight came through their second elimination heat today with their colors wet but flying high. The decisive manner in which they defeated the Danish eight from Copenhagen by three lengths over the 2,000-meter course boasted the stock of the Golden Bears who already are looked upon as probable finalists on August 10.

Likewise, Ken Myers, the American single sculler from Philadelphia, rowing under the same adverse conditions, disposed of Collet, of England, one of his toughest opponents, winning by two lengths.

Americans Lose.

On the other side of the ledger were two defeats for American oarsmen, the Harvard four with coxswain losing to the Swiss by two lengths and the Penn A. C. pair with its boy cox, Tommy Mack, being beaten by the French by one length. Since Harvard had lost before to Germany and the pair to Italy they thus were eliminated completely from the regatta.

The luck of the draw sent the two beaten American crews to the windward side of the canal and this proved too great a disadvantage to be overcome. The American eight won despite this handicap, but few others were able to surmount it.

A comedy of official errors featured the Californians' victory. In the rainstorm the officials following the crews on the towpath and broadcasting their positions to the small storm-bound crowds huddled at the finish got the crews mixed and announced all the way to the finish that the Danish shell was leading, whereas the Americans had led and had kept the race well in hand from the first stroke.

Then the official timer's watch stopped and incidentally his automobile broke down and there were no official times, but the Californians were clocked at about six minutes 35 seconds which compared favorably with Britain's 6:30 3-5 and Germany's 6:31 3-5 since both of the latter crews rowed on the leeward side. These two foreign favorites won easily, Germany beating Argentina by eight lengths and Britain trimming Poland by six.

The squally weather made the going for the scullers in their light shells especially difficult. The only boatload of this type to win on the windy side of the canal today was the British double sculling pair of Boardman and Guye who defeated the Belgian pair. The biggest upset of the day was the defeat of the Canadian, Joe Wright, by the Czecho-Slovakian, Straka, by three lengths.

In the Myers-Collet race the latter after watching sculler after sculler beaten by the weather, apparently decided the only thing to do would be to try to share Myers' luck and hug the leeward canal bank, thereby escaping considerable of the wind which was rushing across the flatlands of Holland.

Loses Distances.

Collett carried out the plan and pulled dangerously near the American several times. Myers could have fouled the Englishman's blade, causing Collet to be disqualified, but he gave way, coming perilously near the rushes growing along the canal bank. The referee waved Collet back into his No. 2 position and he probably lost more distance steering than he gained by getting out of the wind.

The best indication of the variable conditions showed in the heat which the Australian, Bob Pearce, won from the Dane, Schwartz. For the duration of this race only, the wind shifted completely, gave Pearce a tail breeze and he sailed over the 2,000-meters in 7 minutes 28 seconds, which is the best time made by any sculler in this regatta. The Dane eliminated by Pearce made better time than any winner today. It took Myers 7 minutes 46 4-5 seconds to cover the course in the wind which prevailed for that particular heat.

American oarsmen have a light program for Monday. The double scullers meet the Austrians. The pair without coxswain taxes on the English men and the four without coxswain from the Penn Barge club opposes France.

Under the "repechage system," which allows a chance for a beaten oarsman or crew to get back into the running, Joe Wright will take on the Italian Bernasconi on Monday in a race which is expected to send the Canadian crack back into competition. Wright said tonight he thought the wind was going to turn his boat completely around in his race today.

Modern Pentathlon Is Won by Swede

Amsterdam, August 4.—(AP)—S. A. Thofeldt, of Sweden, won the Olympic modern pentathlon championship today, succeeding his countryman, B. S. G. Lindman, who finished second.

Americans fared badly today in the final test of the five-day, five-event competition, which was horseback riding across country. Lieutenant Audrey S. Newmann was the best of the United States' representatives in the final standing, ranking fifteenth. Lieutenant Richard W. Mayor was nineteenth and Lieutenant Peter G. Hain twentieth.

In the 5,000-meter equestrian cross country test Haines finished seventh, Newmann thirty-first and Mayo thirty-seventh, and last, with Berg, of Sweden, first Berg was fourth in the final standing with Kahl, of Germany, third.

In 1924 the first three places were won by Swedes, who introduced the event to the Olympic program. The five events are calculated to face a soldier with the obstacles he would encounter if on courier duty. Thus the contestants were required to perform the equivalent of swimming a good-sized river if forced to, riding a horse at high speed over rough going, defending themselves with sword and firearms and running on foot. The test was made as true a one as possible and strange horses were supplied to the competitors for today's concluding event.

No Loafing.

The Fourth Class of the United States Naval academy doesn't loaf during August. A series of athletic events scheduled includes base ball, swimming, track and water polo.

Critz Sets Bat Record

New York, August 4.—(United News.)—Hughie Critz, Cincinnati Red's second baseman, holds a 1928 record for consecutive hitting.

He has hit in 23 straight games, beating the mark Hornsby and he shared earlier in the season by three games. The Reds stretched their double play total to 133, Critz, Ford and Kelly completing three killings in today's double-header.

Jockey Esling Is Host.

Chantilly, France—(AP)—Arthur Esling, who piloted Ogden Mills' "Cri de Guerre" to victory in the Grand Prix de Paris, was host to the "poor" of Chantilly at an open air festival.

"All they want to eat and drink," were the jockey's instructions to the caterer who had accepted the contract of feeding the needy.

ALAN SMITH DEFEATS DANN TO WIN TITLE

Asheville, N. C., August 4.—(AP)—Alan Smith, of Asheville, Carolina's amateur champion, defeated Carl M. Dann., of Orlando, Fla., Florida state medalist, today to capture the annual invitation golf tournament of the Asheville Golf and Country club. The score was 3 and 2.

The first 18 holes ended with Smith three up. At one time during the afternoon the Asheville golfer was three up but Dann won the seventh, eighth and ninth holes in succession.

Smith was three under for the final seven holes, and only a penalty stroke prevented him beating the course record for nine holes.

Dann fought gallantly and played the afternoon round in one over par, only to be defeated by the Carolina champion who was playing in birdies and pars. On two holes this afternoon Dann played dead to the pin only to lose the hole when Smith dropped 30 and 40 foot putts.

Henry Westall, Asheville, defeated S. T. Henderson, Charlotte, for the first consolation, 3 and 2.

Other results: Second flight, Billy Coxe, Biltimore Forest, defeated Paul Cashman, Greenville, S. C., 3 and 2.

Third: H. K. Skinner, Sumter, S. C., defeated Carl Mott, Jr., Asheville.

Third consolation: R. B. Jones, Asheville, defeated J. K. Charles, Asheville, 2 and 1.

Fourth flight: William Benzing, Asheville, defeated Frank Reagan, Asheville, 3 and 1.

Veteran Swimmer Dies.

San Francisco, August 4.—(AP)—Alex Pape, first man to swim around Alcatraz island in San Francisco bay and holder of the Pacific coast sculling title in 1901, died here today. Pape was nationally known as a swimmer and diver 26 years ago and was associated with Tex Rickard in staging the Jeffries-Johnson heavyweight fight at Reno in 1910.

Bob Walthour Rides Today At Lakewood

Veteran Atlanta Cyclist To Appear at 4 O'Clock in Exhibition.

Bobby Walthour, the man with the iron legs, will ride again for Atlanta fans when he trundles his bicycle out on the track at Lakewood park this afternoon for an exhibition workout at 4 o'clock.

Walthour who, 25 years ago, set a record for the mile that hasn't yet been broken and probably never will be, is a native of Atlanta and only recently came back to the city to make his permanent home here. He appeared in several races at a homecoming at Lakewood, where a large crowd was on hand to watch him.

Since then he has received numerous requests to compete in races over the country and has accepted them. This has called for a vigorous training program, which he has been following daily. The management at Lakewood prevailed upon Bobby to work out there Sunday afternoon as a large number of people have been looking for a chance to see him work again.

All bike riding fans in Atlanta, according to Secretary Oscar Mills, have been invited to ride with Bobby in the workout and it is expected that a number will avail themselves of this opportunity.

While Walthour is going through his motorcycle paced workout, there will be on exhibition in front of the grandstand the largest talking machine in this part of the country, which plays regular phonograph records, amplifying them to such an extent that the music can be heard for three or more miles. This machine will be played while Bobby is working out.

Amateur Sports Game Is Profitable Racket

BY ROBERT EDGREN.

All the talk about Bill Tilden and his troubles with the tennis magnates has stirred up a bunch of criticism for the amateurs. People are discussing things they never thought of before. An amateur hardly dares to make a bank deposit these days for fear of being under suspicion. An amateur is supposed to get along without money. If he doesn't eat he's simon pure. If he gets enough to eat and wears regular clothes like anybody else there must be something wrong with his amateur standing.

I notice a funny thing about amateurs and the people who run amateur affairs. The amateur isn't supposed to be interested in money, but the business people who run amateur sports are always thinking up new ways to swell the gate receipts. When Nurmi came over to this country to run, he was promptly scheduled and advertised and the money began to flow in wherever he competed. Just what becomes of amateur gate receipts is an unexplained mystery. Probably most of it goes to pay salaries and expense allowances to people who make a business of seeing that the amateur is purely an amateur and runs for them for nothing. Nurmi saw so much coin collected at gates, while all he got was railroad tickets and free rubdown liniment, that he got a manager of his own. It is rumored that Nurmi did fairly well with a manager. The competition annoyed the Union for the Exploitation of Amateur Athletes so much that the next year Nurmi was refused permission to run in any more amateur races in America.

Howl at Losing.

In the Tilden case it might have been noticed that Tilden wasn't suspected of being a professional at heart until he began to lose tennis matches. As soon as he lost the first match he was under suspicion. When he made a fine rally and won a few games he was a perfectly pure amateur. But when he was defeated at Wimbledon and seemed to have hit the slide again, the tennis authorities decided immediately that no one could write about tennis the way he had been writing for several years without smudging his amateur standing. The exact letter of the rule Tilden is supposed to have violated prohibited a tennis player from writing any news account of a tournament in which he was playing. This might be sensible as a rule to prevent a player from publishing his own alibi and telling what cheese players the others were, but just why it should affect the "amateur standing" of anyone is a puzzle.

The excuse for suspending Tilden may seem a little flimsy.

Perhaps Tilden's writing isn't popular with the tennis authorities. They feel like the Roman mob tearing down one Cinna after the killing of Caesar. "This is not Cinna the conspirator—this is Cinna the poet."

"Then hang him for his bad verses."

Form Own Union.

The Union for the Exploitation of Amateur Athletes isn't made up of athletes. It is a combination, partly business and partly political, for the control of amateur sport. Most of its officials hold political jobs in the city of New York, its headquarters. It's great to be a member of the union. Members draw salaries, most of them, and handle gate receipts and have liberal expenses paid and are allowed to wear badges with gilt medals on them. When the Olympic games come along, every four years, they collect their friends and relatives and engage passage on the boat, expenses paid by the fund subscribed all over the country to send amateur athletes to the games. Sometimes there are so many officials and relatives on the boat that there isn't room or expense money enough for the athletes, and then a lot of potential point winners for America have to stay home. To leave the badge wearers behind would be unthinkable. They are in the organization that handles the money and the athletes have no votes anyway. Amateurism is a queer thing. It applies for the control of amateur athletes, but not to those in control, who can be as professional as they please.

The professional amateur, who is just a job holder in the union or the committee or what is it, can take money. The athlete under his control must take nothing at all but instructions.

Some day amateur athletes will form their own organization for the control of their own sports, and throw out all the professional non-athletes who have been running their affairs for what's in it.

Then everything will be lovely for about two years.

Another Scandal.

After that there'll be another scandal.

There always will be money, and as long as there is money to be taken in at the gate by somebody and money to be made out of amateur sport, nobody can blame the amateur athlete for not starving and going around with patches on his running shoes.

At my amateur club, I met a radical gentleman who said: "I'm for throwing out all the amateur athletes. There aren't any amateurs. A man can earn more money when he's in better health. Sports improve anyone's health. So amateur sport brings in a profit."

That's about as sensible as most of the "amateur guff."

Numerous Pros Wasting Time In Tournament

Winchester Professional Stays Away From Meets and Makes Money.

BY WALTER HAGEN.

British Open Golf Champion.
American Professional Champion.

(Copyright, 1928, by North American Newspaper Alliance.)

London, Ontario, August 4.—In my barnstorming tours I meet a great many professional golfers and many of these do not seem to be satisfied with their jobs. They seem to think that they could do better elsewhere, but I cannot agree with 95 per cent of those who find fault with their situation.

For many years now I have known and highly respected Harry Bowler, professional at the Winchester Country club, Winchester, Mass. I very seldom meet Harry at a golf tournament because he long ago decided that as a professional golfer he would follow a business course and be a non-tournament playing professional, putting in his entire time and efforts in building up the club and giving the members the best service possible as a teacher and manager of the outdoor activities.

Just how well Harry has carried out this program is attested by his 16 years of service with the same club. I expect it could be demonstrated further by his bank account. I never heard Bowler complain about his job. He is well satisfied. He has a fine place because to a very large extent he made it so. Bowler also during the winter months conducts a most successful indoor golf school in Boston.

Hundreds of professional golfers would do well to pattern after Harry Bowler. He told me of taking charge at Winchester 16 years ago when it was a small-town nine-hole course and how at first he worked to gain the respect and confidence of the officials and club members. In other words he sold himself to them.

He then set about observing the systems of the various departments of the club then in operation, occasionally offering suggestions for betterments. Among the good works done at Winchester by Bowler were the purchase of supplies at a saving to the club, the handling and registering of guests, which to every club is a big item of revenue, and the installation of an adequate caddie system and training the boys.

Bowler says the average professional golfer is wasting not only his own time, which means money, but his club's time in following up too many tournaments. The lessons and sales he loses, plus his expenses, run into real money and the average club member today is not interested in where his professional lands in a tournament. He is only interested in, "Has our professional time open for a lesson."

Precarious Occupation.

I certainly agree with Bowler in this. "I have been astounded by the large number of professionals I have met at open tournaments being played hundreds and sometimes thousands of miles from their home clubs. I realize that not more than 4 per cent of the players can do the tournaments and make expenses.

I pass up many tournaments myself because I cannot afford to give my time and take the chance of winning prize money enough to cover my outlay and my chances are certainly above the average. If I am on a tour and have exhibitions in a sections when an open is to be played, I generally enter the tournament.

No other class of professional athletes give so much to their game as the professional golfers give to golf. I often wonder what would happen if professional baseball players received payment only when they won. terest, but this is usually centered in a few players and the others are wasting their time and money.

I cannot imagine Harry Bowler taking four or five days off during his busy season to travel a few hundred miles to play in a tournament, in which at least 10 crack professionals would be sure to be entered, and in which event the first four would win enough to cover all expenses.

There are numerous tournaments of this sort, well attended by professional golfers who haven't a Chinaman's chance of winning, yet they keep coming. It is most surprising. I know eastern professionals who have made what we call the "California and Texas jump." And who have never been in the prize money. The trip has cost them all their summer's profits. I couldn't make the "California and Texas jump" myself and be sure of earning more than expenses.

Harry Bowler has got the right idea, which it would pay 95 per cent of professionals to copy.

No More Polo At Fort Until September

Due to the fact that the Governor's Horse Guards have left the city for their summer encampment at Camp McClellan, Ala., there will be no polo game at Fort McPherson this afternoon.

During the remainder of August polo fans of the city will be deprived of the pleasure of witnessing more thrilling games at the fort. The games are scheduled to be resumed the early part of September.

While attending their training period at McClellan the guardsmen will probably engage the cavalry regiment at the Alabama camp in several games of polo. While the guardsmen are away the fort four will resume their practices and when the two outfits meet later in the season there will be much fun in store for the polo enthusiasts of Atlanta.

NATION-WIDE TIRE SWINDLE EXPOSED

New York, August 4.—(Special.)—The arraignment of Joseph Remerre, 24 years old, of 341 East Seventy-second street, New York, before Magistrate McAndrews in west side court, after his arrest for misrepresenting merchandise, has brought to light a nation-wide swindle in the sale of tires which is operating in a number of states.

How the tire swindlers carry out their deception on motorists by representing their wares as the products of nationally-known rubber companies, but which were merely the discarded tires revulcanized and encased in paper wrappers, was described before the court as follows:

A truck occupied by two men draws up alongside another motor car halted in traffic. One of the men would ask the driver of the car if he wanted to buy a tire or two cheap, U. S. Royal Cord being the make usually offered. They would offer to sell for $25 two tires priced at $25 each, and sometimes would reduce the price to $18 the pair. When the prospective purchaser showed disbelief of their statement they would tear aside some of the wrapper and show the U. S. stamp on the tire. If the motorist bought the tires he would find upon examining them that they were battered used tires and the U. S. was part of the stamp "Made in U. S."

The nation-wide ramifications of this form of tire swindle have prompted representatives of the United States Rubber company to make a country-wide drive for the benefit of the rubber industry and the public in order to halt it.

In this work the National Better Business bureau and the Better Business Bureau of New York are giving the fullest cooperation.

NEW UTILITY TRUCK ADDED BY CHEVROLET

The Chevrolet Motor company, whose unprecedented sales and production record of placing on the road 750,000 "Bigger and Better" models since January 1, established a new mark for the sale of a new model, announces this week the addition to its line of a new utility truck. The new truck, which embodies several improvements, chief of them a four speeds forward transmission, four wheel brakes and channel steel bumper, went into production in the various Chevrolet plants July 2. It will be on view this week in dealers' showrooms throughout the country.

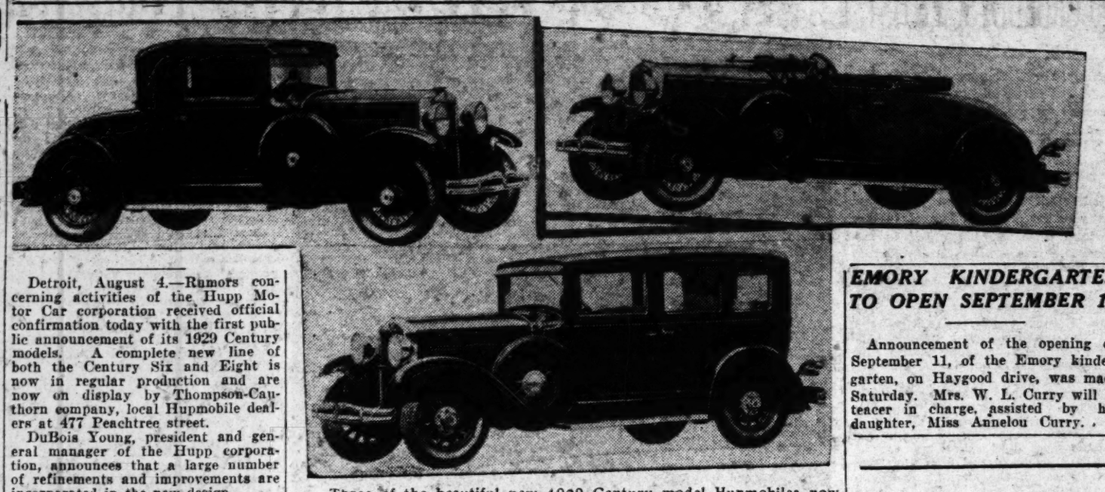

The four speeds forward transmission will insure a more efficient application of engine power. The extra low speed gear provides maximum pulling power on heavy roads and steep grades while normal driving requirements are met as usual with second, third and fourth speeds. A power take-off port, to which various power devices can be applied, is a further feature of the transmission.

The four-wheel brakes are non-locking and supply a total of 17 square inches of braking, aside from an entirely separate and independently operated set of emergency brakes on the rear wheels. The front wheel brakes are of the internal expanding type, the rear wheel service brake of the external contracting type, insuring quick and positive stops regardless of grade or speed.

A new low loading height, 41 inches from the ground, is made possible by a special "kick-up" feature of the long chassis. An unusually long frame support, extending behind the center of the rear axle, assures proper load distribution.

Rigorous and exacting tests, covering thousands of miles over all types of roads and under winter and summer climatic conditions, were applied to the new truck at General Motors proving ground before the Chevrolet engineering division approved of it for production.

New Hupmobile 1929 Century Models on Display Here

Three of the beautiful new 1929 Century model Hupmobiles now on display at local dealers. Top, left, is the new Hupmobile cabriolet with rumble seat. In the past years the cabriolet type has assumed a new and greater importance among motorists. Top, right, is the new sportster, the car of youth—and those who grow older in years but not in spirit. Above is the five-passenger four-door sedan, with custom equipment, as Hupmobile calls the practice of carrying two spare wheels and tires in front fenders.

Detroit, August 4.—Rumors concerning activities of the Hupp Motor Car corporation received official confirmation today with the first public announcement of its 1929 Century models. A complete new line of both the Century Six and Eight is now in regular production and are now on display by Thompson-Cauthorn company, local Hupmobile dealers at 477 Peachtree street.

DuBois Young, president and general manager of the Hupp corporation, announces that a large number of refinements and improvements are incorporated in the new design.

"Hupp is taking an unusual step in offering its 1929 models while its present line of cars is still far from the peak of a demand which ever since last fall has been breaking all records of the company," said Mr. Young.

"In the eight months since the Century line was introduced, many of its distinctive features have been widely adopted by the industry and it is interesting to note that points stressed in recent announcements of new cars were featured in our 1928 product. Hupmobile has taken full advantage of the experience gained during the past eight months to improve our Century line still further and we are gratified to state today, as we did last October, our belief that Hupmobile is the best car of its class in the world."

D. G. Chaires Honored.

Tallahassee, Fla., August 4.—(AP)—Governor John W. Martin today announced the appointment of D. G. Chaires, Sr., as a member of the board of public instruction from district No. 1, Leon county, to succeed John H. Patterson, deceased.

Packards Make Fine Record In Hard 2,400-Mile Journey

Six Packard six cars, taken out of stock from the Packard factory and given no special preparation, have just finished a 2,400-mile trip which offers an outstanding example of the high degree of reliability reached in the modern motor car. Although new cars which had had only a few miles of driving on a tour of Detroit, they were driven at maximum speed for the first 200 miles of the trip and at maximum or nearly top speed for all the rest of the 2,400 miles without injury to any one of the six and without causing any need for mechanical adjustments.

The cars were used for a tour of Michigan by a group of high school students from different cities of the state. The Packard company in providing the automobiles said it welcomed the opportunity for making so severe a test of its machines as the schedule of the tour promised.

Care at Outset.

Packard engineers and service men believe the longest life will be given a car if the greatest care is used in driving it over the first few hundred miles. They say their car should be driven at 30 or 35 miles an hour with an occasional burst of faster speed. They were confident, however, they said, that any Packard cars could be, if necessary, driven at high sustained speed from the start of their first mile even though in the hands of drivers of only average experience, although strongly recommending against any such procedure by car owners with new machines.

Fast travel on the road was necessary to keep a schedule somewhat upset by longer visits at some points than originally contemplated by the touring party. Maximum speed had to be maintained for much of the distance covered.

Double Distance Covered.

Because a change had to be made in the first day's schedule double the distance arranged for originally had to be covered in the first afternoon. This necessitated driving the cars for the first 200 miles that they had ever been operated, except their factory road test runs, at top speed.

All kinds and conditions of roads were encountered, including some difficult detours. Each car was loaded to capacity and one in which baggage was carried, considerably beyond its rated capacity. The limit of work done on the whole fleet of cars during the entire tour consisted of repairing three punctured tires and tightening a loose nut on the water pump of one of the cars.

After the six cars had been returned to the Packard factory they were given the most rigid inspection. Each was found to be in exactly as good condition as when it left the factory.

EMORY KINDERGARTEN TO OPEN SEPTEMBER 11

Announcement of the opening on September 11, of the Emory kindergarten, on Haygood drive, was made Saturday. Mrs. W. L. Curry will be teacer in charge, assisted by her daughter, Miss Annelou Curry.

Willys-Overland Ships 2,951 Cars in Single Day

In a recent record-breaking car delivery day for Willys-Overland, when 2,951 Whippet and Willys-Knight cars were shipped in the one day period, there ware 815 of these car turned over to dealers who came to the factory to drive them away.

Two records were broken, the first being total deliveries for one day, the second being total driveaways for one day.

The driveaways were made by dealers within a radius of 250 miles of the factory at Toledo who came to the factory rather than wait for the slower method of taking delivery by freight.

While the freight shipments were handled in the usual manner, the driveaway problem introduced new elements which taxed the efficiency of the organizations by giving them a limit of 51 seconds per dealer in which to make delivery within the 10-hour working period.

Advance designation of orders for specific cars were in the hands of the driveaway delivery division upon which devolved the necessity for properly entering the sales orders and assigning the car units by serial and motor number.

Papers arranging for the taking of the car by the dealer were prepared in anticipation of his arrival. Installation of equipment, both regular and special in accordance with the dealer's orders, was taken care of in advance of the coming of the men who were to drive the cars away.

This introduced an element in the factory shipping division which is ordinarily taken care of by the service department of the dealer's own organization.

Installation of dealer's local license plates and arrangements for payment of the cars as they were turned over, as well as the lining up of the cars to avoid confusion in delivery, were problems in organization which had to be attended to in advance.

Ten hours after the first car in the driveway had rolled away under its own power, car No. 813 of the record breaking number, was on its way to its final delivery to the retail buyer.

BASEBALL GAMES TO FEATURE PICNIC OF LOCAL GROCERS

Two interesting baseball contests between organizations of the Retail Grocers' association will be the feature events of the annual grocers' picnic, to be held Wednesday, August 15, at Mozley park. These games, which are expected to afford much entertainment, will be between the Piggly Wiggly stores adn tne Retail Grocers' associatiotn, and between the Rogers stores and the Atlantic and Pacific stores.

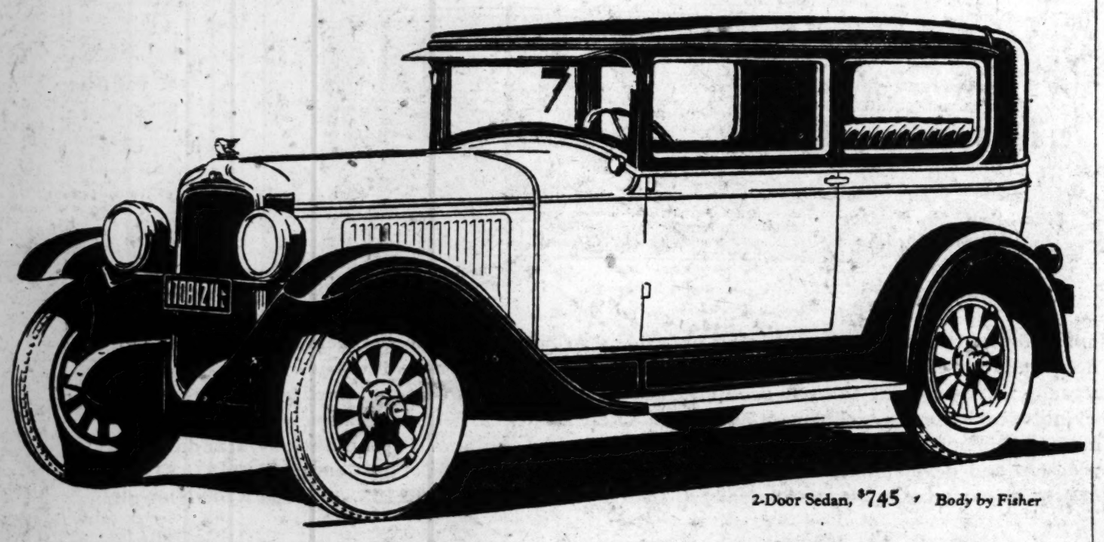

In addition to these major contests, there will be athletic events of all kinds for the hundreds of grocers and other food dealers who are expected to close their stores on that day and journey to Mozley partk to take part in the day's outing.

PRODUCT OF GENERAL MOTORS

SCALE

is a Dangerous Enemy to Your Car

The water you put in your radiator is never pure H_2O.

It always contains other things.

Most water holds minerals in suspension. When that water is heated the minerals solidify and form what is called scale.

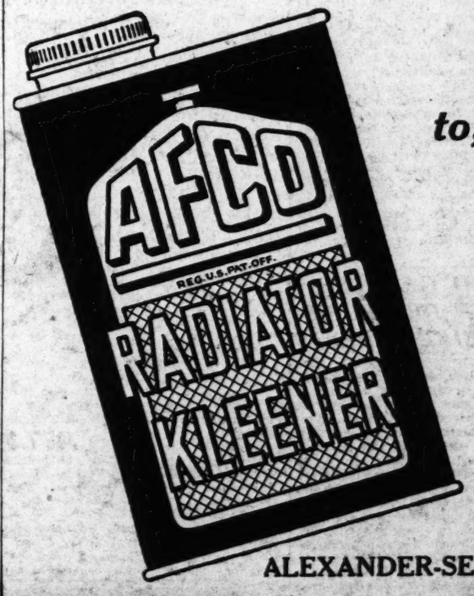

Scale acts as an insulator. And when scale forms in the cooling system of your car the water which is supposed to cool your motor no longer does. Your motor overheats, bearings burn out, pistons are scored and you are faced with an expensive repair job.

AFCO is the only automotive product in a generation that absolutely eliminates Rust and Scale.

AFCO permits the water in your radiator and cooling system to circulate properly.

AFCO makes your motor run better—smoother.

We positively guarantee

to,

1. Remove rust and scale from radiator and cooling system.
2. Make the water in automobile cooling systems circulate properly.
3. Prevent overheating and boiling.
4. Increase lubrication efficiency.
5. Never in any way to injure tubes, metals or hose connections.
6. Never to damage paint or Duco (AFCO can easily be removed from any surface with warm water).

Use AFCO four times a year and you'll never have any trouble with an overheated motor.

Look for the AFCO Service Sign.

HARD-BOILED PARK DIRECTOR JAILED

Columbus, Ga., August 4.—(AP)—A 30-day jail sentence was passed on C. A. Hyatt, director of parks and recreation department, in municipal court today following his plea of guilty of disorderly conduct in connection with alleged charges of cruel and inhumane treatment of a 9-year-old boy here Wednesday.

Hyatt was brought into court Thursday and pleaded guilty, but passing of sentence was deferred until today. He also faces charges of assault and battery in connection with the same case in the state courts, the father of the boy having sworn out a warrant against him. The case probably will be investigated by the grand jury which meets Monday.

The disorderly conduct charge was placed against Hyatt by police who investigated the case, in which the recreational director was said to have inflicted cruel, unusual and inhumane treatment on the boy who committed a childish impropriety on the courthouse lawn.

Hyatt is at liberty under a $1,000 bond on the state charge and bond was set at $500 on the municipal court charge, pending an appeal which was intimated.

Hyatt came to Columbus in January from Daytona Beach, Fla., where he had served in the recreational department and was in charge of water sports.

MERCER EXPECTS BIG SUMMER GRADUATION

Macon, Ga., August 4.—The largest summer graduating class in the history of Mercer university will receive its diplomas when commencement exercises are held in the chapel auditorium August 21. Fifty-five students expect to graduate.

M. L. Duggan, state superintendent of schools in Georgia, will make the literary address at the commencement exercises. Mr. Aquila Chamlee president of Bessie Tift college, in Forsyth, will deliver the commencement sermon to the members of the graduating class at the Tattnall Square Baptist church in Macon.

Final examinations for the summer quarter will be given the seniors on Friday and Saturday, August 17 and 18. Tests for underclassmen are to be held on Monday and Tuesday, August 20 and 21. Roy Hale, of Macon, is president of the August graduating class. Frank Taylor, of Dudley, is vice president, and Sarah McElroy, of Macon, is secretary and treasurer.

This session has been pronounced the most successful summer school of Mercer university. More than 500 students from several states were enrolled. Dean Peyton Jacob, of the school of education, is director of the school.

'City Builder' Dedicates New Issue to Press

Newspapers and newspapermen of Atlanta and throughout Georgia are honored by the Atlanta Chamber of Commerce in its August number of "The City Builder," official publication of the chamber. The publication is devoted almost entirely to stories and articles about newspapermen and their work, and in consideration of its contents, the issue is called the "Newspaper Number."

The volume contains an interesting editorial by Louie D. Newton, editor of "The City Builder," in which he gives a history of development of modern newspapers from the original Pekin Gazette, which appeared in 713 A. D. This article is accompanied by photographs of heads of nearly all the large newspapers in the state. There also are several stories on the country newspapers of Georgia and the Georgia Press association.

Other features of this month's edition are an address on the newspapers' purpose, delivered by Adolph Ochs, publisher of the New York Times; an article by Willis A. Sutton, on the National Educational association convention in this city next year, and an account of the publishing industry in Atlanta by Dudley Glass. An appropriate front-piece to the periodical is afforded by reprinting Platt Young's verses entitled "The Fourth Estate."

CANADIAN LABOR PLANNING TO BAR BRITISH WORKERS

Ottawa, Ontario, August 4.—(AP)—Objection to bringing 10,000 British workers to Canada for the grain harvest has been voiced by the allied trades and labor council.

Reasons advanced against the proposed emigration were that the emigrants would not find sufficient winter employment in this country and that many of them eventually would find themselves in Canada without money or visible means of support.

Some other means of meeting any labor shortages should be found, the council believed.

Drive Launched To Bring Home 'Back Into Fashion'

Chicago, August 4.—A campaign "to bring the American home back into fashion" will be conducted by the furniture industry of the United States under the sponsorship of the National Retail Furniture association, it was announced here today at the association's headquarters, 666 Lake Shore drive, by Russell H. Tarr, of Tampa, Fla., president of the association. At the same time he announced the appointment of a board of five trustees to have charge of the program, which is to be known as the national home furnishing campaign.

"It is entirely possible to bring the American home back into fashion," said Mr. Tarr. "We have found, through an extensive survey which has just been completed by our advertising counsel, that despite all the sensational talk about the loss of interest in the home and in American family life in general, the great majority of the housewives of this country—80 per cent of all women consulted—are primarily interested in their homes and in proper surroundings for their children.

"We found, too, through this survey, in which women of every class and financial standing, and in cities, towns, villages and on farms were questioned and studied, that women generally—75 per cent of those called on—have inherent good taste in home furnishings and that their preference in buying is really based on an appreciation of beauty and harmony rather than on price alone. We want to assist in developing that taste and appreciation.

"So far as the industry is concerned, the survey disclosed two facts of particular importance: one, that the average expenditure for furniture for all families in the country is only $53 a year, while the expenditure for automobiles is more than three times as much; the other, that the industry is at present operating at only two-thirds of its capacity. We expect, through extensive advertising and improvement in merchandising, to bring production up to full capacity."

The board of trustees selected consists of Harry F. Cappel, Dayton, Ohio, past president of the association, chairman; Jurgen Petersen, Chicago; R. L. Mehornay, Kansas City, Mo., and Mr. Tarr and R. R. Rau, secretary of the association, members ex-officio.

These men will have charge of an extensive advertising and merchandising campaign, designed to improve the standard of taste in the selection of home furnishings, which will start in 1929 and run through 1933. It will be an educational program with two purposes; the first, to present to the people of the country, the buyers of household furniture, sound ideas on the principles of proper home furnishing and interior decoration; the second, to assist the furniture dealers of the country in building up their advertising and merchandising practices to the most effective standards.

Furniture manufacturers and retail dealers alike will be in support of the campaign.

Stressing of High Speed In Advertising Deplored

Impressing the individual motorist with his personal responsibility in safeguarding American lives is the one direct and effective method of reducing traffic fatalities today.

And the individual motorist cannot be expected to realize and assume this vital responsibility so long as automobile manufacturers stress high speeds as the feature of their products, in the opinion of E. H. McCarty, vice president and director of sales of the Nash Motors company.

"It is true that improvement in streets and highways and in the mechanical operation of the newest cars themselves is tending to increase the margin of traffic safety," he said today after studying the latest traffic fatality reports; "but it is also true that their is a general tendency toward excessive speeds both on the open road and traffic arteries of our big cities.

"Because of this tendency toward reckless driving, I am heartily in accord with the appeal made by the National Automobile Chamber of Commerce against the stressing of high speeds in automobile advertising. It is only natural that, when the high speed of his car is constantly brought to an owner's attention and when speed rivalry is made a public point of issue by various automobile makers, the ordinary driver will enter into the spirit of the industry and use this necessary but dangerous element on every possible occasion. Safety experts agree that speeding and its consequent reckless driving and disregard for the rights of others is the major cause of automobile deaths. Obviously, so long as speed is encouraged and made an issue among manufacturers, these deaths are going to mount.

"Power and flexibility are, after all, the essentials of the modern motor car. Speed ranges are the result rather than cause of these essentials. Because of the power and flexibility built into the new "400" series of Nash cars, for example, they have a proved and safe high speed range of from 70 to 80 miles an hour, depending on the models. They are all capable of much more speed than the ordinary driver should use, and the experienced driver will employ this element only in emergencies. We certainly will not encourage him to drive 80 miles an hour just because that speed is built into his car."

Fulton Tax Values Gain $72,189,805 Under Abbott

Taxable property values of Fulton county enhanced $72,189,805 in the six years' tenure of office of W. H. Abbott, tax receiver, who Saturday announced the total of this year's digest.

A gain of $7,166,835 was shown for 1928 over the figure for 1927, with a $2,952,265 jump in Buckhead values alone, due to a phenomenal real estate development there.

This year's rise in tax values is the largest yet recorded in Fulton county, and more than twice that shown last year.

While the total amount returned on automobiles showed a slight decrease in 1928, all other items had gained substantially, the digest shows.

Real Estate Gains.

Real estate within the corporate limits of cities in the county, with a total valuation of $174,008,450, increased this year $4,045,465; county real estate valued at $13,697,815 increased $1,212,225, while the personal property returns totaled $74,365,100, with a rise of $1,909,145.

This year's list of Fulton county taxpayers included 52,300 names, an increase of 2,275 over that of the previous year, while 29,510 persons returned poll taxes, as against the 28,358 total last year.

Since 1916 Fulton county has waxed richer by exactly $132,598,645, a comparison between digests for the two years reveals.

White property within cities was totaled at $227,988,300, while district and city colored property was valued at $6,935,720.

Outer Districts.

Property totals returned by white taxpayers outside the corporate limits of Atlanta, College Park, East Point and Hapeville, by districts, are as follows:

Adamsville, $85,395; Blackhall, $131,630; Bryants, $236,725; Buckhead, $15,242,360; Center Hill, $1,010,110; Collins, $1,399440; Cooks, $2,127,050; Edgewood, $19,085! Grogan, $25,375; Oak Grove, $203,845; Peachtree, $2,080,080; Poole, $532,500, and South Bend, $662,065.

College Park, $1,564,470; East Point, $2,324,125, and Hapeville, $1,502,820. All totals showed a substantial increase over those of last year, with a lone exception—the Blackhall district, which returned $131,630 this year as against $163,215 of last year.

Mr. Abbott, elected in April of 1922 to fill an unexpired term, was reelected in 1924 to an additional term of four years, but did not offer for reelection at the last primary, owing to ill health.

MAN WHO FIRED HOLLYWOOD CAFE FACES JAIL TERM

Los Angeles, August 3.—(AP)—Michael Tocaze, curio dealer, today faced imprisonment following conviction in connection with the burning of the Russian Eagle cafe, Hollywood rendezvous of film notables, June 6.

Tocaze was convicted yesterday of arson and burning insured property, both penitentiary offenses. Sentence will be pronounced Monday.

The fire and a gas explosion following injured General Theodore Robijensky, the owner, and several firemen, and endangered several film celebrities, including Charlie Chaplin who fled from the building when the fire broke out. Tocaze's defense was that the fire was accidental or started by Russian enemies of the owner.

LIGHTED CANDLES PUT IN DRY BUSH TO FIRE FORESTS

San Francisco, August 4.—(AP)—By placing lighted candles in dry brush, incendiaries have started seven fires in the Orleans district of the Klamath National forest in the last five days, forest service officials revealed today.

The rangers believed the fires were started to furnish jobs as fire-fighters to unemployed men. All the fires were brought under control, and precautions taken to check the firebugs. Foresters believed the candle method was employed in order to give the firebugs plenty of time to escape before the flame burned low, and ignited the brush.

VARIED U. S. DIALECTS RECORDEDBYSCIENTISTS

New York, August 4.—(AP)—The story of a rat named "Grip" has been recorded for posterity in seven American dialects.

Not that "Grip's" story was very unusual. It merely was that a rat that couldn't make up its mind whether to leave a house or remain, but was saved the bother of further thought when the house fell in and killed it. It was all in how the story was told.

The story of "Grip" was selected by Dr. William Cabell Greet, of the English department of Barnard college, Columbia university, to bring out through its vowel nuances the characteristic touches given the English language in different parts of the country.

Representatives of seven sections of the country carried on the tale which was recorded on phonograph records for distribution to colleges as libraries of American dialect.

The dialects ranged from the "way down east" of the New Englander to the "Gullah" dialect spoken by plantation negroes along the South Carolina and Georgia coasts.

The story as it would be told by a typical New Yorker was recorded by a truck driver who spent the greater part of his life on Tenth and Eleventh avenues.

The "down east" touch was given by a resident of Vermont and another from Maine. The "Gullah" dialect was contributed by a former resident of South Carolina and was almost unintelligible to his hearers. Other dialects were furnished by residents of Missouri, Ohio, Virginia and Philadelphia.

Slayer Freed on Bond.

Farmerville, La., August 4.—(AP)—Mrs. Oscar Day, charged with manslaughter in connection with the death of Mrs. Ira Medlin Thursday afternoon as a result of what is said to have been domestic trouble, was released from jail here today under $1,500 bond. Mrs. Medlin was killed when she engaged in a roadside duel with Mrs. Day, eight miles north of Farmerville.

Constitution Bicycle Easy To Win, This Boy Declares

Eddie Pittman, 12-year-old boy, of 606 Fletcher street, S. W., Atlanta, is another hustling youngster to win a handsome Columbia bicycle under The Constitution's sensational free offer to boys and girls, men and women throughout this section. "I won my bicycle in three and a half days' time," Eddie said, "and had no trouble obtaining the subscriptions necessary." Young Pittman is tremendously proud of his new bicycle. There is one of the same handsome speedsters for you if you want it—free. All that's necessary to win it is to get 15 new six-months subscriptions to The Daily and Sunday Constitution. To youngsters, a sturdy Ranger sidewalk bike is offered for 10 new six-months subscriptions. Turn to the big advertisement in this issue and read full details of the offer. Then get busy.

PICTURES OF VENUS SHOW WAISTLINE 7,651 MILES WIDE

Chicago, August 4.—(AP)—Professor Frank E. Ross, of the University of Chicago, has returned from California, where he took some pictures of Venus.

The pictures show Venus without the usual drapery of clouds which heretofore have balked astronomers' efforts to get accurate data on the changes in the Venus figure. Professor Ross found that Venus is 7,651 miles wide at the waistline, and that she is 2 per cent plumper than previous estimates credited her with being. The study indicated to Professor Ross that Venus requires 30 days to make a complete turn.

Professor Ross used the big telescope at Mount Wilson observatory and employed new and special equipment.

Gas Consumption Measured For Hudson-Essex Owners

"What'll she do on a gallon of gas?" The man or woman buying a car these days invarjably asks that question.

The Goldsmith-Becker company, Hudson-Essex dealers here, says its officials are all through listening to "gas" arguments or individual experiences about the fuel economy of a 1928 Hudson Super-Six. They have fixed up an arrangement in a Hudson with which they are showing to motorists the exact mileage which may be expected from the car.

A standard sedan has been selected. A measured gallon of gasoline is placed in a container and connected with the pipe running from the vacuum tank to the carburetor. The engine is then idle until the gasoline is drawn from the carburetor and then started from the measured gallon of gasoline.

"On a typical test," the offocials say, "we drive from our place of business through the city, making all proper stops, and then take the open road at about 25 to 35 miles an hour.

"We do not pinch the carburetor down, inflate the tires abnormally, coast, throw out the clutch or do any other tricks. We want to show the amount of gasoline which a buyer will use in his regular driving. Our recent averages with a 1928 Hudson are about 15 miles to the gallon, which is remarkable, indeed, for a large, fine-performing car like a Hudson.

"Of course gasoline economy is not the main purpose in buying a Hudson. A man who purchases one of them wants to go somewhere. He doesn't want to notice such things as hills. He wants to command the open road. We are telling everyone that we consider Hudson the best roading car in the world today—not just in conversation but in actual test. Such a standard of performance is what makes the economy so much more interesting.

"These tests will continue until we have had an opportunity to show all our friends what they may expect from Hudson. We have shown a good number now, and all of them have had their eyes opened. Old-time Hudson owners who thought they knew all about the super-sixes, have been as surprised as anyone else. The world do move."

Crack Troops of Both Major Parties Massed for Greatest Political Campaign in Years

G. O. P. Hopes To Win by Linking East With West as Foes See Victory in East-South Combine.

BY BYRON PRICE.
Associated Press Staff Writer.

Washington, August 4.—(AP)—After a season of anxious mobilization, the war-making departments of the two great political parties are preparing to go into action on a national front that has no exempted sectors, urban or rural, east or west or south.

If these preparations come to full fruition, it will be the first time in a generation that a presidential campaign has been carried into the byways of every quarter of the country.

From the beginning, the east has been marked as a battle ground, for democrats saw victory in a combination of east and south, with a few western states, and republicans in a combination of east and west, with a few border states. Only within the last few days has there appeared definite indication of a serious widening of these programs. Republican managers, giving ear to the protests of southern drys, announced an effort to make real inroads on the democratic south; while the democratic leaders, including Governor Smith, himself, raised a farm relief banner before the eyes of the McNary-Haugen republicans in the vast stretch of normally republican states west of the Mississippi.

A real republican drive in the south and a real democratic drive in republican states of the west would mean battle in almost every state in the union.

Great Popular Interest.

A birdseye view three months before the election shows great popular interest in every section of the country. Political news is given first place in most newspapers, and political meetings are well attended. But it is in the south, where certain elements are struggling against the democratic ticket without apparent republican support thus far, that the campaign has reached its highest peak of bitterness.

Almost without exception the constituted leaders of the southern democracy have either indorsed Smith and Robinson or remained silent. On the other hand many leaders of the Protestant churches, and others, have followed the advice of the Asheville conference and pledged themselves to Hoover. There is widespread discussion of politics in southern pulpits, although some ranking officials of the southern churches have urged preachers to avoid political speaking. Two southern senators, George, of Georgia, and Harrison, of Mississippi, have taken the stump to plead against religious intolerance and for preservation of democratic solidarity in the south. In some instances church and political leaders have indulged in open disputes.

In almost every section of the south, except for Tennessee and Kentucky, which have been occupied with local primary fights almost to the exclusion of national issues, democratic voters are being asked to judge between two schools of advice.

Ouster Rule Invoked.

Some party leaders in South Carolina, seeking to hold the voters in line for Smith, have invoked a party rule requiring those who vote in the party primary to support the national ticket. Arkansas has a somewhat similar rule, and democratic leaders have served notice that they will enforce it. An effort in the same direction is proposed in Florida.

Texas has furnished the nearest approach to the shown-down between Smith and anti-Smith democrats. In a recent primary every candidate for state office who had refused to support Smith failed of nomination, in most cases by great majorities. One Oklahoma democratic leader, former Senator Owen, has gone over openly to the Hoover camp, while in North Carolina Senator Simmons has resigned from the national committee and has declared Governor Smith "hostile to the fundamental principles of democracy."

East Still Is Quiet.

Throughout most of the east the campaign still is quiescent, and in the west political activity has been apparent only in widely scattered sections. For the moment, at least, last Thursday's conference between Governor Smith and George N. Peek, head of the farm committee of 22 that backed the McNary-Haugen bill, has given prominence to the farm relief issue. The democratic nominee said after his talk with Peek that the democratic platform recognized the need for controlling the sale of surplus farm products, "its cost to be imposed on the unit to be benefited," and Peek announced he would support the democratic ticket.

Among the Hoover managers it was declared that Peek's decision would not weigh heavily in the counting of the November ballots. Like the southern democrats, the western republican party officials who have spoken thus far have almost all remained regular. Mr. Hoover himself is to lay his views before a confetence of farm leaders in Iowa on his way back from the Pacific coast later this month.

Technically Not Started.

In the midst of all of this activity it will be news to many that technically the campaign has not yet begun. Officially the republicans are to go into action a week from tonight, when party leaders gather at Mr. Hoover's California home to notify him formally of his nomination. Governor Smith's notification at Albany will not take place until August 22.

Despite the noise about them the presidential candidates themselves have, in the main, kept in the background and thus followed precedent. Since the conventions Smith has made but a half dozen statements on political issues, and Hoover even less. The past week has seen both of them on vacation in preparation for the hard weeks ahead, Smith golfing and swimming on the Long Island shore and Hoover fishing in the fastness of northern California. Neither has announced his campaign plans.

Party Chiefs Active.

The party managers, for their part, have not been so reticent. Both parties have set up extensive headquarters in several cities. Both have let it be known that campaign contributions will be thankfully received, and that there will be no hesitancy in spending legitimately. Chairman Raskob says "tentatively" that $3,000,000 or so will do for the democrats, and Chairman Work wants $4,000,000 for the republicans. If any such amounts are raised it will be the first time in years that both parties have been well supplied with cash.

But if the candidates have been retiring and the party managers partially so, the voters themselves have made up for them both. Ever since the conventions adjourned the campaign has been in progress for many of the rank and file. Whereas in other recent presidential years party leaders have gone up and down the ranks seeking to stir the electorate to action, this year groups within the electorate itself have thrown themselves into the fray before the zero hour, while their captains still were cogitating in their dugouts.

What this may mean is a subject of great debate among the politicians. They agree only that it foretells an unprecedented outpouring of ballots in November, and many of them would like to lay hands on a barometer that can tell them how heavy the deluge will be, and on whose doorstep it will descend.

100 FIDELITY AGENTS TO HONOR OBERDORFER

The fortieth anniversary of Eugene Oberdorfer, Sr., as resident manager of the Fidelity and Casualty company's Atlanta office, will be celebrated Tuesday by more than 100 agents of the company from offices in four states, with a barbecue and an all-day picnic at the East Lake Country club. Mr. Oberdorfer has served as head of the southern department since 1888, and it is to honor these long years of faithful diligence that the celebration is being planned.

EUGENE OBERDORFER, SR.

Representatives of the home office of the Fidelity and Casualty company in New York will be present to bring the congratulations of the management. John I. Houston, of the New York liability department will make a special trip to attend the testimonial. R. L. Philips, of Brunswick, will be toastmaster and will present Mr. Oberdorfer with a gift from the agents of the association. Eugene F. King, mayor of Hapeville, who has been assistant resident manager for 30 years, also will present a gift from the Atlanta office employees.

The outing at East Lake will begin early Tuesday with golf and bridge for the first arrivals. A barbecue will be served at 1 o'clock and the afternoon will be passed with swimming, fishing and dancing. Shrader's orchestra will be on hand from 1 till 4 o'clock to enliven the occasion.

A scroll expressing the good feelings of the company and signed by every one of the agents in the southern division of the company, will be given to Mr. Oberdorfer as a memento of the long service he has rendered so well. The committee in charge of the 40-year celebration consists of E. F. King, Tillou Forbes, F. T. Clain, Frank Maloney, C. B. Beardsley and W. C. Knight.

OLD-TIME DANCES TO VIE WITH NEW AT T. P. A. OUTING

Square dances and other terpsichorean cavortions of ante-bellum days will vie with modern dances at the annual picnic basket dinner to be served at 6:30 o'clock Thursday night by members of the ladies' auxiliary of post "B," Travelers' Protective association, it was announced Saturday.

Mrs. J. H. Owen, president of the auxiliary, will be in charge of arrangements and Mrs. S. N. Freeman, chairman of the entertainment committee, will direct entertainment features.

All members of the organization and their friends were extended an invitation to attend.

FRIENDS ENTERTAIN PIANIST GRAINGER AND HIS FIANCEE

San Francisco, August 4.—(AP)—Percy Grainger, pianist and composed and his fiancee, Ella Viola Strom, Swedish poetess, left here last night for Los Angeles to be entertained by friends prior to their marriage, which has been set for next Thursday. Miss Strom arrived here yesterday from Australia on the steamer Makura.

DODGE ANNOUNCES NEW TOURING CAR

Addition of a sport touring car to the Victory Six line has been announced by Dodge Brothers, Inc., the body being leaf mould brown trimmed in beetle green. Upholstery is tan shark grain leather. Standard equipment includes six wire wheels, the two spares being mounted in walled front fenders with trunk rack in the rear.

Nickel plating of the windshield frame, head and cowl lamps, stanchions, molding, steering column, gear shift and hand brake levers, bumpers, spare tire carriers, door handles, hood hinge and latches and hub caps add unusual beauty to the car. The windshield is designed so it can be pushed over forward when the top is down.

Instrument board equipment contains the starting button within easy reach of the driver. Grouped under a single glass panel illuminated by a hooded dash light are the speedometer, ammeter, fuel gauge, oil gauge and engine temperature indicator.

Roominess in both front and rear seats is featured in the body construction. Seat cushions are built unusually wide and deep and adjusted at angles for maximum riding comfort. Riding qualities are completed by four hydraulic shock absorbers, while internal expanding hydraulic brakes match the acceleration and speed developed by the Victory Six engine. The car is priced at $1,245 f.o.b. the factory.

ATLANTA BIRD CLUB WILL MEET MONDAY

The monthly meeting of the Atlanta Bird club will be held at 7:30 o'clock Monday night in the Atlanta headquarters of the Boy Scouts, at 77 1-2 North Forsyth street. F. E. Riddle, president of the organization, will be in charge of the meeting and will have several interesting topics to bring before the gathering. All those interested are invited.

Atlantan Seeking Record For Coast-to-Coast Walk

:: EMERSON LEAVES FOR LOS ANGELES TODAY ::

Carrying letters of introduction from Governor Hardman, Mayor Ragsdale and Chief of Police Beavers to more than 25 towns along the route between Atlanta and the Pacific coast, Fred L. Emerson, of 466 Peachtree street, today begins a 2,642-mile hike to Los Angeles, Cal. Emerson, who is a former sergeant in the marine corps, is seeking to establish a new record for the coast-to-coast walk, and, to be successful, must reach his goal on October 30.

Letters of welcome from many of the large cities through which he will pass indicate that the ex-marine's hike will arouse considerable interest. It is planned as a "good will" tour, and Emerson will visit the marine recruiting stations in many of the other towns, taking with him the greetings of the Atlanta headquarters. Emerson will leave the city limits of Atlanta this morning, to reach Newnan before nightfall. His route will then carry him through LaGrange and Columbus to Alabama, Mississippi, Louisiana, Texas, New Mexico, Arizona and California.

The long walk will end at the Savoy hotel in Los Angeles, on the night of October 30, if he is able to maintain the stiff schedule that he has prepared. Every inch of the distance will be made on foot, Emerson said, and added that if his trip is successful an account of his experiences will be published in book form.

FRED L. EMERSON.

COL. PECK'S SON GAINS ENTRANCE TO GUARD ACADEMY

Colonel R. H. Peck, of the United States army, retired, received news Saturday that his son, Rodney Halford Peck, was successful in his recent examination to enter the United States Coast Guard academy and will enter that institution September 1.

In the telegram notifying Colonel Peck of the success of his son it was stated that young Peck ranked fourth on a long list taking the competitive examination.

Colonel Peck served with distinguished honors overseas and is one of the best known figures in Atlanta military circles. He formerly was commandant at Fort McPherson.

NEW FREIGHT RATE SCHEDULE PLANNED

Washington, August 4.—(AP)—A new schedule of freight rates to apply to the transportation of iron and steel articles in the northeastern quarters of the United States was recommended today by interstate commerce agents.

The schedule suggested will be thrown open for criticism by shippers and railroads and will be further considered by commerce commissioners before any action is taken.

The recommendation resulted from the general investigation into railroad rates of all kinds instituted by the commission two years ago under the congressional Hoch-Smith resolution.

In today's report by Howard C. Faul and C. M. Bardwell the commission was advised to revise steel rates in eastern territory on the basis of a mileage scale.

"SWEET ADELINE" ABUSERS FACING ILLINOIS CURFEW

Evanston, Ill., August 4.—(AP)—The curfew shall ring tonight on the Evanston beaches—and each night hereafter—for "Sweet Adeline" and all the rest of the barbershop library of song.

Persons living near the beaches complained that the alleged harmonies (alleged was the word they used) interfered with their sleep. The department of recreation thereupon ordered all nocturnal harmonizers to come to a complete stop at 9 p. m.

"Diminuendo to an absolute pianissino," was the way one of the more cultured police officers explained it.

CALLED TO COLORS, OFFICIAL DIRECTS CITY JOB BY RADIO

Decatur, Ill., August 4.—(AP)—Score another victory for radio.

Carl Meacham, superintendent of the Decatur street department and a captain in the national guards in two weeks' training at Camp Grant, is directing street department activities by radio.

Yesterday he radioed his assistant to repair two bad street intersections. Meacham sends messages from a portable set in camp to M. J. Stough, Decatur amateur operator.

Bobby Walthour Appears Today At Lakewood Park

A varied and interesting program has been arranged for Sunday afternoon at Lakewood park with the weekly concert, an exhibition of the largest talking machine in this section of the country and appearance of Bobby Walthour, premier cyclist of the world.

The talking machine plays regular phonograph records and amplifies them so that they may be heard for a distance of three or more miles. The machine will be played between numbers by Barber's band and Secretary Oscar Mills believes that many people will take this occasion to hear it.

The Troubadors, popular quartet, have been secured to appear on the program this afternoon, from 3 to 5 o'clock, and will be presented in several pleasing and tuneful numbers. Many of the latest and popular song hits will be played by the orchestra.

The program follows:

March, "Boys of the Old Brigade," Paris Chambers; selection, "Faust," Gounod; "Together,' DeSriva, Brown and Henderson; serenade, "Love in Idleness," Allan Macbeth; Troubadors quartet, selected; overture, "Beauties of Erin," C. W. Bennett; fox trot, "Among My Souvenirs, Lealle and Nichols; Troubadors quartet, selected; one-step, "Bones' Trombone," H. Fillmore; march, "Washington Grays," Grafulla; invitation, "A la Valse," Weber; Troubadours' quartet, selected; selection, "The Red Mill," Victor Herbert; fox trot, "Did You Mean It,'" Baker and Silvers; finale, "Star-Spangled Banner."

TWO PROHI AGENTS WILL BE SUSPENDED

San Francisco, August 4.—(AP)—E. R. Bohner, prohibiton administrator, today said two federal prohibition agents, Harry M. Hibner and Harry A. Harkins, would be suspended pending an investigation of their conduct last night.

Police arrested the pair charging Hibner with assault with a deadly weapon, resisting an officer and being drunk, and Harkins with drunkenness and resisting an officer.

EVERYTHING IN GLASS FOR THE AUTOMOBILE

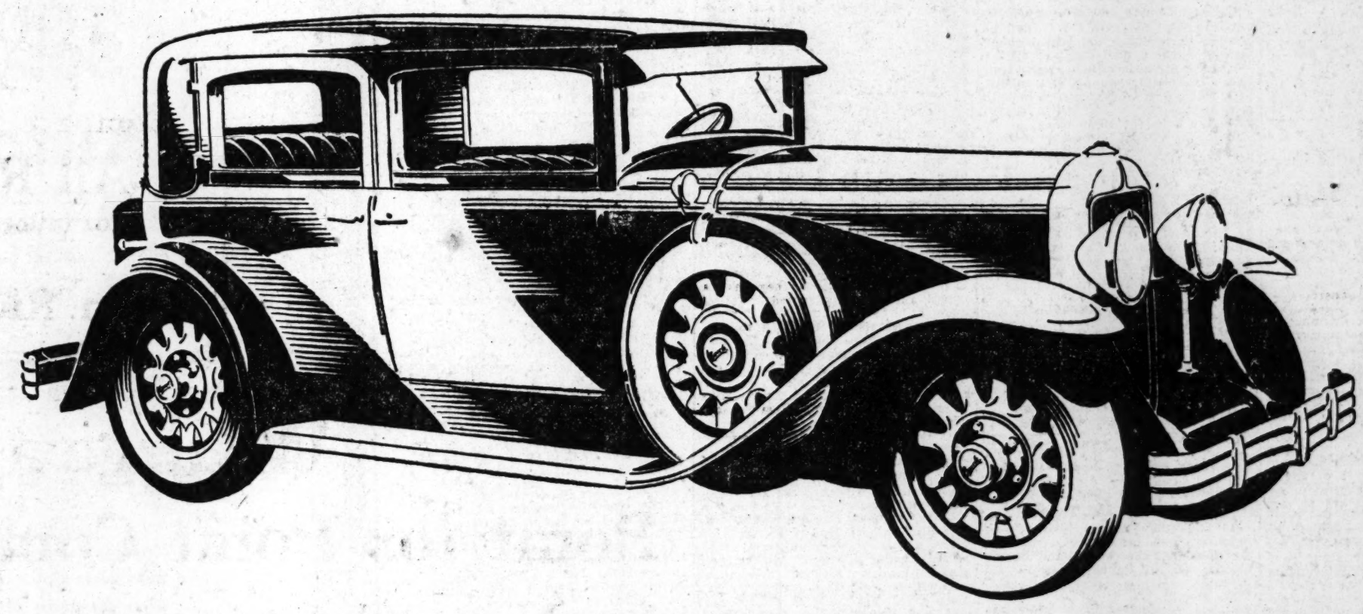

WRIGHT GLASS CO.

256 SPRING ST., N. W.

DRIVE-IN-STATION

GLASS REPLACED WHILE YOU WAIT

NEW all the way through in style--in engineering--in dashing new bodies reflecting the full genius of Fisher Craftsmanship-in every phase of appearance, performance and value

The Silver Anniversary Buick is proving the biggest sensation the automobile industry has known in years. For this new Buick is vastly more than a new Buick. It is a radically new and individual conception of the modern automobile, with elements of style, beauty, speed, acceleration, comfort and reliability unapproached by any other car in the world.

A dazzling new type of motor car beauty unlike anything heretofore known—longer, larger, more luxurious bodies, true masterpieces of Fisher design—full-width rear seats providing plenty of room for three adult passengers—a tremendous increase in power, getaway and flexibility—these are highlight features of this most brilliant of new car creations.

But back of these is a detailed story of improvements and innovations that has won the admiration of automotive engineers and the public alike. The Silver Anniversary Buick sets a new style—a new mode—as surely as it has already broken all sales records for a new quality car.

A new and deeper radiator of novel and distinctive design—striking new chrome-plated headlamps and cowl-lamps—arresting new lines and colors as refreshingly original as a Paris mode—all combine to lend an air of fleetness, poise and distinction utterly new to automotive design.

And in performance, too, the Silver Anniversary Buick outshines all previous achievements. Power, speed, acceleration, flexibility, stamina—all are greatly increased—all are united and co-ordinated to a hitherto unknown degree—all combine to produce a measure of performance-ability that is proving a revelation to drivers of the most expensive European and American cars.

In addition, the Silver Anniversary Buick introduces a host of engineering refinements, including a new high-pressure gas-pump—new carburetor with two high-speed jets—new, easy-action clutch—new and improved steering gear—steel backed main bearings—and many other features of the first importance.

All of Buick's skill—all of Buick's experience—all of Buick's manufacturing ideals—are concentrated in this new creation. It is designed and built to commemorate the twenty-fifth anniversary of the founding of the Buick Motor Company. It is dedicated to the millions of Buick owners and friends who have acclaimed Buick leadership throughout a quarter of a century.

See the Silver Anniversary Buick. Drive it. Make it your car. And rest assured there is none in the world that surpasses it

WHEN BETTER AUTOMOBILES ARE BUILT . . . BUICK WILL BUILD THEM

'SHAVINGS' SAVED IN OAKLAND PLANT

There used to be a saying that the packing industry utilized every part of an animal but the squeal, yet even that doesn't give the packer the slightest advantage over the modern automobile manufacturer.

Visitors going through the plants of the Oakland Motor Car company at Pontiac, Mich., have noticed small piles of machine turnings, or shavings, accumulating every few minutes under various machines used in the building of Oakland and Pontiac Sixes. Several men go from place to place carefully shoveling these turnings into steel containers. Not one visitor in 50 thinks to ask what becomes of them, presupposing that eventually they reach the scrap heap.

The fact is those shavings represent potential automobiles. Far from being scrapped, they are carefully salvaged and put through a reclaiming process. After sorting they are run through a crusher and then placed in wire mesh baskets in a centrifugal motion machine which extracts practically 100 per cent of the grinding oil. This is filtered and used again.

The crushed turnings are fed into a conveyor which carries them to a gondola railroad car ready for shipment back to the steel mills. Lowered freight charges result from the crushing. Uncrushed, about 12 tons will go into a car; crushed, more than 40 tons.

Fifteen carloads are salvage a month, or 20 tons a day. This reclaiming process has been in effect for several years. It is another instance of the efficient mass production methods which make possible so much automobile for so little money.

Conducting a campaign to reduce traffic accidents, the Better Traffic committee of Pittsburgh recently sponsored the exhibition of this miniature hospital. The display was routed over the main thoroughfares of the city, mounted on a two-ton Graham Brothers truck.

Opening of Pool Features Week At Scout Camp

BY WELCH O. JORDAN.

Opening of the new concrete swimming pool and an entertainment for the Atlanta Rotary club were highlights of the week at Bert Adams' Boy Scout camp. The Rotarians were guests Tuesday night at dinner, and were shown the "Initiation of a Sioux Brave." The initiation was given under the direction of Ed Dodd, campmaster.

The swimming pool was opened with an exciting water carnival, during which contests were staged between the patrols. The pool is entirely modern, the water being purified with a chlorinating machine and filters.

Highest hut honors for the week were won by the Gopher patrol under the leadership of Clarence Caldwell. Their ribbons won for the week totaled 14 and they excelled as a group in every detail.

W. T. Waters, of the Gopher patrol, won the most personal coups or honors for the week with a total of 34. These honors, which are awarded to boys who perform some special service around the camp and for its benefit, are small figures such as a shark, a goat head, a tent, etc. There figures are painted on the belt of each winning scout. Water's belt was filled on both sides and is a permanent record of his excellence as a camper for the week.

The eighth, ninth and tenth camp emblems for the year were awarded at the close of the last week to Marion Brooke, John Bostain and Billy Price. These emblems are highly prized by the scouts and any boy who wins one may feel certain that he is above the average camper in general camp conduct and activity.

The sixth period of camp opened Monday and indications are that it will be one of the most successful periods of camp. There are several prominent scout leaders in the camp this week, who will add materially to the camp program. Among these are R. K. Babington, deputy scout commissioner and Lynn Adams, president of the Atlanta Scoutmasters' club.

Mr. Babington is well-known in astronomical circles in Atlanta and will teach simple astronomy and practical knowledge of the stars to boys who attend the camp.

323 CONTRIBUTIONS MADE ARMY CENTER

Telephoned contributions to the social service center of the Salvation Army, over Ivy 2224, last week reached a total of 323 as compared to 285 the same week last year and 340 for the preceding week, it was reported Saturday by Staff Captain W. H. Range, commander of the center.

Contributions of old clothing, furniture, books, rags and other material, collected by the army on call to Ivy 2224 are salvaged in the industrial home and sold to support the social service and relief work for stranded and disabled men.

The Truck Driver

I believe Champion is the better spark plug because of the way Champions stand up in hard truck service.

Champion is the better spark plug because it has an exclusive sillimanite insulator specially treated to withstand the much higher temperatures of the modern high-compression engine. Also a new patented solid copper gasket-seal that remains absolutely gas-tight under high compression. Special analysis electrodes which assure a fixed spark-gap under all driving conditions.

Erskine Made Steady Climb To Studebaker Presidency

Speculation as to the future development of Pierce-Arrow and the Studebaker corporation, if the Pierce-Arrow stockholders accept the recommendation of their board of directors, has served to focus attention on A. R. Erskine, leading figure in the negotiations between the two corporations.

Under Erskine's stewardship, Studebaker has become one of the largest independent manufacturers of motor vehicles in the world. Like so many other heads of great corporations, Albert Russel Erskine won his place through no inheritance of power or position.

Born in Huntsville, Ala., in 1871, of distinguished Virginian forebears, young Erskine early learned that the family fortune had been almost totally wiped away by the civil war.

Started Work at 16.

He attend public and private schools until he was 16 years old. Then he decided to take up the serious business of earning a living. He got a job as an office boy in a railroad office. His salary was $15 a month, little enough if you compare it with present-day standards, but a decent wage for a lad of 16 in '87.

When he was 21 he became a bookkeeper in a wholesale paper house at a salary of $65 a month. A short time later he became a bookkeeper in a wholesale drug house—and after three years of service he increased his salary from $75 per month to $100 by taking on the work of two men. Three sets of books were kept in the wholesale drug house. Mr. Erskine kept one and two other bookkeepers kept the others until fate stepped in and reduced the clerical staff to two. When that happened Mr. Erskine volunteered to keep two sets of books for $100 a month. His offer was accepted.

In 1898 the general manager of the American Cotton company, learning of this young man's ability to work and his keen, relentless search for facts, offered him the job of chief clerk in the company's St. Louis office. In three years he was in charge of the New York office as auditor in chief and had supervision of the operations of over 300 cotton gins in the south.

Joined Yale and Towne.

In 1904 the Yale and Towne company engaged his services, to make an audit of the books and recommendations for improvement of the business. It was further specified that, should his work be well done and his recommendations promising, he would be given a chance to become treasurer of the company. Young Erskine jumped at that and he was elected treasurer and director before he had completed his audit.

During his tenure in office he completely revised the Yale and Towne company's accounting department and financial policy—and did it sufficiently well to attract the attention of the Underwood Typewriter company, which offered him a vice presidency.

ALBERT RUSSEL ERSKINE.

In 1910 he became a vice president and one of the directors of this corporation.

Joined Studebaker in 1911.

In 1911 he first became connected with the Studebaker corporation. His first position was treasurer, director and member of the executive committee. In 1913 he was made senior vice president. Two years later he became president.

Thus, without flowery words, we find that Albert Russel Erskine has made a steady and deliberate climb to an enviable position. Always there was hard work. Although he changed occupations from time to time, we find that he always made a change that put him ahead of his former position. He did not seek jobs—except that first one as an office boy and the second as a bookkeeper for the wholesale drug company. He sought work, hard work.

In 1868 the sales of the Studebakers totaled a modest $360,000. Last year The Studebaker corporation of America reported net sales in excess of $134,000,000. From 1911 there has been a marked increase in Studebaker earnings.

2 Women Make 4,376-Mile Journey in Erskine Sedan

News of another achievement of Studebaker's Erskine six in the hands of women drivers has just been received by the Studebaker Corporation of America, from Cape Town, South Africa, where two Cape Town women, Mrs. Doris Hume and Mrs. A. M. Smythe, recently completed a 4,376-mile trip over trying roads in an Erskine Six without male assistance.

The Erskine, a club sedan, won a wager of 250 pounds sterling (approximately $1,200) for the two drivers and new laurels for itself by making the round trip from Cape Town to Victorie Falls via Port Elizabeth. Both drivers were highly enthusiastic about the performance of the car.

This latest achievement recalls the performance of another stock Erskine Six club sedan in the hands of women drivers on the Atlantic city speedway, where four feminine pilots drove the car in a unique 500-mile speed and endurance run. The entire run was made without mechanical trouble of any sort at an average speed of 58.6 miles an hour.

Airman Limited a Triumph For Franklin Motor Co.

Introduction of the new Franklin Airman Limited, which made its initial appearance a few days ago, is said by persons closely identified with the automobile industry to represent an artistic triumph for the Syracuse manufacturer of air-cooled motor cars.

Thousands who visited show-rooms of Franklin dealers immediately following the first showing of the Airman Limited, declare that this new series of quality motor cars definitely establishes an era of luxuriousness in automobiles never before reached by American or European car manufacturers.

Unusual significance is attached to the comments heard in Franklin dealer show rooms from women motor enthusiasts. The outstanding style development of the interiors of the Airman Limited brought about an unusual response from women, according to scores of wires that came to the executives of the Franklin company immediately after the initial showing.

The rich interior color schemes, upholstery design and appointments which give an air of unusual luxury and comfort, won instantaneous approval from women buyers, dealers reported. They showed marked interest in the Franklin innovations such as the floss pillow on the seat which matches the upholstery, the two foot cushions which replace the old type foot rest, and the comfortable arm rests at either side and the center of the rear seats and the lounge robes in keeping with each type of car.

Developments in exterior body lines and in rich color combinations and quality of finish, also created wide comment. Every exterior detail was carefully examined, including the swank effect obtained in the new grille design, the folding trunk rack in the rear, rear view mirrors smartly mounted on the crown of each front fender, and the spare wheels carried in the fender wells.

These comments of motor car enthusiasts have come to the factory from widely divergent points of the country, including New York city, Buffalo, Dallas, Los Angeles, Boston, Atlanta, Pittsburgh, Cincinnati, Chicago and scores of other cities, indicating that the special appeal of the Franklin Airman Limited struck the same hearty response in all points of the nation.

LABOR FEDERATION SESSION POSTPONED

Atlantic City, N. J., August 4.—(AP) The executive council of the American Federation of Labor stood adjourned today until Monday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock.

President William Green announced that politics would be taken up Monday, when the report the non-partisan political committee would be read.

ENDICOTT-JOHNSON OPENS LOCAL OFFICE

Endicott-Johnson company, rated as the largest individual shoe manufacturer in the world, is opening its southeastern sales office in Atlanta. This office will cover the states of Georgia, Florida, North Carolina, South Carolina, Virginia and Tennessee. All firm records for this territory will be handled from Atlanta.

In addition to the district sales office, a complete stock of shoes will be carried for display purposes. At present there are four employees stationed in Atlanta and 26 salesmen on the road under the direct supervision of Atlanta.

H. C. Sherman, southeastern district manager, in an interview stated the following interesting facts on the factories in Endicott, Johnson City, West Endicott, Binghamton and Owego, N. Y.: "All the above named factories, with the exception of Owego are within a radius of six miles. The average production of all plants are 155,000 pairs of shoes. In addition, to the actual shoe manufacturing the tanneries' tan, an average of 20,500 sides of leather per day."

In the employ of Endicott-Johnson company, are 17,000 people. Their factories cover 97 1-2 acres of ground. These facilities are profit sharing and operated for the interest of the employees. Their departments consist of fire prevention, fire-fighting, profit-sharing, theaters, restaurants, playgrounds, complete athletic fields, swimming pools, etc.

As an example of how large the plant really is, 200,000 feet of floor space is utilized for the shipping department alone and there is a $2,000,000 floor stock kept on hand. Their weekly payroll amounts to $450,000.

SALVATION ARMY WILL CELEBRATE FOUNDER'S BIRTH

A centenary call campaign, celebrating the one hundredth anniversary year of the birth of General William Booth, founder of the Salvation Army, has been launched at more than 200 Salvation Army posts throughout the southern states, it was announced Saturday by Commissioner William A. McIntyre, commander of the southern territory.

The campaign is to continue until April 10, 1929, the one hundredth anniversary of the founder's birth, as part of an international evangelistic drive to win a record number of converts as a birthday offering to the founder who devoted his entire life to reclaiming and relieving distressed humanity.

Similar efforts, Commissioner McIntyre said, will be in progress in 83 countries and colonies of the world into which the Salvation Army has extended its evangestic and relief work during the 50 years since it was first officially organized under that name.

The purpose of the centenary call was set out by Commander Evangeline Booth, head of the army in America, "to make known the living God, mighty to save, whom to know is to love; to free the souls of men from the tyranny of devils in the name of Jesus; to carry our flag with its message of hope to the darkest of places, to the most desolate homes and to the most despairing souls among the men of every land."

The birth year celebration in the form of an evangelistic drive was declared by Commissioner McIntyre to be particularly appropriate for General Booth who, upon his conversion at 15, began a life of evangelistic effort that continued unceasing until his death. He conducted meetings at night after his hard day's work as an apprentice until 1852 when, at 23, he was ordained a Methodist minister. He preached as an evangelist in the denomination until 1865 when he opened a mission in the poverty-stricken east end of London to reach people who would not come to church. His converts extended the work of the mission around the world.

THREE NATIONAL COMPANIES OPEN ATLANTA OFFICES

Hailed by the industrial bureau of the chamber of commerce as further realization by national producers of the fact that they can no logner serve the southeastern market from their factories, branch offices of three national concerns have been opened here, it was announced Saturday.

The American Brass company, whose southeastern district manager is H. N. Peck, has opened an office at 1156 Piedmont avenue, N. E. This company deals in copper and brass and will cover Georgia, Florida, South Sarolina and North Carolina from the local office.

The American Wire Fabric company's district sales office, headed by J. E. McGaw, has opened at 161 Spring street, N. W. This company handles all forms of wire and wire products, and will cover six southeastern states.

The Balcrank Sales company, under the direction of I. E. Lewis, local manager, is located at 596 Spring street, N. W., and sells Balcrank Reese guns, lubricating guns for automobiles and all forms of industrial grease guns and grease pumps.

A Mammoth Industrial Exhibit in the South's Greatest Automobile Plant

CHEVROLET Open House Celebration

August 6-7-8th 3-5 P. M. and 7-9 P. M.

Monday afternoon and night, the Chevrolet Motor Company will open the doors of its great new Atlanta plant to the public—affording an exceptional opportunity for everyone to see the South's greatest automobile factory in actual operation.

Embodying in its construction all the lessons General Motors has learned in the building of gigantic factories . . . incorporating the most advanced, modern manufacturing methods . . . and offering every provision for the comfort and safety of all employees—this latest General Motors unit ranks as one of the foremost industrial enterprises in this section of the country.

To see this mammoth plant in operation is to witness one of the greatest industrial exhibitions the South has ever known. The immensity of the plant itself—the highly specialized equipment—the world-famous assembly line in full operation—the dramatic spectacle presented by all these facilities engaged in building automobiles—is a sight worth going miles to see.

The Chevrolet Motor Company anticipates a large attendance at this official opening of its newest plant—and has made provisions accordingly. Rudy Brown's orchestra has been engaged for the period of the celebration—a special nursery, with trained nurses in attendance, has been arranged to take care of the children—and ample parking space has been provided for all automobiles.

Make your plans now to attend this great celebration. Arrange your party and choose the afternoon or night when you will come—Aug. 6th, 7th, or 8th. We will do everything possible to make this one of the most interesting, diverting and educational experiences you have ever enjoyed.

MODEL HOME

LANGSTON-BUILT

IN GARDEN HILLS

Corner Pinetree Drive and North Hills Drive

OPEN! FOR PUBLIC INSPECTION

BEGINNING NEXT THURSDAY

12 O'Clock Noon to 10 P. M.

August 9th to Sept. 4th

This exquisite model home located in one of Atlanta's splendid subdivisions, conveniently near to all home needs, was built especially for display. It is a demonstration of the ability in designing and construction of the R. L. Langston Company, whose experience in all phases of home building has won a distinguished place among organizations of its kind.

To prove the exceptional qualifications of the Langston Company in the development of home construction, and not as a project to sell, was this model home erected. It is complete in every detail and ultra-modern in its ideals of construction.

Now the public is given the opportunity to inspect and take advantage of the many features unique to the R. L. Langston type of quality home building. Drive out to the model home your first chance, but remember that it will be open only from August 8th to Sept. 4th.

You always get a good house and positively the utmost in value when you insist that it be "Langston-built."

If you are interested in home building a consultation with our experts will cost you nothing and be worth many dollars to you in the end.

Receiver's Sale

95 BUILDING LOTS

BEAUTIFUL OAKDALE ESTATES

Next THURSDAY AFTERNOON, AUGUST 9TH, BEGINNING AT 1:00 o'clock, we are going to close out Oakdale Estates for the receivers. Oakdale Estates is located on and adjacent to Wieuca Road, one-half mile west of Peachtree Road.

This auction affords an opportunity to profit on a small investment, as the property presented has in the past few years enhanced materially with its greatest profit-making period to come in the next three or four years.

Rapidly has Atlanta gathered up the sections round about. And significantly does the development of this entire section prove the possibilities for those who will take advantage of this Receiver's Sale.

Remember this is an auction sale—not a proposition of meeting a price set down by the other fellow. Come—be one of the fortunate ones who gets a section of Atlanta's greatest real estate opportunities.

Every part of Oakdale Estates is directly in the path of Atlanta's progress. Every lot is a bargain in itself and there are various size plots to meet any requirement or desired investment.

RADIO in the HOME

RADIO-ING The Air Waves.

BY THE DIAL TWISTER.

"Zounds!" "Gadzooks!" "Hold!" "Unhand me, Sir!" and other such oaths and imprecations of old England in the middle ages will come tumbling out of the radio speakers Monday evening when Robin Hood, Allan-a-Dale, Friar Tuck and the merry men of Sherwood forest will be recreated in musical drama for the Fisher Body hour of the General Motors family party.

For the playlet, Messrs. Gerald Stopp and Henry Riske Carlton, authors, have selected the story of Allan-a-Dale's romance with Rosalind, whose stern father, Sir Giles of Hettensford, is determined to marry his fair daughter to the aged "scarecrow," Sir Hugo Mallipenny, and to string the penniless minstrel, Allan-a-Dale, to the limb of a tree in Sherwood forest. The happy meeting of the lovers in the moonlight is depicted, to the accompaniment of old English music. Interrupted by the arrival of the angry father, Rosalind pledges herself to wed Sir Hugo on the morrow, to save her sweetheart's neck.

But Robin Hood and his famous band turn tragedy into a happy ending, by taking the affair into their own hands in the style which Robin Hood loved in his role of benefactor to the oppressed—all with a background of music appropriate to the scene, time and subject, including selections from DeKoven's famous opera on the life of the hero of Sherwood Forest.

The music for the entertainment will be furnished by Joseph Green's novelty orchestra and a quartet. The program, including the following musical numbers, will be broadcast by WSB and 32 NBC associated stations at 7:30 o'clock:

"My Johnny Was a Shoemaker," Old English (arranged by Weems Taylor), quartet and orchestra.
"Shepherd Hey" (Grainger), orchestra.
"The Lass of Richmond Hill" (Hook), quatet and orchestra.
Selections from "Robin Hood" (DeKoven), quartet interlude—"Brown October Ale.")

In the studios of the National Broadcasting company at New York, scenes from Russian life before the war, entitled "At the Brown Bear," will be recreated for listeners of the NBC system on Monday evenings at 8 o'clock.

The programs will be under the direction of Alexander Kiriloff, noted Russian impressario of numerous successful Russian musical productions, and will be presented by Chauve Souris artists. Andrew Salama, a well-known singer and stage director of Moscow, St. Petersburgh and Charkoff, and a member of the original Chauve Souris company will be featured. Songs of the Caucasus, guitar solos and vocal numbers will be heard.

In the gay, carefree days before bolshevism swept over Russia and submerged the aristocracy, there was a fashionable resort in St. Petersburgh known as the Brown Bear. Here gathered attendants at the court of the czar, smartly uniformed army officers and sometime royalty in person, though disguised.

While the Brown Bear existed as a rendezvous for Russian aristocracy, there was another place, equally as colorful but catering to a different social group, located on the outskirts of the Muscovite capital. This was known as the "guest house" in the gypsy village. The "guest house," once an aristocratic mansion, was reigned over by gypsies and here the songs of the Romany and the spirited dances of their dark-skinned daughters entertained the wanderers.

Millions of listeners-in will find it hard to keep their toes from tapping Tuesday night when the Seiberling Singers orchestra, under the direction of Frank Black, will trace the growth of modern American orchestration on the evening ether. The program will run the gamut from that best-known of all the shoulder-swaying pieces of negro origin, the "St. Louis Blues," played in its original form, to Gershwin's "Rhapsody in Blue," which demonstrated the full possibilities of the new symphony orchestra.

That an orchestra with an instrumentation all its own had risen out of the ashes of "jazz" was first demonstrated when the classics of the old order were transcribed into the new medium. The August 7 program promises one of the finest of these, Black's "Egyptian Echoes," a transcription of Luigini's delightful "Egyptian Ballet" music. For the rest, it will include "Kitten on the Keys," played on two pianos by Phil Ohman and Victor Arden, summer guest stars of the Seiberling hour, Rodgers' "A Tree in the Park," an example of what the new orchestra can do with a popular melody, and "Pickin' Cotton," from the current production of the Broadway musical comedy hit, George White's "Scandals."

Waldo Mayo, concert master of the Capitol Grand orchestra, and Alexander Savitsky, two violinists, well known to members of the Capitol theater "family" throughout the country, will be heard over the air with Major Bowes' Capitol family today. Others to be heard on this program will be Sylvia Miller, Dr. William Axt, David Mendoza and the Studio, Salon and Baby Grand orchestras; Westell Gordon, Hannah Klein, Louise Bave, Edward Lamont, the Major and Minor Boys and Betty Poulus. This concert will be broadcast through the National Broadcasting company and its network of stations.

A potpourri of selections from European comic operas will be the nucleus of the program to be broadcast from the Roxy theater on Monday evening, August 6, at 5:30 o'clock. The program will be heard over WSB and the other stations of the N. B. C. network.

The operettas represented in this cycle contain some of the most popular compositions of the lighter musical forms and include such widely known classics as Lehar's "Chocolate Soldier." Fall's "Dollar Princess," Reinhardt's "Spring Maid" and "Fledermaus" and "The Gypsy Baron," by Johann Strauss.

Other European composers who will be represented are Paul Lincke, Oscar Strauss and Emmerich Kalman. The principal selections will be songs which have achieved international popularity, among which are "Glow Worm," by Lincke, "My Hero," from "The Chocolate Soldier," "Love, Love, Love," from the "Dollar Princess" and "Ha Zaa Zaa," from Kalman's "Sari." Gladys Rice, Beatrice Belkin, Harold Van Duzee, Douglas Stanbury, Viola Philo and Aldo Pomonte will be assisted by the Roxy Symphony orchestra of 110 musicians in the presentation of this group of songs.

RECORD REPRODUCES SCENES WITH MUSIC

John L. Baird, radio-television inventor, has perfected a radio system which utilizes a phonograph record with two needle tracks, one of which reproduces the voice of the singer while the other reproduces the singer's features, according to a representative of Captain Oliver G. Hutchinson, managing director of the Baird International Television, Ltd., of London. The device, which is said to be small and compact, will plug into an ordinary radio set or phonograph. It can be used to entertain the owner with either broadcast television images intercepted simultaneously with the radio artist's voice or provide like entertainment entirely from two recordings on the phonograph disk, the representative of Captain Hutchinson said. The machine is to be produced for home use as soon as feasible.

Only one televisor scanning-disk apparatus is necessary for the owner, as the radio set, phonograph and television receiver may be combined compactly in the same console. Such a combination, called "phonovision," is to be demonstrated here soon by engineers of the American-Baird Television corporatioin, whose offices are in the Paramount building.

About a year ago Mr. Baird predicted that a "sight machine" would some day be developed which would be easily applicable to the ordinary phonograph, enabling the owner to enjoy a "motion picture by putting on his machine a record combining the principles of television and the phonograph." Thereupon Mr. Baird set himself to the task and accomplished it to the satisfaction of Dr. J. A. Fleming, Great Britain's vacuum tub inventor, to whom it was demonstrated a few weeks ago, the representative said.

"Paul Whiteman, playing his latest jazz piece on the record, will be visible leading the orchestra, as the record was actually made in the recording studio," according to Captain Hutchinson. "Baird's phonovision by gramophone records is accomplished by two needles instead of one. The image of the singer, or of whatever the record happens to be, will be reproduced as well as the sound."

GAMASHES LAND GREAT STURGEON TO LEAD FISHERS

Chicago, August 4.—(AP)—The president and vice president are fishing; Mr. Hoover was fishing; and so also were Louis and John Gamash, of Waukegan. And of all the fishermen, Louis and John appear on the basis of incomplete returns to have made the largest catch.

The Gamashes pulled a 125-pound sturgeon from Lake Michigan yesterday. Knowing the narrowness of public credulity when fish are involved, Louis and John are keeping their behemoth alive for the benefit of the doubting Thomases.

The sturgeon is described as being even larger than the one on display in the Lincoln park museum here.

Old Daguerreotype Of Ancestors Given President Coolidge

Superior, Wis., August 4.—(AP)—An old double daguerreotype of his great-grandparents, the first he has ever seen, has reached President Coolidge through Clay Perry, writer and distant relative of the chief executive.

The daguerreotype was old and faded, but still showed perfectly clearly the features of Mr. Coolidge's ancestors. Mr. Perry came into possession of the portrait through his mother, the late Mrs. Lillian Coolidge Perry, of Milwaukee, who was a cousin of President Coolidge's father.

After the presentation, Mr. Perry said that the chief executive had not previously known that pictures of any kind of his great-grandparents existed.

Hoover Acceptance Speech To Come Via Radio to Atlanta

When Herbert Hoover formally accepts the presidential nomination of the republican party in the huge stadium of Leland Stanford, Jr. University, August 11, 90,000 people will see and hear him speak. At the same time his voice will be heard in every section of the United States and will be available for radio listeners throughout the world. WSB will broadcast the program in Atlanta.

The radio network, over which the voice of the republican presidential candidate will be broadcast will be the largest in the history of broadcasting if no hitch occurs in present plans, according to a statement issued by the National Broadcasting company. Arrangements have been made for the speech to go on the air from 85 radio stations in the United States and from four or more short wave transmitters for reception in foreign countries.

The combined three networks of the National Broadcasting company, totalling 46 stations, will form the backbone of the huge chain. Stations of another broadcasting system and a number of independent stations also will be included in the hook-up.

The present record for national hook-ups is 85 stations for the broadcast of the Radio Industries' banquet from the Hotel Astor in New York, September 21, 1927.

Notification ceremonies will begin at 5 p. m., Pacific coast time. This means that the broadcast will go on the air at 6 p. m., Mountain time, at 7 p. m., central standard time; 8 p. m., eastern time, and 9 p. m., eastern daylight saving time.

Governor C. C. Young, of California, will be the first speaker on the air. He will introduce George H. Moses, senator from New Hampshire and chairman of the republican notification committee. Senator Moses then will formally notify Secretary Hoover of his election as the republican standard bearer in the presidential campaign. Secretary Hoover will deliver his acceptance speech and is scheduled to speak for 45 minutes. In his speech, Secretary Hoover is expected to discuss the campaign issues and clarify his party's attit

1928 RADIO-ELECTRICAL SHOW IS SET FOR SEPTEMBER 10-15

All Booths Are Taken; Committees Selected For Auditorium Fair

South's Greatest Exposition To Last Six Days; Girls' Contest for $450 in Prizes to be One of Features; Every Manner of Electrical Contrivance Will Be Displayed.

The 1928 Atlanta Radio-Electrical exposition to be held September 10 to 15, inclusive, in the city auditorium promises to be the greatest annual affair ever held in the south, Foster B. Steward, managing director, stated Saturday in giving out the first detailed plans for the show.

Announcement of committees, headed by and composed of members who assure making the big radio and electrical fair such a success that past expositions will seem small in comparison, and the contracting for all the booths in the huge exposition hall with the exception of six are being held open, Saturday started the ball rolling with every confidence that when the show opens Atlanta will offer something in the way of fairs which will draw greater crowds than have ever attended such an event in the history of radio in the south.

Heading the committees are Rodney Morison, Jr., southern manager, National Carbon company, general chairman; F. H. Bosler, American Electric Lamp company, executive committee chairman; Henry L. Reid, contest committee chairman; E. V. Dunbar, Alexander-Sewald company, publicity chairman, and H. A. Pendergraph, Georgia Power company, audit committee chairman.

Variety of Displays.

Twenty-eight concerns have taken space in the exhibition hall. Many of the firms and corporations have contracted for from three to seven booths for the display of their products. At the exposition, there will be shown every member of electrical contrivance, the newest in radio receiving sets and cabinet, loud speakers, tubes and accessories of every nature, every electrical appliance from curling irons to vacuum cleaners and hundreds of novelties, the product of the electrical engineers and the laboratories of some of the largest electrical corporations in the world.

One of the most important and interesting features of the radio-electrical exposition will be the contest among Atlanta girls in ticket sales. Cash prizes will be awarded totaling $475 to the four leading girls in the contest. First prize will be $200; second prize, $150; third prize, $75, and fourth prize, $50. In addition, all girls in the contest will be awarded 10 per cent of all money collected from the sale of general admisison tickets to the exposition.

Any young girl or woman, either single or married, is eligible to enter the contest. Former contests have proved the interest this contest arouses.

Firms Taking Booths.

Firms which have contracted for the 58 booths in the exhibition hall are as follows:

Alexander-Seewald Co., booths Nos. 65, 66, 67, 68; American Electric Lamp Co., booths Nos. 45 and 46; Beck & Gregg Hardware Co., booths No. 50 and 51; Capital Electric Co., booths Nos. 56 and 57; Columbia Phonograph Co., booths Nos. 10 and 11; Electrical Supervision Co., booth No. 9; Eureka Vacuum Cleaner Co., booth No. 27; French Battery Co., booth No. 32; Frigidaire Corp., booths Nos. 6, 7 and 8; Fulton Bros. Electric Co., booths Nos. 54 and 69; General Electric Supply Co., booths Nos. 55 and 56; Georgia Power Co., booths Nos. 14, 15, 16, 17, 18, 19 and 20; Gilham Electric Co., booths Nos. 82 and 83; Hoover Suction Sweeper Co., booth No. 24; Hopkins Equipment Co., booths Nos. 59, 60, 62 and 63; Ludden & Bates, booth No. 75; Lyon & King, booths Nos. 48 and 49; Ed & Al. Matthews, booth No. 34; Murphy Co., booth No. 22; National Carbon Co., booths Nos. 77, 78 and 79; Peaslee-Gaulbert Co. of Ga., booths Nos. 3, 4 and 5; Philadelphia Storage Battery Co., booths Nos. 41 and 42; Henry L. Reid & Co., booth No. 76; Sears, Roebuck & Co., booth No. 36; Sterchi Furniture & Carpet Co., booths Nos. 1 and 2; Stewart-Warner Sales Co., booths Nos. 73 and 74; Withers & Chapman, booth No. 47; Brunswick Balke Collender, booths Nos. 28 and 29.

1928 Committees.

The committees appointed for the 1928 show are as follows. General chairman, Rodney Morison, Jr., National Carbon company; executive committee, F. H. Bosler, chairman, American Electric Lamp company; I. H. Morehead, Georgia Power company; E. V. Dunbar, Alexander-Seewald company; E. F. Yancey, Stewart-Warner Sales company; L. G. Fulton, Fulton Bros. Electric company; J. J. Perry, General Electric Supply corporation.

Contest Committe, Henry L. Reid, chairman, Henry L. Reid company; F. B. Davis, Walker Prass company; George Adair, General Electric Supply company; Dave Calkin, National Carbon company; K. R. Irvine, Columbia Phonograph company; G. L. Washington, Gilham Electric company; A. K. Dearing, Beck & Gregg company; Paul Duffee, Duffee-Freeman; J. C. Calhoun, French Battrey company; Brower Murphy, Brower Murphy company; D. C. Alexander, Alexander-Sewald company; Al Matthews, Ed and Al Mathhews; E. M. De Ramus, Hoover company; P. J. Mackillop, Philadelphia Storage Battery company; G. R. Dendy, National Carbon company; W. P. De Klyne, Eureka Vacuum Cleaner company.

Publicity committee, E. V. Dunbar, chairman, Alexander-Seewald company; Lambdin Kay, Atlanta Journal; Dick Winchell, Atlanta Georgian; R. C. Whitehead, Atlanta Constitution.

Audit committee, H. A. Pendergraph, chairman; Georgia Power company; H. D. V. Hopkins, Hopkins Equipment company; W. H. Brimberry, Capitol Electric company.

PROGRAMS FROM AFAR WORK SHANGHAI SETS

Shanghai, August 4.—(AP)—International radio programs, heralded in the United States as a likely development this winter, have for many months been a reality to Shanghai amateur radio enthusiasts.

Although no relay broadcasting has yet been attempted in Asia or in Japan, international programs are frequently available here as a result of the close proximity of neighboring countries.

A Shanghai listener with an average set can frequently pick up musical programs from Manila or Tokyo. Other stations in different parts of Japan also are heard here frequently, all of them offering programs of a diversified nature.

Mukden, in Manchuria, also is the source of unusually good musical programs which local radio fans pick up almost nightly.

The amateur experts reach still further at times, picking up Australian, Hawaiian and Russian stations. European stations also are heard here by those who have exceptionally good sets.

Shanghai has two broadcasting stations, both of which supply varied programs of music and talks.

Hoover's Speech will be Delivered from the Leland Stanford, Jr. University, Saturday, August 11th, and will be Broadcast Over the National Network Stations. . . . Ceremonies Begin at 7 P. M. Central Standard Time.

The republican national candidate for the United States is shown above signing the international radio agreements which makes it possible for radio listeners throughout the world to hear his voice at the time of his formal address accepting the republican nomination.

Notification ceremonies of the event will be presented by the Leland Stanford University band at 7 P. M., central standard time, and in connection with the program, several speakers including Governor C. C. Young, of California, and others of national prominence will be heard.

Secretary Hoover is expected to speak for forty-five minutes, discussing campaign issues and clarifying his party's attitude on issues of national importance. Not only will you be able to hear this first campaign speech since his nomination, but you'll be ready for the many that are certain to follow if you have an Atwater Kent Radio installed in your home.

The most interesting and powerful campaign speeches in years will be the enjoyment of the entire family if you have an Atwater Kent Radio to bring them to your home. You can find nothing that will be as educational or impressive, and the moderate cost of installation brings this faithful instrument within the easy reach of all.

Smith's Acceptance Speech will be Broadcast on August 22nd

"Al" Smth's formal acceptance of the Democratic nomination for President of the United States will be broadcast over the national network of Radio broadcasting stations on August 22nd. Although Smith has already outlined his visits to a number of outstanding cities in the United States where, before certain political gatherings he will personally indorse the platform of the Democratic party, it is known that most of his speaking will be confined to radio alone. Even on his tours, arrangements have been made where possible to afford the national hook-up of the entire network. With the Atwater Kent in your home, you will have the opportunity on all these occasions to hear the views, ideas, versions, policies and expectations of the Democratic candidate discussed in the frank and impressive forms of expression characteristic of only "Al" Smith.

LANGSTON MODEL HOME ON DISPLAY

With Thursday, August 9, marking formal opening of the model home erected by R. L. Langston company, well-known residential constructors, home-minded Atlantans will be afforded an unusual opportunity of familiarization with requirements of the ideal residence.

The dwelling is a spacious seven-room bungalow and is situated on Pinetree drive in Garden Hills. It is now receiving the finishing touches under the expert workmanship of the Langston organization. Starting this Thursday, the model home will be on exhibition through September 4.

Of fundamental value to the beauty, comfort and convenience of the residence is the lot, according to R. L. Langston, prominent in the construction field. A site facing north on Pinetree drive and occupying the center of a beautiful environment has been selected for the Langston model home demonstration. The lot has a frontage of 85 feet.

In construction of the house utmost care has been exercised in order that every detail will serve as a valuable example for visitors to the home who are anticipating building for themselves, Mr. Langston explained. The architectural design was planned to provide distinctive and individual appearance in the residence. On the interior, the layout of rooms and finishing decorations have been arranged to illustrate the successful combination of elegance and convenience, Mr. Langston said.

Two baths, with tiled floors and walls, equipped with fixtures in harmonizing colors, indicate suitable proportionment for the seven-room house. Among the modern installations that visitors to the Langston model home will see are the electric dish washing sink, air filter equipped boiler, providing moving warm, moist and clean air evenly heated throughout the house, and appointments in keeping with the high standard of construction set by the builder.

The house has a Buckingham slate roof to protect it from the elements above, while below is a concrete and stone basement, assuring the greatest comfort and safety in this capacity. Promenade tile porch floor and steps set off the exterior of the home, which is supplemented by a double garage with overhead sliding doors and an approach driveway of asphalt finish.

The home has been built specifically for exhibition purposes, Mr. Langston stated, and will afford noteworthy pointers to prospective home builders of Atlanta.

SIX REAL ESTATE DEVELOPERS GET PLAYGROUND AID

Six real estate developers in five states have been awarded the first playground grants from the $40,000 fund offered during 1928 by the Harmon foundation, established by the late William E. Harmon. Each will receive $2,000 to be used for improving and equipping an area set aside permanently in a new subdivision for public recreation purposes.

The winners were selected from more than 200 companies that have applied to the Playground and Recreation association of America, administering the plan of awards and determined the final choice through personal inspection of the property. Decisions were made on the basis of the city's rapid growth in population, the high type and promise of the subdivision, the suitability of the proposed area for recreation, and clear title to the land. Each of the playground sites has been accepted by the city for future maintenance in perpetuity as a public recreation center, which was an important factor in the choice.

At least 14 additional subdivisions will receive awards for improving playgrounds before the end of the year. There is still opportunity to apply for a grant, according to the Playground and Recreation association of America, 315 Fourth avenue, New York city, to whom applications should be made. Other conditions being equal, preference will be given to the larger play areas.

REALTY TRADE INDEX SHOWS 2-POINT DROP

Real estate market activity for June was measured by an index figure of 159, according to the compilation made monthly by the National Association of Real Estate boards. The compilation is made from official figures of transfers and conveyances recorded in 41 typical cities.

The index is two points lower than the index for June of 1927.

It is two points higher than the index for May of the present year.

The association's compilation uses for its base the average number of transfers and conveyances recorded in the 41 cities during the corresponding month of the years 1916-23. Since it does not include in this base the years 1924-1927, it is pointed out that in interpreting the index the figure found for any month is comparable with that of the corresponding month of the previous year, but is incomparable with that of the month directly preceding it.

OAKDALE ESTATES TO BE AUCTIONED BY SMYTH BROS.

Sale of the Oakdale Estates property, involving 95 beautiful building lots, located in the Wieuca road section, beginning at 1 o'clock Thursday afternoon, August 9, according to announcement Saturday by Smyth Brothers Real Estate Auction company, which will have charge of the sale.

The property is now in hands of receivers, W. B. Stewart and T. J. Long, Jr., and is being sold for them by Smith Brothers, well-known auctioneers.

The land has been widely advertised as the Oakdale Estates, being in the midst of the city's leading northside residential area.

NATIONAL ASSOCIATION TO STUDY TAX REFORM

Need of state tax reforms is expected to be one of the principal problems to be taken up at a meeting of the National Tax association to be held in Seattle August 27 to 31. State levies now constitute a greater problem than federal taxes students of the general tax situation have pointed out.

Trust Income In Lieu of Dower Is Tax Exempt

A decision of importance in connection with the payment of income tax on real estate holdings has been handed down by the circuit court of appeals for the first district.

The decision holds that where a widow is given and accepts the income from a trust left by her deceased husband in lieu of her dower and any other claims she might have against his estate, such income from the trust constitutes not income but capital in her hands. (U. S. v. Wilfred Bolster, executor, 2208, decided June 13).

The decision means that in general whenever a widow receives income from a trust in lieu of her dower such income is not subject to tax.

The cases citied in the opinion seem to indicate that it does not matter whether the amount received by the widow is equal to or more or less than the fair market value of her dower right, according to an opinion given to the National Association of Real Estate boards by its general counsel, Nathan William MacChesney.

"One important question is suggested by this case, but not decided: if the amount received by the widow during the tax years in question exceeded the value of her dower, would that excess be subject to tax? This point has not been decided," General MacChesney points out.

The details of the case are as follows: Orlando H. Davenport, of Massachusetts, died January 11, 1915, leaving a will which created a trust, the income of which was to be paid to his widow during her life in lieu of dower and all other claims.

For the years 1919 to 1923, inclusive, this income amounted to nearly $114,000; and the widow paid the tax on it each year. The widow died May 28, 1923, and her executor brought this suit to recover the tax she had paid and obtained judgment.

This case was decided in favor of the executor of the will on the theory that the receipt of this income from the trust by the widow constituted consideraion paid for her relinquishment of her dower right. Accordingly she is regarded as a purchaser for value under the provisions of the will; and is not regarded as a devisee under the will.

TRAIN IN KANSAS IS WATERBOUND BY CLOUDBURST

Coffeyville, Kans., August 4.—(AP)—The Missouri Pacific passenger train No. 118, the "Rainbow Special," Little Rock to Kansas City, was reported water-bound at Arnola, near Wagoner, Okla., today. The train, which was due here at 6 a. m., had not arrived at 9 o'clock.

Reports to the division offices of the railroad here said a cloudburst was experienced last night in the section where the train is marooned.

Tracks of the Frisco and Missouri-Kansas-Texas railroads at the same point were also reported washed out.

RAILROAD AND MOTOR TRANSPORTATION HALTED.

Muskogee, Okla., August 4.—(AP)—Railroad and motor car transportation was disrupted and considerable flood damage caused by a cloudburst in Mayes and Wagoner counties early today.

Tracks of the Missouri-Kansas-Texas railroad on the St. Louis-Galveston line were washed out north of Wagoner.

Water stood 3 and 4 feet deep in the main street of Locust Grove.

INSTITUTE OF AFFAIRS OPENS SESSION TODAY

Charlottesville, Va., August 4.—(AP) Assembling leaders prominent in the life of the nation, the second institute of public affairs of the University of Virginia will begin its sessions here August 5 with a large attendance predicted by Dean Charles G. Mappis, director. The sessions will continue through August 18.

Designed to advance the popular understanding of current public questions, the institute proposes to emphasize particularly the domestic problems of the United States and to have them discussed in a broad and competent manner by men charged with the task of public administration and by those who are actively engaged in public affairs, Dean Mappis has announced.

"Religion and Public Affairs" is the subject of an address by the Rev. Joseph Fort Newton, rector of St. Paul's Memorial church, Overbrook, Pa., to be delivered at the vesper service tomorrow night.

Formal exercises of the conversation will not take place until Monday night, when each of the ten round table leaders will speak briefly.

Round table conferences and open forum discussions will begin Monday morning with differences between the democratic and republican parties being taken up at the first open forum. This will be led by Arthur H. Hatton, professor of political science in Northwestern university.

Aeronautics is to be the subject of a special round table to be conducted during the first week.

A debate on prohibition as a party issue has been arranged for next Friday night. Louis C. Cramton, Michigan congressman, has agreed to represent the republican viewpoint on prohibition and John Philip Hill, former Maryland congressman, will represent the democrats.

The right of the United States to interfere in the internal affairs of foreign nations to protect lives and property will be discussed at the open forum next Tuesday morning under the leadership of Dr. John H. Latine, of Johns Hopkins university.

ROCKET CAR BURNED IN RECORD ATTEMPT

Hanover, Germany, August 4.—(AP) A new effort of Fritz Van Opel to establish a speed record with one of his rocket cars on rails ended in failure today when the car blew up.

Opel had two cars, the Rak IV and Rak V in readiness. He expected to develop some 250 to 300 miles an hour. Each car weighed about 1,700 pounds or twice the weight of an earlier model.

The Rak IV started with two rockets alight and the other rockets were to be ignited successively at intervals of a few seconds. Hardly had 200 yards been covered when something went wrong. Suddenly a huge flame spurted through the dense cloud of smoke from the rear of the car and all the rockets exploded together. One wheel was found in a potato field 300 feet away.

Opel expressed the belief that a short circuit caused the explosion. The cars run without any driver and no one was injured.

Belated Zero Hour Near

NOTIFICATION CEREMONIES APPROACH

For National Candidates

BY D. FIELD BRITTLE.
Associated Press Staff Writer.

Washington, August 4.—(AP)—The belated zero hour of the quadrennial presidential campaign is now only one week away.

On next Saturday afternoon Herbert Hoover will formally be notified in California of his nomination to lead the republican ticket, and 10 days later Governor Smith at Albany will similarly be advised by the democrats. But these routine ceremonies, for all their weighty importance, will merely be tardy trumpet calls of hostilities already begun.

Some units of the republican and democratic armies long ago went over the parapet with a preliminary battle of musketry to pave the way for the big berthas of the Hoover and Smith speeches of acceptance.

Greatest Fervor In South.

The early skirmishing has been fairly general, but of greatest fervor in the south. The fighting has done much to outline well in advance the battle ground for this perhaps most spectacular of later-day campaigns. Its boundaries appear now to be those of the entire country, with party drives in all directions in prospect. The proverbial solid democratic south is now fixed as a republican objective, and the democrats are looking to usually republican farmer strongholds in the west.

While the party privates have been waging their individual warfare the nominees have been shaping up their speeches of acceptance. Mr. Hoover has turned over to the printers his address of 6,000 words, rewritten and revised and finally approved. With that first major task of the campaign out of the way, Hoover is off for another week-end vacation in the California fishing grounds.

Governor Smith is returning to his desk at Albany from a long Island seashore vacation not so far advanced with his speech as is Hoover. As is the case with the republican nominee, Smith has given no indication of the nature of his address except to intimidate that it will deal exhaustively with farm relief and prohibition, which have been thrust into the foreground.

With his acceptance speech still in the making, Governor Smith has let it be known that the equalization fee farm relief idea is not acceptable to him, although he reads the democratic platform as recognizing the control of the sale of agricultural surpluses as essential, the cost to be borne by the unit benefitted. So far as he is concerned the fee as the one particular cure for the situation can remain where President Coolidge sent it with his two vetoes of the McNary-Haugen bill.

He so announced during the week after conferences with George N. Peek, Illinois farm leader, who said he would support Smith rather than Hoover because of the farm issue. In turning away from the equalization fee, the governor reiterated that he now has no plan of his own for farm relief but if elected he would have one ready for congress, with the assistance of both democratic and republican advisers possibly including former Governor Lowden, of Illinois, one of the Hoover convention opponents.

As the nominees are priming their big guns and watching the activities of their own cohorts and those of the enemy, they have come upon some strange developments. A bloc of southern dry democrats has bolted to Hoover; a similar switch to Smith is talked of among western republican farm leaders, and several prominent individuals have publicly announced their intention to trade parties at the polls.

A notable defection of the week was that of Vance C. McCormick, manager of Woodrow Wilson's 1916 campaign, who repudiated Smith. William R. Pattangall has followed the lead of Mrs. Pattangall, who recently resigned as democratic national committeewoman to vote for Hoover. Professor John Erskine, of Columbia university, gave prohibition as his reason for dropping his republican identity to vote for Smith. He said he would support the governor because of his belief in "temperance" as opposed to Hoover's belief in "prohibition."

The week now closing witnessed the opening of the fight for New York's block of electoral votes, former Senator James W. Wadsworth declaring in western New York that the democratic party had not a single issue to offer the people. In Maine an impressive list of speakers is espousing republican doctrine in preparation for the September 7 election. In other eastern and New England states the campaign has not yet warmed up beyond the preliminary office work stage.

The campaign in the south leads all other sections in vigor, most of it springing from the anti-Smith camp of dry church men and women. Horace A. Mann, a former Tennessee leader, is in charge of the republican organization work in the south, under the direction of Chairman Work, of the national committee. Work is taking his plans with him to see Mr. Hoover and their conference may decide to what extent the party will endeavor to break up the solid south.

The value placed upon the woman's vote has been emphasized by activities within both parties. Republican women now are meeting in Chicago under the leadership of Mrs. Alvin T. Hert, of Kentucky, a vice chairman of the national committee. She has appointed Mrs. Bertha Bauer, national committeewoman for Illinois, as head of the women's western division. The democratic women also are active, with Mrs. Nellie Tayloe Ross, of Wyoming, vice chairman of the national committee, preparing to open headquarters in New York. She may make a tour of some regions to rally her sex to the Smith banner.

A one-man invasion of the Tammany jungle by William Allen White, the Kansas editor, provided a momentary flurry in both party camps. Mr. White dug up Governor Smith's assembly votes on saloon and vice matters, withdrew a part of his charges because he said he did not wish to question Smith's motives, and then sailed for Europe. He drew no extended reply from Governor Smith but on the republican side Representative Griest, of Pennsylvania, telegraphed Mr. Work suggesting that he "bottle up tight" White and all "hot air artists" because they "are a distinct liability."

PEACH SEASON ENDS AFTER BUMPER CROP

Macon, Ga., August 4.—(AP)—The peach season in Georgia will end next week with a total shipment between 15,500 and 16,000 carloads, according to W. C. Bewley, general manager of the Georgia peach growers exchange here.

In a summary of the season's shipments he finds that the season has been comparable to 1924 and 1926 as each had a bumper crop and a late season.

On the whole, he found prices to be very satisfactory for early varieties, fair to poor for Hileys and Georgial Belles and very unsatisfactory for Elbertas.

"Prices were lower on Elbertas," Mr. Bewley said, "because the supply exceeded the demand but also because of the large proportion of inferior fruit shipped. The cargo that was shipped to England through Savannah arrived in fair to good condition and further shipments were urged by agents there."

He concluded with the expectation that a number of growers would get out of the industry on account of the culminating experiences of several years.

Raids by Police Prove Annoying To Movie Actors

Hollywood, Calif., August 4.—The main streets of Hollywood have been thrilled a half dozen times lately by police cavalcades swooping around on raids.

One raid in the 7,000 block on Hawthorne avenue, near the Western hotel and theater headquarters of elite Hollywood, netted more than $50,000 worth of liquors in a 16-room house, which had been fitted up as an all night gathering place for fashionable parties.

A truck load of bottled stuff was confiscated at a place called the Studio cafe, located in the shadow of the Fox Film plant. This place has been fitted out inside like a Tia Juana cafe. It was filled with screen players, men and women, when the police broke in.

A third place, the Richelieu cafe, hid its liquor in secret walls, but the cops found the combination.

A fourth big raid was made on Sunset Boulevard. This was the gambling headquarters for movie players, according to the police. The raiders removed a truck full of gambling paraphernalia. The gambling raid was made, it was said, because of complaints filed by film producers.

DR. WANG EVOLVES SYSTEM TO SEND CHINESE BY WIRE

Urbana, Ill., August 4.—(AP)—Another Chinese puzzle, sending Chinese by telegraph, has been solved after 15 years of research by Dr. C. C. Wong, former University of Illinois student.

Out of the maze of characters making up the Chinese language, a commission headed by Dr. Wang, has evolved a system of phonetics which for the first time will enable the Chinese to send telegrams in their own tongue. Dr. Wang explained his system in a letter to President David Kinley, of the university, here. Dr. Wang's system will go into effect January 1, 1929, he said.

Heretofore a system of numbers, requiring decoding was used.

INVESTORS' SYNDICATE HOLDS BIG CONVENTION

Representatives of the Investors' Syndicate from ten southern states and officers of the national headquarters in Minneapolis and the affiliated Jefferson Mortgage company, of Birmingham, recently held a convention in Atlanta marking another milestone in that company's progress. In an announcement Saturday, A. R. Walker, city sales manager of the Investors' Syndicate in Atlanta, stated that activities of the company discussed at the convention revealed an increase during the past 12 months of double the previous year's business.

J. R. Ridgeway, of Minneapolis, president of the Investors' Syndicate; J. C. Meyers, of Birmingham, president of the Jefferson Mortgage company; C. R. Meyer, manager of the newly established Atlanta branch; King Merritt, of Minneapolis, western division sales manager, and C. E. Abbott, of New York, eastern division sales manager, were among the notables attending the convention. The business sessions and banquet at the Ansley hotel were presided over by K. E. Sharpe, of Memphis, southern division sales manager of the Investors' Syndicate.

In addition to the men named above, state managers from each of the ten states in the southern division, participated in addressed delivered at the convention. Sessions were continued over a period of three days, with every phase of the company's business being discussed, Mr. Walker stated.

The company, one of the best esablished national concerns in this field, has operated in the south for seven years and has maintained offices in the Healey building here for five years, Mr. Walker said. Rapid development of the company's business in Atlanta was predicted by the national and local officers.

The latest Atlanta development was establishment of the branch of the Jefferson Mortgage company, under management of Mr. Meyer. This company acts as loan agency for the Investors' Syndicate, specializing in the "disappearing mortgage" on residential real estate.

RUM SHIP SEIZURES TAKEN BY HIGH COURT

Washington, August 4.—(AP)—Coast guard seizures of foreign vessels outside the territorial waters of the United States and the confiscation of their liquor cargoes when there was no evidence that they had established contact with the shore, were challenged in the supreme court today by three cases in New York city, arising out of the seizures of the French schooner Mistinguette and the British auxiliary schooner Rosie M. M.

After the federal district court had ordered the return of the cargoes and the release of the schooners on the ground that the seizures were illegal, the circuit court of appeals held that under the tariff act the government had authority for making the seizures because both vessels were off their course, establishing a presumption that they were seeking an opportunity to land cargoes.

The schooners did not have manifests for a voyage to the United States.

DRUGGISTS GIVEN RIGHT TO PURCHASE ALCOHOL IN PINTS

Washington, August 4.—(AP)—For the first time since prohibition went into effect druggists in the near future will be able to obtain alcohol in pint bottles instead of being forced to obtain it in five-gallon cans and bottle it themselves.

Prohibition officials announced today that effective August 15 alcohol could be purchased in pint and gallon quantities. This action is in line with that requested by the druggists, many of whom have complained to the treasury that the five-gallon quantities were considerably larger than the amount needed to be kept on hand.

COSTES PLANNING AMERICAN FLIGHT IN NEAR FUTURE

Washington, August 4.—(AP)—Major Georges Thenault, the assistant military attache of the French embassy, has informed the war department that Lieutenant Dieudonne Costes is soon to attempt a flight to the United States.

His route will be via Cape Finisterre, on the northwest coast of Spain, and the Azores, flying a Breguet plane 19, with a 600-horsepower Hispiano engine. The machine carries radio equipment.

MASSELL REPORTS $175,800 LEASES

Commercial leases aggregating $175,800 were consummated between the Massell Realty company and tenants in 15 deals during the past 60 day, it was announced Saturday by S. A. Massell, secretary. A significant feature of the deals is the variety of business located through the leases and the wide scope of central and semi-central property involved.

Details of the negotiations contained in the list issued by Mr. Massell are as follows:

To Howell & Norris, soda, cigar and sandwich shop, at 161 Spring street, office building.

To L. C. Gentle, space for poolroom at 124-126 Edgewood avenue.

To Dunlop Tire and Rubber company, warehouse at 188 Walker street, loft at 194 Trinity avenue.

To Abbott Brothers, garage, at 780 Gordon street, S. W.

To Lane Drug Stores, Inc., warehouse, at 381 Whitehall street, S. W.

To R. S. McCarthy, filling station, Walker and Stonewall streets.

To Richard Hellman Mayonnaise company, space for north side branch, 16 West Tenth street.

To Will Ross, hotel, 80 decatur street.

To K. Sunshine, store room for delicatessen, 519 Ponce de Leon avenue, northeast.

To Lane Cotton Mills, loft, 412 West Peachtree street.

To Ragsdale Motor company, branch sales room, 784 Gordon street, southwest.

To Breen Manufacturing company, loft, 194 Trinity avenue.

To Duckett company, store room, 181 Whitehall street.

To Yourtsanis & Poulis, soda found and cafe, 58 Baltimore block.

Locations involved in the leases are all on property owned by the Massell Realty company, portions of which were recently improved for income purposes.

French Plan Seas On Sahara Desert To Alter Climate

London, August 4.—(AP)—A plan to change the climate of northern Africa by creating inland seas in the Sahara desert is being considered seriously by the French government. The cabinet is expected to make a decision on the question in September.

Dwight Braman, of New York, is the engineer who presented the plan and undertook to raise in American $50,000,000 to further the project. He made an intensive engineering study last spring of the arid wastes lying below the level of the Mediterranean and extending from the Gulf of Gabes westward to Biskra. He formulated plans to cut three ship canals 40 feet deep and 200 feet wide connecting the Mediterranean sea at Gabes with three dry saline lake beds called "schotts."

It is estimated that Mediterranean waters by means of these canals would flood permanent some 10,000 square miles, reaching from Gabes westward. This would mean a water route of about 250 miles for seagoing ships through a part of Tunis and deep into Algeria. The main purpose, however, is to affect climatic conditions and increase rainfall which, Braman undertakes to demonstrate, will be the result.

His scheme is based on that of a commission of French engineers, among whom was M. De Lasseps, who in 1882 made a minute survey of the entire region.

The American engineer, however, must have a concession before beginning operations—and on that the French cabinet must decide—of about 50,000 square miles of territory adjoining the flooded areas. These territories are in no sense a no man's land, for they are under nominal spheres of influence of certain Arab sheiks, but as they stand they have no product of value.

NEGRESS CHARGED WITH HIDING RUM IN PAINTED BOTTLE

Painting the inside of a half-gallon fruit jar with white paint, filling it with white lightning and letting it stand around conspicuously may be a great idea, but not when Police Officers B. L. Carroll, L. B. Portwood and C. E. Thrasher are around.

Pearl Smith, negress, of 618 Tyler street, found that out Saturday night and officers lodged her in the jail on prohibition charges when they discovered the subterfuge in her home, along with two other quarts of whisky.

WOMEN'S SCREAMS ROUT MARAUDERS FROM THREE HOMES

Frightened screams of women scared away burglars in three instances early Saturday morning, two of the intruders being set to flight before they obtained any loot.

Miss Inez Cochran, of 126 Georgia avenue, S. W., was awakened early in the morning by a burglar who seized her by the shoulders, shook her awake and cautioned her not to scream. She screamed, however, arousing other occupants and the burglar fled. Search disclosed a total of $52 missing from pocketbooks.

Miss Evelyn and Miss Rosa Lee Bach, of 694 Crew street, and Miss Sarah Pazol, of 575 Capitol avenue, told police they had similar frights, but nothing was found missing.

GOVERNOR BAKER MAY BE APPOINTED TIGERT SUCCESSOR

Washington, August 4.—(AP)—Governor Sam Baker, of Missouri, former state superintendent of schools in that state, is under consideration as a successor of John J. Tigert, federal commissioner of the bureau of education.

Secretary West announced today that Governor Baker is the only one that has been suggested.

Commissioner Tigert has resigned, effective September 1, to accept the presidency of the University of Florida.

BOOK REVIEWS IN TABLOID

BISMARCK—THE STORY OF A FIGHTER.

Birmarck. Written by Emil Ludwig, author of "Napoleon," with translation from the German by Eden and Cedar Paul. It is dedicated to "Gerhart Hauptmann, in veneration and friendship."

This handsome volume is divided into five books—the first book begins the story of Bismarck from 1815, and book five is the close covering the period 1888 to 1898.

In the foreword is the following explanation: "The aim of this book is to line the portrait of a victorious and errant warrior. Here Bismarck is depicted as a character filled with pride, courage and hatred. Today when part of our nation admires him with partiality while another part condemns him, we must make a profound study of the history of his spirit."

The story of the life of Bismarck can almost be told from the faces of him painted by Rembrandt. Life gave him little love because he loved little. Germany is yet to understand the character of Bismarck as a man—not the historical man nor the political man, but the true character of a man.

The study of Bismarck, which most biographers have overlooked, or dismissed, should begin with the youth —the story of his boyhood perhaps would change the attitude of many people toward him. Even the author of this unusually interesting biography says that this is another likeness and a more satisfactory one than his earlier attempt.

The story of Bismarck by Emil Ludwig is being widely read and discussed. The New York Times says: "There rises from its pages the noble figure of Otto von Bismarck, the man and diplomat—sharply outlined, artistically conceived, without sentiment or empty patriotic phrases, overwhelming in its greatness." Dr. Ludwig is well known in the United States, having lectured on "Bismarck and the German Republic." (Little, Brown & Co., Boston.)

NEW FICTION.

The Vanguard. By Arnold Bennett. A fantasia, author of "Buried Alive." . . . readers know the writer, they know his style, but this is a story quite different from the world of realism in which he has always indulged—it is gay, exciting and brilliant—it is full of humor, the kind that entertains.

Mr. Bennett writes a thrilling story of two middle-aged business men who have been kidnaped or abducted and placed on a mysterious yacht—beyond the reach of human aid or a telephone. It is a well written plot. (Doran's Book, New York.)

The Strange Case of "William" Cook. This is another unusual detective story written by Richard Keverne. "Who is 'William Cook?'" Is he a crook? Is he a man? Who knows the secret surrounding his name? There is plenty of excitement to the last chapter of this thrilling mystery story, in which there is plenty of humor, in fact it is called a real "English" thriller.

The story opens at a little Belgian place of St. Gules, which was built among the great sand dunes. Jean of the Natation Cafe, was a familiar figure to the summer visitors, but who was Jean? This was one of the mysteries that they had not been able to solve. The story will hold its reader's attention. (Harper and Brothers, New York.)

Bravo Jim. By W. D. Hoffman. While this is a western story it shows that the west has developed so fast that its flying hoofs are now accompanied by fleeing automobiles. It is the west where one now uses machine guns instead of six-shooters and Cadillacs and Fords instead of mustang ponies. But even with these twentieth century improvements it is a thrilling story. (A. C. McClurg & Co., Chicago.)

Show Girl. J. P. McEvoy has written quite a number of contributions. He knows how to entertain the public, and also is launching a story that will amuse and entertain all those who are tired with the long and hot summer days, and need diversion.

This story is a burlesque on the night life of Broadway. (Simon and Schuester. New York.)

The Island of Captain Sparrow. Arnold Bennett says of the author "He has genuine originality of outlook and invention, and, like Dumas, his pen is refreshed by new inspirations."

The author of "Deluge" was lionized for having written a first novel and a best seller at the age of 53, and now since the publication of his new book, he is receiving praise from readers both in England and America. "A style which recalls Robert Louis Stevenson," says the London Daily Mail. (Cosmopolitan Book Corporation. New York.)

Chaps and Chunkers. By Joseph Bushnell Ames, author of "The Lone Hand." Mr. Ames is an author who is famous for his western stories—he writes of adventure and romance. This is an interesting story full of the spirit of the west and also of the blase life in the east. It is a modern romance. (The Century Co.)

Trigger Justice. By Clem Yore, author of Raw Gold. A cowboy mystery western yarn. The author dedicates it to his "best reader—my wife." (Macaulay's Book. New York.)

Java-Java. By Byron Steel, authorern California. Recorded and edited of "O Rare Ben Johnson," of which a reader of the story says, "The very syllables that go to form the title of this book suggest the spirit in which it is written." (Alfred A. Knopf, Publisher. New York.)

PROHIBITION.

Prohibition. How we got it.

Wayne Wheeler. Dry Boss. By Justin Stewart, formerly publicity secretary to the late Wayne B. Wheeler.

The Boston Transcript said before the publication of this book: "Now the truth will be told!"

The book is said to be an uncensored biography of the late Wayne B. Wheeler.

The volume promises to give the inside story of prohibition—a story that would equally shock the drys as well as the wets.

It contains conversations between Governor Alfred Smith of New York, and other national political leaders. (Fleming H. Revell Co. New York.)

BOOKS ON RELIGION AND THE BIBLE.

The Problem of Jesus. By Clyde L. Kuhn, Minister of the First Congregational church of Strongsville, Ohio. (The Stratford Co. Price $3.50.)

Christianity in Science. By Frederick D. Leete. There are a number of illustrations as well as evidence of scientific service. (The Abingdon Press. New York. Price $3.00.)

The Story of Missions. By Edwin E. White. (Friendship Press. New York.)

What Next in Home Missions. William P. Shriver. (Missionary Education Movement. New York city.)

The Mind Behind the Universe. By Thedore A. Miller. A Book of Faith for the Modern Mind. A plain answer by a plain man to the question that is in all our minds today: "What can I believe?" (Frederick A. Stokes Co. New York.)

The Truth About Evolution and The Bible. By Dr. and Mrs. F. Homer Curtiss, author of the Curtiss Books. (Published by The Curtis Philosophic Book Co. Washington, D. C. Price $2.50.)

MISCELLANEOUS.

The Sociology of Life Insurance. A series of life insurance studies. By Edward A. Woods, A. M. (Appleton.)

Kroptkin's Revolutionary Pamphlets. With an introduction by Roger N. Baldwin.

The American Pilgrimage. Portions of the letters of Grace Scribner. Selected and arranged by Winifred L. Chappell.

Company Unions. By Robert W. Dunn, with an introduction by Louis F. Budenz. (Vanguard Press. New York.)

Annikadel. The history of the universe as told by the Indians of northby Dr. C. Hart Merriam. (Stratford Book, Boston.)

King or Shepherd? The Song of Solomon. By W. M. Forest, professor of Biblical literature, University of Virginia. (Stratford Book, Boston.)

The War Debts. An American view Philip Dexter and John Hunter Sedgwick. The author asks and answers his own question, "Why is America unpopular in Europe?" and of which he says, "To read this book is to evince an open mind and a willingness to look the whole situation in the face." (MacMillan's Book.)

BOYS' BOOKS RECEIVED.

The Cruise of the Kingfisher. By H. De Vere Stackpoole. A tale of deep sea adventure in which every boy is interested.

The boys of the twentieth century have more time and opportunity of going abroad, or to sea, than the boy used to have. But whether he goes or stays at home he enjoys the tales told by those who have had that pleasure.

This is the story of two boys who shipped with the Kingfisher, a cable ship going down the Canaries to mend the Brazilian cable, and how they overheard some Spaniards who were plotting against the ship and who were later found among the crew. It is full of thrills and all boys are going to enjoy it. (L. C. Page & Co., Boston.)

The Tusk Hunters. By Francis Rolt-Wheeler. The illustrations are from photographs. These stories are quite interesting for boys of 12 even to 17 years of age, for the study of wild animals, how caught, tamed and trained, is always instructive. The stories are laid in the unknown cities of Ceylon and southern India. (Lothrop, Lee & Shepard Co., Boston, Mass.)

Jan, Son of Finn. By A. J. Dawson. Illustrations by G. D. Armour. The author relates a most interesting story of the thrilling incidents and accidents of a half greyhound and half bloodhound. It is a story of the wild and daring adventures of men and dogs in the Canadian north.

Dick Vaughn was not only Jan's master, but the lover of a most beautiful girl who, with his father and mother, were waiting for him to come home and settle down. It is a beautiful romance. (E. P. Dutton & Co., New York.)

Chaps and Chukkers. By Joseph B. Ames, who is famous for his thrilling stories of the west.

It is an absorbing mystery story which has all the real action of the old west mingled with the life of the sporting world of the east. There is plenty of mystery, of enduring loyalty and modern romance. (The Century company, New York.)

Ken the Courageous. By Robert Ames Bennet. Ken, upon arriving at the little railroad station which was called Bullhide, realized immediately that he did not "fit in" with the cowboys who were hanging around. His first welcome was a hole in his hat and this was followed by getting into a fight with them all.

The story is just about as full of all the ingredients that it takes to make a good western story as a real spice cake is full of spices. Bennet scores from the beginning and finaly becomes "Ken the Courageous." (McClurg & Co., Chicago.)

Dick Byrd. Air explorer. A book about Commander Richard E. Byrd for boys have been waiting to add to their list of camp books. It is a splendid book about a splendid aviator, and best of all every word of it is true. (G. P. Putnam's Book, New York.)

For Valor. By Covington Clarke. The story of "Red" McGee, the last of the "Flying Barstows," the youngest flier ever to win his wings, is another splendid books for boys, the war background is authentic and the story of the warriors of the air is the boy's own story. (Reilly & Lee, Chicago.)

BOOKLETS AND PAMPHLETS.

The Mother's Daily Dozen. By Laura C. Puffer, with an introduction by John Martin. This attractive little booklet contains hints from a mother to mothers, for instance, lines of patience, discipline, judgment, humor, love and prayer are among the dozen. (Doubleday-Doran Co.)

Attic Twilights. By Edna Worthley Underwood. (The Mosher Press, Portland, Maine.)

Egyptian Twilights. By the same author.

Masque of the Moons. By the same author. These three tiny volumes of poems are pleasing.

Fifteen Poets of Modern Japan. A book of translation. By Glenn Hughes and Yozan T. Iwasaki. (University of Washington, Seattle.)

Lindbergh. A saga of youth. By I. Van Kampen.

Patchwork. By Alice McBryde Marsh.

Selections From Manuscripts of Vaughan Lionel.

Love Licks of a Layman. By Grover Thomas Somers.

Verse From Mississippi. By Mrs. Lily Buie Reed.

The above pamphlets each a collection of verse are well written and the selections are fine. The first, to Lindbergh, is simply one prose-poem dedicated to a saga of youth:

"Lindbergh, youth and age.today salute you,
America's illustrious son. Salute in truth,
The Spirit of St. Louis; nay e'en more true
The Spirit of America, glorified in youth."

(The Stratford Company, Boston.)

GET IT NOW — TODAY — TOMORROW MAY BE TOO LATE

YOU—May Be Killed or Crippled Today! DESTINY MAY NOT LET YOU AVOID THE TRAGEDY!

Only recently two death claims of $2,000.00 each paid on account of insured burning to death in residence—no such coverage is offered by any other Atlanta newspapers—The Constitution offers the greatest insurance coverage to its subscribers of any daily paper, not only in the South, but the entire country. Yes—it costs a little more, but it is worth many times more.

$7500 Travel, Accident and Death Policy Increases 10% Per Year to $11,250.00 Value in 5 Years.

$2000 Automobile Accident Death Policy Increases 10% Per Year to $3,000.00 Value in 5 Years.

$1000 Pedestrian Accident Death Policy Increases 10% Per Year to $1,500.00 Value in 5 Years.

Large cash payments for loss of eyes, limbs, etc., or a $10.00 weekly indemnity for total disability caused from such accidents as specified in the policy.

Indemnity for loss of life as set forth in policy shall be payable to a beneficiary or estate of the insured, as may be specified by the applicant when applying for the insurance.

This insurance is for both old and new subscribers. If you are a subscriber, get this protection today. If you are not a subscriber, now is the time to subscribe and secure this protection.

It is the man who puts off until tomorrow who leaves want as his heritage to his loved ones. Do not put off taking advantage of this great protection for such a small registration fee.

Every Man, Woman and Child Between Ages of 15 and 70, In Atlanta and Vicinity, Should Secure Protection From Travel and Pedestrain Accidents, Through The Atlanta Constitution---Offered to Its Subscribers for a Small Fee.

Do it NOW!

Tomorrow May Be Too Late!

ANOTHER MILLION—FOR WHAT?

The chairman of the national republican committee, Dr. Work, issued a statement three weeks ago that the party would raise a campaign fund of $3,000,000 as a maximum.

He has now declared that the committee will need $4,000,000.

This is an advance in the budget of $1,000,000 even before the nominee has delivered his formal address of acceptance.

Just what this extra million is to be used for is cautiously guarded, but it is not difficult to very accurately surmise.

Is it not to be used in the south in the hope of disintegrating the democratic party through insurrection leaders in its own ranks?

This state has a substantial outspoken republican vote of from 40,000 to 60,000 maximum. A desperate effort will be made to get every registered republican voter to the polls, blacks, tans, lily-whites, and all the rest.

The republican plan is to have certain preacher-politicians, members of the W. C. T. U., political malcontents, midnight club workers, etc., incite rebellion in the democratic party, by the capitalization of prejudice, and to thus add sufficient heretofore democratic votes to the regular republican votes to swing the state to Hoover.

It is an under-cover campaign, insiduous, sordid, by reason of its basic method, and it is unthinkable that some good men and women, among them those who have been honored by the democratic party, are actively abetting the plotters, some openly, some secretly.

While the national republicans are now openly advertising for a $4,000,000 fund instead of the original $3,000,000, for purposes only too obvious, it is also a fact that the sub-rosa campaign expenses will not be calculable.

Raymond Clapper, reliable Washington commentator, referring to the extra million in the republican budget, says:

"Nobody knows how much has been spent sub-rosa in past campaigns or how much will be spent that way this time. That large sums are so spent is generally recognized, but the money is put up on the side by individuals and is not contributed to the national committee, but to individuals who are to undertake certain work. The money is thereby made effective in the campaign, but not having passed through the hands of a committee it does not have to be accounted for under law."

Thoughtful democrats, who know what the election of Hoover will mean to the south, and particularly to any southern state that might, by this scheme of political intrigue, find itself in the Hoover column, should analyze this situation.

With all of the money that the republicans may pour into Georgia to aid this undercover plot, this state will stay in the house of its fathers, provided the constituted party heads of the state meet the emergency with militancy.

But if Georgia should, through a mobilization of prejudice, get into the Hoover column, the result will be that all of the gain for white supremacy that has been made for 60 years will be lost.

In the south the races get along splendidly together, and for the best interests of the colored people.

But let the abrogator of Wilson's segregation order get into the white house partly through the vote of Georgia, or any other of the southern states, and see what will happen!

It is inconceivable that white men and women, whose fathers fought in the 60's, and found their only hope after the war in the democratic party, should be active agents in such a nefarious political scheme.

It is a passing analogy that ministers talk so much on things with which they have had no experience.

Turkey has abolished all the fancy titles of officers of its army and navy. The "pasha" will hereafter be known as "general," and one-half of its population, naturally, as "colonels."

WORLD'S FASTEST CABLE.

A new cable—and the fastest in the world—will be laid this month from Newfoundland to the Azores by the Western Union Telegraph company. This will bring the total number of its cables in the north Atlantic to ten.

By a new and novel principle, known as "tapered loading," the new cable can be operated at full capacity simultaneously in either direction. Ten separate messages may be transmitted over the cable at the same time—five incoming and five outgoing.

This new cable will give direct connection from New York to Germany, Italy and Africa with automatic relays at Bay Roberts, Newfoundland, and at Horta, in the Azores.

Cable traffic is largely on the increase, despite the overseas radio commercial service. It illustrates the growing economic relationships between nations of different hemispheres.

Modern invention is making all the world akin, and distances are being rapidly annihilated in every way.

FORESTRY IN THE SCHOOLS.

The Georgia Forestry association has raised the minimum quota of $6,500 a year for this state to qualify in the work of the southern educational project for the next three years. Forty counties have raised their local quotas and will receive the benefits of visual instruction on forestry in their public schools beginning in October.

The American Forestry association has announced that a total of $150,000 has been subscribed for this work in Georgia, Florida and Mississippi. The sum of $91,500 has been raised through the contributions of John D. Rockefeller, Jr., and George D. Pratt, of New York, and from the commonwealth fund. Georgia will, therefore, receive an additional sum of $30,500 from sources outside of the state.

The regional director has established headquarters at Thomasville.

The progress made is of such remarkable importance to this state that every county ought to be a participant in the benefits. The teaching of practical forestry to school children is of tremendous importance, and the method, including the use of motion pictures, is one that will not only impress but entertain.

This state has one of the most active forestry developments of any of its neighbors, and the association, which is purely an unselfish civic organization, is not only responsible for it but is doing a great work throught its constructive cooperation. It deserves the encouragement of every citizen.

WANTS TO COME SOUTH.

The Constitution is in receipt of the following communication:

Editor Constitution: I have questioned many, asking about the soil, climate, and people of Georgia, yet not one in a hundred knows anything about it. They know more of California and Florida. The boom and high taxes of the latter two keep the cautious away. If you have rich, low-priced lands, pure water, low taxes, inducements to factories, clean cities, plenty of fuel, agreeable climate and healthful conditions, together with good-will between the races, spread the facts abroad. Millions of northerners want to go south. I am free to say, I do!

L. D. WESTFALL.
1714 East Washington St.,
Indianapolis, Ind.
August 1, 1928.

Volumes of true informative articles are being published about the south continually.

As to Georgia the various bulletins of the State College of Agriculture at Athens tell the true agricultural status from every angle, and Dr. Soule will be glad to answer, with full statistical and illustrated information, any direct inquiry. The Georgia association, which is engaged only in unselfish development work, supported as it is by enterprising citizens, publishes a monthly magazine that covers all information that a homeseeker should desire.

The industrial bureau of the Atlanta Chamber of Commerce has general information compiled on all matters of the nature, for the state at large. Its "Key to Atlanta" is a publication of information as to this city and community.

The trouble is, however, as Mr. Westfall has brought out, these various publications are not so distributed that any considerable number of northerners, with their eyes on the south, may readily get in touch with them.

The agricultural department's "Year Book for 1928" is comprehensive. But how widely is it distributed in the other 47 states?

There should be a concerted movement, either by one of the state departments, or the State College of Agriculture, or the Georgia Association, or state utilities information bureau to place in every public library in America, and on the reading tables of hotels, clubs, societies, farm organizations, etc., a terse, comprehensive compilation answering clearly and truthfully, without propaganda, or argument, the information that northern people looking to the south for future homes, would naturally want to know about Georgia.

No state offers greater opportunities in agriculture, industry and business. With mountains and coastal plains, with ample hydro-electric power widely distributed, even climate, various soils, good schools, etc., there is nothing a homeseeker desires, whatever avocation he may follow, that cannot be found in Georgia, except a satisfactory system of connected paved highways—and such a system is coming. The aroused, enterprising thought of Georgians demands it.

THE WHITE RETRACTION.

Before buying his steamship ticket for Europe, William Allen White, the well-known Kansas editor, who had made a vicious attack on Governor Alfred E. Smith, alleging several counts, had the manhood to openly retract many of his charges. Mr. White's attack had been given wide propaganda publicity by the republican campaign managers, but as yet they have not followed this propaganda with any "releases" as to the withdrawal of charges.

Discussing the attack the Brooklyn Eagle says:

"The ostensible object of Mr. White's vicious attack was to create the impression that Smith, the presidential candidate, was not to be trusted because of certain things done by Smith, the assemblyman. The democratic party did not nominate Al Smith because of his assembly record, defensible though that may be on some, at least, of the counts in Mr. White's indictment. It nominated him because of his record in the governorship of the first state in the union, a record without parallel in recent generations. It nominated him because he had proved himself an honest and highly competent official, an effective leader of public opinion, a constructive statesman and one who had kept his sovereignty under his own hat, taking no orders from anybody."

In the retraction made by the Kansas editor he made a parting fling at Governor Smith because of his association with Tammany.

Governor Smith certainly has no apologies to make for being a member of Tammany. There are hundreds of southern men living in New York who are leaders in the professions, in banking and in commerce, who are members of Tammany. Georgia provides a large quota, and there are no few from Atlanta—men who have "made good" in the great metropolis in every sense of the word.

At the same time, we ought to be fair about Governor Smith's record. He is serving his fourth term as governor. He has never permitted Tammany to dictate an appointment, and has flatly refused to do a great many things that Tammany urged. He and the late Charles F. Murphy, the Tammany sachem, were personal friends, but not close politically because Murphy could not control him. His cabinet of twelve, appointed by the executive, is composed of nine Protestants, two Catholics and one Jew. Tammany did not dictate a single appointment. The governor held "fitness for office" as paramount.

While a member of Tammany and loyal, Governor Alfred E. Smith has never, even in the slightest degree, been a tool of organized machine politics.

SMITH'S FARM VIEW SOUND.

Governor Smith has again demonstrated his courage in disapproving the equalization fee provision of the McNary-Haugen bill for the handling of surplus farm commodities.

In the setting up of a federal agency for this purpose, and in proposing market stabilization, he stands in thorough accord with the very liberal agricultural relief plank in the Houston platform.

But the assessing of a direct tax upon the grower of each of the major commodities, whether or not individually involved in over-production, he believes, as does President Coolidge, to be personally unfair, and in violation of the fundamental law.

In this he shares the opinion of millions of farmers, not only in the south—where the farm voice on the subject is almost unanimous against such a direct tax—but in the corn and wheat belts, where the most noise in favor of the McNary-Haugen bill has been made.

That the bill was twice driven through congress, in spite of administration opposition, illustrates that it was made a political football and its proponents stood over members with a great political club in their hands.

Thoughtful farmers generally, who are unbiased by political considerations, will heartily commend Governor Smith's position. It emphasizes also his wide knowledge of the rural situation, contrary to the propaganda of his enemies. That he will propose a better plan of financing a federal surplus control agency, and one that absolves those who are not specifically involved from extra taxation, is assured.

Governor Smith's record as an executive discloses his ability to substitute a better plan or program for any that he may object.

The Houston platform commits the party to surplus control, to a tariff parity by which farmers may have protection similar to manufacturers, and to a broadened and strengthened program of federal-encouraged cooperative marketing.

It is obviously satisfactory to farmers, as several republican farm leaders have openly announced their affiliation with the democratic party.

CENTRAL STATES FARM VOTE.

In an address at Montgomery President S. H. Thompson, of the American Farm Bureau federation—one of the most powerful, numerically and otherwise, of the many national organizations of farmers—declared that the democratic party platform pleased the farmers of the nation because it placed agricultural production on a parity with factory production as to tariff protection.

Mr. Thompson is a life-long Illinois republican. He is a man of force and leadership. His organization, while in no sense political, is stronger than any other organized group in the central west. Former Governor Lowden, republican, has been a leader in the farm relief views entertained and urged by the federation. It has been repeatedly stated in the press recently that the president of the federation, on a basis of the party's frank and definite views as to agricultural legislation, would join the democratic party. From practically indisputable indications, he has already joined. The party significance of his political attitude is unmistakable. He is not bolting his old party or knifing it from within. He is merely changing ships, frankly and above-board, because the democratic ship is safer and sounder for the farmer.

George N. Peek, chairman of the corn belt committee, and also a republican, has confirmed to Chairman Raskob a similar appraisal of the farm-vote situation in the middle and northwest. He frankly declared, in a statement to the democratic leaders, that Governor Smith can carry these states.

The democratic party not only pledges its efforts to legislative enactment that will permit the farmer who must buy protected supplies to like protection in the sale of his commodities, but it pledges a federal agency for the handling of commodity surpluses, and also adequate federal encouragement and aid to cooperative marketing.

BETTER SIRE ENTHUSIASM.

The recent tour through those sections of Georgia served by the A., B. and C. railroad, inaugurated for the purpose of distributing, at nominal prices, a large number of pure-bred bulls, was a complete success, every animal on the special train having been placed, and a demand stimulated for a larger distribution which will be undertaken in the near future.

The train started from Atlanta with three carloads of pedigreed sires, including Jersey, Guernsey and Holstein stocks. Two additional carloads were added en route.

The award of the prize Guernsey bull, donated by Judge John S. Candler through the Georgia association for the largest attendance at the train meetings went to Fitzgerald, which city registered an attendance of 1,600.

This train movement, which was made possible by the cooperation of several organizations, had a splendid effect in encouraging balanced production generally, of which small unit dairying is one feature.

Georgia offers opportunities for dairying unequaled by any state in the union, due to exceptionally favorable soil, climatic and home marketing conditions. The dairy industry has made some of the middle and northwestern states rich, and has contributed largely toward idealizing rural home conditions. It can do the same thing in Georgia. And fortunately, in this state, with mountains and coast and a great plateau area, the opportunities for poultry production, fruit growing, and the successful growing of practically every farm commodity that can be grown anywhere are not surpassed in this country, and certainly no state offers a greater diversification of stable money crops.

The agencies that cooperated in the special "better sires" train, cooperatively, can do a powerful service in improving the rural life of the state.

The democrats will win on a platform of good government, efficient administration, support of the constitution, et "Al."

Pardon us if we exult over the fact that south Georgia has something to-back-her. The crop is estimated at 68,000,000 pounds.

The so-called anti-Smith clubs in the state will have to raise their ante to stay in the game.

Senator Moses is on a new tack. He desires to get under the skin of the solid south.

There is a growing demand for bullet-proof reign coats in Mexico.

Golf is one sport that is played out—winter and summer.

LOOKING AND LISTENING

BY SAM W. SMALL

The New Order of Democratic Politics Introduced by Governor Smith.

Washington, August 4.—(Special.) It does not surprise me that the political letters and inquiries sent in to Colonel Hollomon irk his patience and cause gripes in his gray matter. Looking over a large batch of such donations that awaited my return to Washington, I am strongly tempted to here and now publicly renounce all future comment in this column upon political matters.

Perhaps the Georgia gentleman who suggests that I am "writing under orders" and must thereby make sure of my "daily bread and butter" thinks I ought to make just the renunciation that invites me. But his and many other letters reveal that there are yet many of our esteemed fellow-citizens who, on many phases of past and current politics, need light, facts, and correction of errors. And, if there is any known medicament that can purge the human mind of foolish and rancid prejudices, some of my correspondents need full treatment with it.

Not in the Boosting Business.

My job with this column is to "look and listen" to what is passing in public affairs, reporting and commenting thereon so as to help our readers get the data for correct views and opinions of the men and performances in the public eye.

Certainly I have not used this column to tell any person how to vote in any election past or to come. The personal or political preference of no man or woman concerns me.

There has been no touting in this column for Al Smith or for Herb Hoover. Personally I do not care a continental what happens to either of them. Left to me, I would not have nominated either of them. And in all references to them in this column I have endeavored to be truthful, just and considerate.

I cannot figure out that the election of either of them is going to much affect my status as a day laborer, and am dead sure neither result will add anything to my income!

The Character of Gov. Smith.

Governor Smith is unquestionably one of the most interesting personalities of the present era. The mere fact that he was born poor in a tenement on the east side of New York city is of no consequence in this country. All the "howdy-do" that is made over that part of him is press-agent, proletarian punk. Besides the beginning of Presidents Andrew Jackson, Abraham Lincoln and James Abram Garfield, not to mention Millard Fillmore and Andrew Johnson, each of whom succeeded their deceased chiefs, the early obstacles to eminence in Smith's case are scarcely mentionable.

Governor Smith has shrewdly made the most of all the powerful aids given him in a city where politics is a trade and success rewards the canniest craftsman. He has succeeded because he developed brains and a genius for public service as his opportunities increased.

His record as an adept legislator and a skillful administrator of state affairs is conspicuous and unimpeachable. His personal traits are distinctly democratic and appeal to the imagination of average people. He gathers friends "with hooks of steel' and makes strong enemies by the rugged frankness and integrity of his character.

But Al Is No Superman.

Notwithstanding all the true and good things that can be said of Governor Smith he is not, and does not claim to be, a superman—but he is so experienced and adept in the mechanics of government that it should be accepted without question that, if chosen president, he would execute the duties of the office with honesty, courage and skill, having for his supreme passion the purpose to advance the liberties, prosperities and happiness of the people.

* * * *

The Biggest Thing About Him.

The bulging, outstanding thing about Al Smith is his unfaltering confidence in himself. There may have been a time in his upward climb when he listened to and was guided by Croker and Foley and Murphy and other chiefs of Tammany, but that day went by sometime ago. Now Al Smith is emphatically his own boss. It is known that he will occasionally listen respectfully to the views and counsels of his nearer friends and allies, but is more likely than otherwise to do the other thing, relying more upon his own judgment than that of anyone else. He has persistently dictated his own campaigns for governor, winning four and losing but one.

Now, as the party nominee for president, he means to carry on as usual. Chairman Raskob, Olvany, McNamee, Senator Gerry, and all others have been given to understand that it is Smith who is running for president, and Smith who means to be elected, and Smith's decisions that are to dictate the course of the campaign.

The old war-horses of the party are not trusted. They have failed to make good too often. New men and new plans, selected by Smith, are to be tried out, and Smith, I know, believes firmly that he holds the master-key to a sure national victory.

The Background of Foreign Affairs

Treaties and Cautious Statesmen; Legality and Psychology; the British Debt Balance; Rabbits and Lords.

BY HENRY KITTREDGE NORTON
(Copyright, 1928, for The Atlanta Constitution.)

Note: Mr. Norton will visit a number of European countries this summer. During this time "The Background" will deal with the special conditions and problems of these countries.—Editor.

London.

Sir Austen Chamberlain and his cohorts at the British foreign office have exhibited perhaps a little more than the customary caution in accepting the final draft of the Kellogg treaty. Caution is a commendable trait in statesmen, but the British public has been somewhat impatient at the foreign office delay. The sentiment of the country is undoubtedly strongly in favor of the treaty, not because of any conviction that it will usher in the millennium, but because of the belief that it can do no possible harm and may do some good. Sir Austen would have greatly pleased a large portion of the public if Britain had been the first instead of the last of the great powers to accept the final treaty.

There is no reason to believe that the government was opposed to the treaty, but its dilatory tactics aroused a strong sentiment in the country which was reflected in the press and among all parties in the house of commons. The government's acceptance, therefore, seems to have been made, not with enthusiasm, but under pressure from the country.

This is not at all regrettable. It is certainly better to have the government reluctant and the country enthusiastic than the government enthusiastic and the country reluctant. For in the case of the case of the Kellogg treaty more perhaps than in any other case, the popular attitude is of the highest importance.

The reason for this becomes clear when we read the French acceptance of Mr. Kellogg's final proposal. France understands, according to her reply, that "each nation will always remain free to defend its territory against attack or invasion; it alone is competent to decide whether circumstances require recourse to war in self-defense." As it has been many a long year since any nation went to war without insisting that it did so in self-defense, this would seem to reduce the Kellogg treaty to an agreement by the signatories not to go to war except in such cases as they would have gone to war without the treaty.

Much study in the various foreign offices and some consultation between them seem to have brought about agreement on this point, so that the Paris "Temps," which usually reflects the feeling of the French government, says that the treaty can now be signed "with full confidence in the knowledge that none of our rights has been sacrificed."

So far as the legal aspects go, the original Kellogg proposal has been whittled down until it imposes practically no limitations upon the war-making proclivities of the governments concerned.

It does not follow, however, that the treaty is useless. The sudden rallying of opinions in Great Britain is probably typical of that in other countries. It is an expression of the ardent desire of the people to do away with war. They have seized upon the Kellogg treaty as a means of formally declaring this desire, and whatever the refinements of legalistic interpretation, in the popular mind the treaty does not constitute a renunciation of war.

Under these circumstances it will be much more difficult for a government, even in cases where the treaty imposes no legal restrictions, to mobilize public opinion in favor of military action. This does not mean, however, that such mobilization has become impossible. Therein lies the danger of the Kellogg treaty. On no account should it be allowed to interfere with the effort to abolish war by the establishment of adequate machinery for the settlement of international disputes by pacific means.

The demands for the signature of the Kellogg treaty has been coincident with another matter which should have—though it probably has not—been a potent factor in the bettering of British feeling toward America. Mr. Churchill, in his budget speech on April 24, pointed out that during the coming year Great Britain would receive from her war debtors an amount practically equal to the amount she is required to pay to the United States on her debt to us. With receipts equaling expenditures on this account, the debt question is no longer a vital issue for Britain, because under the Balfour declaration she has waived her claim for any amount in excess of what she has to pay America.

During the first few years after the Baldwin settlement, Great Britain had to meet the American payments out of her own pocket. There was thus a real addition to the tax burden which caused an understandable resentment against Uncle Sam as a Shylock. This resentment was enhanced by the theories of Mr. Keynes and his fellow economists, who contended that the debts could never be paid and that the demands of the United States were in defiance of economic law.

The post-war economic and commercial development of the world has cast considerable doubt upon the validity of Mr. Keynes' "laws." The debt payments, despite the enormous figures, have become a comparatively minor item in the total of international transactions. Whether in defiance of economic law or not, payments are being made and no great difficulty has as yet appeared. Mr. Churchill in his budget speech goes on to suggest the incredulity with which members of the house would have received the statement four year ago that receipts would balance payments in the present year.

It is beginning to be realized that the war, in spite of its far-reachig effects in other directions, did not repeal the old economic laws and pass new ones. The world owed Great Britain $30,000,000,000 in 1913 and there was no concern over economic "laws" which would prevent its payment. Under these circumstances the skepticism of the American people as to "laws" which would prevent the repayment to it of $20,000,000,000 seems quite justifiable. There is even room for the thought that if Lord Balfour had not been so anxious in 1922 to put the United States in a hole by transferring to us the onus of war debt collection and so hastily waived what were then thought to be valueless claims against Britain's debtors, the British might in a few years be receiving from her continental debtors a substantial sum over and above what she has to pay the United States.

Gilbert and Sullivan were inevitable in England. If they had not been produced locally it would have been necessary to import them or find them in some other way. English life simply demands some such caricature as they gave it. Their hits were innumerable, but none runs truer to form than the priceless song, "The House of Lords Does Nothing and It Does It Very Well."

The "Mother of Parliaments" has maintained a very respectable reputation as an instrument of government. This it has done despite the fact that its more active end, the house of commons, functions in a chamber where at least a third of the members could not find seats if all attended. As a matter of fact, such seats as these are, are seldom filled. The lower house, however, has an acceptable attendance record as compared with the house of lords. It is only a really interesting issue—such as rabbits—that will bring the peers out in force.

Somebody introduced a bill providing that if a man kept rabbits and they nibbled at his neighbor's vegetables the neighbor could give due notice—say a couple of years—and if the owner did not restrain the vegetable-consuming propensities of his beasts, the neighbor could shoot them on his own account.

Now shooting rabbits is a peculiarly lordly occupation, and this bill was looked upon as a direct attack upon those peers who bring rabbits into the world for the sole purpose of putting them out of it again. The lords marched upon Westminster in force. With much oratory they raised the totem of "vested rights"—whether the vested interests were those of the rabbits or those of the lords was not quite clear. At any rate they treated the bill as they would treat a rabbit and killed it outright. Then, despite the presence on the calendar of such matters as the budget and the renunciation of war, the noble peers hastened back to their estates to give their undivided attention to the slaying of more rabbits.

TEXT AND PRETEXT

BY M. ASHBY JONES

"The Things Which Are God's"

When Jesus was questioned by the Jews as to whether it was right to pay taxes to the Roman government, pointing to the image and superscription of Caesar on a Roman coin which He held in His hand, He uttered the classic words, "Render unto Caesar the things which are Caesar's and unto God the things which are God's." Last week I interpreted this to mean that so long as one accepted the protection of the civil government, he must be obedient to the authority of that government, no matter what he thinks of the quality of that government or the justice of its laws. So, I interpreted "The things which are Caesar's," as being those things within the jurisdiction of the civil government.

Two Realms.

Now, we are interested to know what is meant by "The things which are God's. While Jesus does make a distinction here between the realms of obedience to Caesar and obedience to God, from the fact that He commands obedience to both, we may be sure that there is no conflict between them. Of course, the obvious objection to this statement is, when the state imposes an unjust tax, or makes an unrighteous law, which we feel sure God would not do, are we not in duty bound to obey God rather than man? In this incident, we have the answer of Jesus to this very question. The tax is unjust and cruel, but, so long as you accept the government as your government, God's will is that you should obey the state.

Just here is where we have had conflicts between the church and the state. Where the teaching or the authority of the church is opposed by the commands of the state, which authority should prevail for a Christian? It is not sufficient answer to say that the state has authority only within the realm of "The things which are Caesar's." The question immediately arises, who is to decide where the jurisdiction of Caesar ends, and God's begins. The church has often claimed this right. A little thought will reveal that to allow any church the right to say where the jurisdiction of the state shall end, would be nothing less than to give that church the veto power over the state in matters of legislation. This would be equivalent to a church-dominated state. To give it to all churches, would be a species of anarchy.

God's Will and Democracy.

From these consideration, it is not difficult to see the wisdom of Jesus, in granting supreme authority to the state in matters of legislation. God's will, of course, is superior to any earthly sovereignty, but who shall speak for God? The moment we should allow any man, or any group of men, to be the authoritative spokesman of God, and recognize this divine spokesman as uttering commands superior to the commands of the state, we have surrendered the sovereignty of the state into the hands of a man or a group of men. Of course this man or group of men are supposed to legislate or rule only within the spiritual realm, and not to interfere with the realm of the state. But, nevertheless, they themselves would be the judges as to what that spiritual realm is, and what the civic realm is.

The question faces us then, have we no defense against the unrighteous acts of the state, and no appeal when the acts of the state violate our consciences? The limitations of space make it necessary for me to confine my answer to our own democracy. Jesus taught us to pray, "Thy will be done on earth," and to seek to establish in the hearts of men His Kingdom. Now democracy is a government which is the expression of the will of the people. I conceive that it is the task of all disciples of Jesus to seek to find out what is the will of God, and then to seek to win the people to accept God's will as their will. The Jesus way then seems to be obendience to the will of the government, but where the will of the government (which is the will of the people) seems to be contrary to the will of God we should seek to change the will of the people to become the will of God, and thus have His will expressed in government.

The organized religion of Jesus (the church) must exercise no authority contrary to the authority of the government, but must seek by persuasion to win the people to accept His spirit and principles and then translate them into terms of government. This is the legitimate approach of religion to politics, about which I shall write next week.

NEW YORK SKYLINES

BY CHARLES ESTCOURT, JR.

Written Exclusively for The Constitution and North American Newspaper Alliance.

Written exclusively for The Constitution and the North American Newspaper Alliance.

New York, August 4.—(Special.)—From east side streets on a summer night New York appears as a dense concentration of people. From a harbor boat it looms as a stupendous concentration of skyscrapers. From a bus, speeding through a continuity of streets and houses in New Jersey, one thinks of it as the majestic center of a great concentration of cities, rapidly merging.

High in the starry void a vivid line of white moves around the sky. That is the newest skyline of Manhattan—a searchlight, the brightest on earth. From its place atop an uptown hotel it ranges far horizons, but the eye that begins at the last fading gleam and follows it inward will always arrive in New York.

As the bus throbs homeward, through continuous towns of many names but undivided geography, the eye is attracted irresistibly to this white pencil in space. It appears to be drawing the real circumference of New York. It reaches far across the roofs of this confusion of cities, dims their myriad lights and goes on.

Poetic Preparedness Here.

Dr. Robert Underwood Johnson, now on the ocean bound for England, must be the most considerate and methodical poet who ever made a rhyme.

"When I get a poem written," he was telling the skyliner, "I send it to the printer at once and have it put in type, ready to go into my next volume. If I die suddenly my literary executor will not have to rummage through a dusty pile of manuscripts, doing a heap of reading, to produce my collected poems. They will be ready."

Dr. Johnson is one of the few living poets who look the way poets should look. Poets are so disillusioning nowadays. But he has the head and beard, a rich white one, and dresses sufficiently in harmony to rank with the old-time seers of verse, like Tennyson, Bryant, Whittier and Longfellow.

This poet, former ambassador to Italy, will visit William Watson, the English poet, who is 70 this month, and will go through France and Switzerland. He hopes to be present at the peace treaty signing in Paris, and at the opening of the League of Nations.

Our Willy and Benvenuto.

As designer of scenery for the musical arrangement of a play about Benvenuto Cellini, soon to take the boards, Willy Pogany is the appropriate choice.

It will be a case of the versatile artist of the twentieth century furnishing the stage for a dramatic characterization of a versatile artist of the sixteenth.

Pope, prince and king engaged Cellini, artist, metal worker, sculptor, to do the sarcophagi, chalices and coins of the Italian Rennaissance. Publisher, architect and producer engage Pogany as illustrator, mural decorator and scenic artist for stage and movies, in a time that history may mention as a similar period in the arts.

This boyish Hungarian of the gipsy heart has done a ceiling for the Florida home of John Ringling, the circus man; 54 paintings for the walls of a fine Manhattan hotel; illustrations for new editions of the Arabian Nights, and stage scenery for the opera "Le Coq D'Or."

About Bathing in the Nude.

Apparently the police crusade against bathing in the nude on the New Jersey beaches is going to deal a body blow to that pastime for the motorists humming along ocean boulevards at night the glimpses of white figures on the sands and under the moon have been arresting.

Nude bathers are really a little ahead of the times. Why not wait? Just let the bathing suits get shorter and shorter, every season, and less and less. If the ladies will just keep a "inchin" along, keep a "inchin" along, as the negro spiritual goes, they will surely get to nudity by and by, and so imperceptibly that nobody will notice it. For years the tendency has been in this direction—toward trying to make both ends of the bathing suit meet.

Armenians Abroad.

Every summer Sunday a woods just north of the city is full of Armenian refugees. The occasion is a picnic. These are fugitives from the Occidental clangor of the week. Here under the trees they constitute an American Armenia in repose.

Mothers stretched on the grass raise an arm to rock babies in cradles fashioned by doubling a blanket and attaching it to sticks on a rope hung between saplings. Young men dance languidly to the wail of a reed and the beat of a curious drum, while maidens look on in admiration. At meal time a committee has a charcoal fire going, and picnicking families thrust bits of meat, tomatoes and other vegetables on prongs, and roast the mixture.

The meat is always mutton. In home and restaurant the Armenians specialize in mutton. It's about the only meat that grows on the hills of their homeland, and when they get to this country of luxuriant beasts they keep on eating it.

Want to Take 'Em All to Coney.

The women, if they aren't fat, all look like girls to The Skyliner when he's not too close. That's because they are wearing wash dresses this summer. White ones or gay prints on a white background, in all manner of interesting patterns, including the maps of Paris, Greenwich Village, London, and possibly Vladivostok.

These light, thin, breeze-blown dresses give their wearers that festive, picnic look, that girlish allure—if, it must be repeated, the women are not too fat. For the first time in years the girls and women of moderate years are wearing wash dresses in the city. Heretofore New York women wore them only when they went away on trips or to vacation resorts, except, of course, in the suburbs, and in the evening.

Give Her Another Family to Raise.

Character sketch of a Brooklyn woman: Her sister died leaving five children, all small. The Brooklyn woman brought them up. One of them married, had four children, and then died. The said Brooklyn woman brought them up.

Of late this woman has been complaining. What's the matter, her friends ask? Your health is all right, isn't it? Appetite good? Splendid. Then what is it? Oh, don't know. Just don't think so much of life any more. Don't seem to have any ambition.

The Brooklyn woman is 75.

PROS AND CONS OF THE POLITICAL SITUATION DISCUSSED IN LETTERS FROM PROMINENT GEORGIANS TO THE CONSTITUTION

THINKS MINISTERS SHOULD 'SOMETIMES' ENTER POLITICS.

Editor Constitution: "I believe that, as a rule, ministers should confine their political activities to voting. And this for the reason that any other course impairs their ability to serve effectually such numbers of their congregations as may be in disagreement with them.

"But, it frequently happens that some matter essentially moral is to be settled at the ballot box, and in such an emergency it becomes the business and duty of the minister to get in the fight, as the adviser of his flock on moral issues. Such an emergency confronted the ministry of Georgia in 1907, when the bill for state prohibition was before the general assembly. There was a hue and a cry all over Georgia against the preachers going into politics; but it did not prevent the small-salaried preachers of the state from swarming around the state capitol till the bill was signed. I went into the hall here yesterday where 100 Protestant ministers of Atlanta were taking the hide off Smith, and I recognized many of the heroic band of 1907. The presiding officer yesterday was Doctor L. R. Christie, present pastor of Capitol Avenue Baptist church, who lay with us 29 days of the "filibuster" in 1907. The sight made me a little more tolerant of the doctrine of the "final perseverance of the saints."

These good men, Mr. Editor, have read in their Bibles. The Proverb, "In vain do they spread the net in the presence of the bird;" but this is a big "drive" in which the men and women of 1907 are to be intimidated and lashed into acquiescense and support of Smith's candidacy, which is being directed by Raskob, who gives his support, as he insolently tells us, because he (Smith) is trying to relieve the country of "the damnable affliction of prohibition."

I have read the letter of Judge S. B. Adams appearing in The Constitution. This leads to the reflection that Judge Adams was against us in 1907—actively.—I presume that he is still against the principle of prohibition.

Another thing—and this is said in perfect and affectionate respect for Judge Adams:

When men high in the councils of the church write articles which are seized avidly by Raskob and his associates in "helping Governor Smith relieve the country of the damnable curse of prohibition," they put themselves, and to a degree their church, into politics, the very thing they complain of.

MINISTERS SHOULD "STICK TO DUTIES."

Editor Constitution: In looking over the address of the bishops of the M. E. Church, south, published in the Southern Recorder, of Milledgeville, of September 12, 1865, I find in that address the following statement, which I think is as appropriate as when issued. Referring to the M. E. church, they said:

"They teach for doctrine the commandments of men. They preach another gospel. They have incorporated social dogmas and political tests in their creeds. They have gone on to impose conditions upon dicipleship that Christ did not impose. Their pulpits are perverted to agitations and questions not healthful to personal piety; but promotive of political and ecclesiastical discord, rather than those ends for which the Church of the Lord Jesus Christ was instituted. Without such a change, as we see no immediate prospect of, in their tone and temper and practice, we can anticipate no good results, from even entertaining the subject of reunion with them. Fidelity to what seems providential requires that we preserve our church in all its vigor and integrity from any entangling alliances with those whose philanthropy and politics and social economy are liable to give an ever varying complexion to their theology. Let us abide in our lot and be true to our doing what we can to spread scriptural holiness through those lands and to oppose the tide of fanaticism which threatens their overflow."

Statement Still True.

How true this statement of conditions of that excited period to our present condition in the same church these bishops were addressing. The three bishops who signed this address at Columbus, Ga., August 17, 1865, were J. O. Andrew, R. Paine and G. F. Pierce.

As is known to all intelligent people, Bishop Pierce was one of the greatest men Methodism ever produced. Then why cannot the little fellows who are now perverting their pulpits into political forums, and not even allowing a reply, follow the advice of this great man and stick to the duties to which they were called, instead of undertaking to give advice about matters of which they know nothing. It is pitiable to hear pulpit addresses that every intelligent person much know is furnished from some political headquarters, or some partisan camp that is sustained from the duplicity of those who are being misled by these same ministerial politicians.

I have the highest regard for the true minister of the gospel, but nothing but disgust for the men who are undertaking to turn the house of worship into a partisan political hustings.

ALARM UNFOUNDED, DR. WHITE SAYS.

Dr. John E. White, pastor of the First Baptist church, of Savannah, has answered Dr. John D. Mell's statement, published in the columns of The Constitution recently, with the following:

There is no occasion for tragic alarms over Baptist pastors running wild in party politics, tearing up churches, losing their jobs and doing fearful damage to the cause of Christ. Party politics never commanded so little of their interest and respect as now. All mere politics is at the lowest ebb with them.

Nor is there anything of fact within my observation to justify the fears of the fearful minded, that they are about to abandon their pulpits for public controversies and the passions of the political cockpit. I have heard of no indication that they may turn their pulpits into "political stumps to make political speeches and hold up the platform of any political party or the name of any candidate for office to save men from their sins" or for any other purpose whatsoever. We are not so raw, foolish and ineffectual as that.

At the same time the Baptist preachers along with the preachers of every other denomination are profoundly aroused over the national political situation as affecting morality and American ideals. This situation is not of their making. It was vehemently protested on high moral grounds by the public leaders of the south. They declared openly that the southern people would not stand for it as a matter of conscience. They predicted a resentful uprising of the rank and file of southern folks if this situation should be forced upon them. Now what they so positively prophesied has come to pass. Our minds, our hearts and our consciences are in revolt against politics, which commands us to play its game of ballyhoo and bunk. It would have been disreputable if religious leaders had reacted complacently in servile surrender to party politics.

It does not go very far with such men as we desire to be—men bred on the character-ideals of the Hebrew prophets, John the Baptist, Jesus Christ and apostolic heroes, to be exhorted that though "The moral questions involved are indeed great," they would better play safe or they may lose their jobs.

Everybody knows that the preachers in Georgia are not given to butting in at election time. Everybody knows that only the gravest compunctions would move them into the arena of public controversies. But they can be moved, for which God be praised forever and ever. Fifty years ago Dr. H. H. Tucker in the period we are now celebrating by our jubilee campaigns was thundering every week in the Christian Index on the political situation which confronted the people of Georgia and the south. Thirty years later Dr. J. B. Gambrell in Mississippi and Dr. B. H. Carroll in Texas were standing politicians and statesmen on their heads over a moral issue in politics. Thirty years ago Dr. Charles E. Taylor and Dr. Columbus Durham were blazing at every North Carolina Baptist association on an issue which compelled them to speak though it involved them in politics and criticism. Dr. Wetherspoon and Dr. Palmer are the heroes of southern Presbyterians. A part of their great influence came out of their public agitation in moral issues that were in politics.

When ten of the 12 bishops of the Southern Methodist church, 90 per cent of the Baptist and Methodist ministers of the Gospel, the overwhelming preponderance of leadership in every Protestant denomination in the southern states and the massive heart of womanhood, are impulsively flung into resentment against the political situation thrust upon them—the public knows that it is not meddlesome politics and intemperate zeal, but a religious conviction of their obligation to what is right and true and good that compels them.

A great statesman said that it was "a sad day for a nation when it could not live at peace with its saints." It will be a sad day in Georgia when her public men cannot get along with her preachers, Sunday school teachers and mothers.

AL SMITH LAUDED BY JAMES A. HARVEY.

Commending The Constitution on its "outspoken urge to the leaders of the democratic party of Georgia," James A. Harvey, special agent of the Norwich Union Fire Insurance Society, Ltd., with offices in the Trust Company of Georgia building, in writing to The Constitution says that a study of the life of Alfred E. Smith would lead to the acknowledgment that the party is fortunate to have such a man as head of the ticket.

Turning to the prohibition question, Mr. Harvey called attention to the fact that while Governor Smith approved the New York bill repealing the state prohibition law, he appended a note to the bill setting forth his views in detail and "armed with this information," Mr. Harvey says, "they need not apologize to the strongest prohibitionist, whether he be preacher or layman."

Mr. Harvey pointed out that Governor Smith made it impossible to convict a man twice for the same offence and thereby eliminated persecution, and "surely Christian men should not object to this."

The state police under Governor Smith whose son-in-law is chief, made 2562 arrests for violation of the prohibition law covering a period of 40 months, or 59 arrests per month after the repeal of the state law, it was said by Mr. Harvey.

"The Mullan-Gage enforcement act was on the book for 24 months and the arrests by the same police force were 1,130, or an average of 47 a month."

Mr. Harvey concludes:

"The 18th amendment will get a better, saner and a stricter enforcement under President Smith if he has anything to do with it, than it has gotten under any president since its incorporation into our laws, and at the same time he will be courageous enough to suggest any remedy that he feels will benefit the people as a whole and the respect for our country, regardless of any outcome to his success."

RETURN TO CHIEF ISSUES PLEADED FOR.

Editor Constitution: Many frivolous issues have been brought in the presidential campaign. The religious (by a few) and the wet and dry (by many). But there are three overshadowing issues before the country.

First—The paramount issue of republican rascality; corruption in high places; selling postoffices to the highest bidder; prostitution of public office for private gain, such as the oil scandals, Tea Pot Dome, the glaring frauds that have been perpetrated on the people by cabinet officers of the G. O. P. (which now stands for the Graft-Oil-Party instead of the Grand Old Party of Abraham Lincoln, Grant, Garfield, Roosevelt and others great in the history of our country.

Go further, consider the Coolidge cabinet, including Mellon, Hay, Hoover and the rest, who knew of this infamy and were "dumb as an oyster," although requested by congress to throw light on these scandals, did not until the investigating committee of congress forced them to divulge their knowledge under process of law. In law, as in morals, is not the party who hides for the criminal "particeps criminis," and in morals as guilty as the thief himself?

Second—Every well-informed person knows that no president can alter the Volstead law, which was passed over the veto of Woodrow Wilson; and only three-fourths vote of the state legislatures can alter this law. Again, let the democratic slogan be "Turn the rascals out!"

Third—Let religious, wet and dry issues be buried and decide which will you choose, two great democrats for president and vice president—Governor Smith and Senator Robinson—with clean records, or republican graft and corruption in office!

Fourth—Again, will we Anglo Saxons of the south stand for negro postmasters and negroes holding offices over white people, or have your own flesh and blood to rule over you? McKinley carried 32 counties in Georgia and had the opportunity to build up a respectable white republican party in the south (which we earnestly desire), but when dictated to by the late Senator Hanna he appointed Dr. Crumm postmaster in Charleston, Mineola Cox postmistress in Mississippi, the south came together as solid as the rock of Gibraltor! and always will be solid under similar circumstances. RELIGIOUS INTOLERANCE AND PREJUDICE DEPLORED.

Editor Constitution: As a member of the Baptist church and loyal Protestant the writer is amazed at the depths to which some people will stoop during a political campaign in their efforts to fan the fires of prejudice and religious intolerance.

This fact was never more strikingly demonstrated than during the present presidential campaign, when republican influences of the east are joining forces with the bolting democratic element of the south in an attempt to prejudice public opinion against the democratic nominee.

Varoius types of outrageous propaganda are being surreptiously distributed among the country people, the foulest and most inflammable specimen of which is an alleged oath of the Knights of Columbus—an old fake, long since exploded, but eagerly seized upon by those who would advance the republican cause by fair means or foul.

Alleged Proof.

Inasmuch as the alleged "oath" was taken from the Congressional Record of February 15, 1913, and is so credited, its circulators point to this as proof of its genuineness, overlooking the fact that it is pronounced both false and libelous in the same issue of the Record.

The facts are these:

By refrering to the Congressional Record of February 15, 1913, it will be seen that the alleged "oath" was filed as an exhibit by Eugene C. Bonniwell, of Pennsylvania, in his charges against Thomas S. Butler before the congressional committee on elections, growing out of an election contest.

Mr. Bonniwell, the contestant, in his protest, printed in the Record, declared:

"Messengers in the employ of supporters of Thomas S. Butler traveled the district, having in their possession and circulating a blasphemous libel, a copy of which is hereto attached, pretended to be an oath of the Knights of Columbus, of which the contestant is a member."

Butler's Defense.

In his defense Mr. Butler deplored the use of the spurious oath and declared that he had publicly condemned it, as recorded in the Congressional Record of February 15, 1913, page 3221.

After due investigation of the alleged "oath" submitted by Mr. Bonniwell, the congressional committee made the following report, which will be found upon page 3221 of the Congressional Record of February 15, 1913:

"The committee cannot condemn too strongly the publication of the false and libelous article referred to in the paper to Mr. Bonniwell, and which was the spurious Knights of Columbus oath, a copy of which is appended to the paper.

"It also condemns the publication of editorials to excite religious prejudice in a political campaign. No man should be persecuted for his religion, whether he be Catholic or Protestant."

Falsity of "Oath."

This ought to be sufficient to establish the utter falsity of the so-called "oath," which has found such wide circulation in the rural districts, but there is plenty of other evidence of the same nature.

"In February, 1913, Charles Megonegal, a printer, was arraigned in Philadelphia, charged with printing and causing to be printed libelous matter (the so-called oath) and after pleading guilty to the charge sentence was suspended because the accused contended he did not know that the purported oath was spurious, and that it had first been furnished him by other parties.

In July, 1914, A. M. Morrison and Garfield E. Morrison, publishers of the Mankato, Minnesota, Morning Journal, were convicted of criminal libel for publishing the "oath" and sentenced to 30 days in jail, the case being appealed. The foreman of the jury rendering the verdict was a Protestant preacher.

Other similar cases could be cited and also frequent investigations conducted by public officials and preachers, wherein the alleged "oath" has been pronounced false and preposterous.

During the progress of the Minnesota case the obligation assumed by Knights of Columbus in the fourth degree was established as follows:

Obligation Assumed.

"I swear to support the Constitution of the United States."

"I pledge myself as a Catholic citizen and Knight of Columbus, to enlighten myself fully upon my duties as a citizen and to conscientiously perform such duties entirely in the interest of my country and regardless of all personal consequences. I pledge myself to do all in my power to preserve the integrity and purity of the ballot, and to promote reverence and respect for law and order. I promise to practic my religion openly and consistently but without ostentation, and to so conduct myself in public affairs, and in the exercise of public virtue as to reflect nothing but credit upon our holy church, to the end that she may flourish and our country prosper to the greater honor and glory of God."

In October, 1914, four past grand masters of California Masons were furnished a complete copy of all the work, ceremonies and pledges used by the Knights of Columbus, and after an exhaustive examination of same declared:

"We find that neither the alleged oath nor any oath or pledge bearing the remotest resemblance thereto in matter, manner, spirit or purpose is used or forms a part of the ceremonies of any degree of the Knights of Columbus. We find that the order of the Knights of Columbus, as shown by its rituals, is dedicated to the Catholic religion, charity and patriotism. There is no propaganda used or taught against Protestants or Masons or persons not of Catholic faith. Indeed, Protestants and Masons are not referred to directly or indirectly in the ceremonial and pledges. . . We can find nothing in the entire ceremonials of the order that to our minds could be objected to by any person."

This report, of which the above is a part, was signed by Motley Hewes Flint, a thirty-third degree past grand master; by Dana Reid Weller, a thirty-second degree past grand master; by William Rhodes Hervey, a thirty-third degree past grand master, and by Samuel E. Burke, a thirty-second degree past grand master, all of California.

The writer is no apologist for the Catholic church or any of its organizations or teachings. He has never had the slightest connection or affiliation with anything associated with the faith, nor did any of his forbears. By birth, conviction, sentiment and sympathy he is a Protestant in profession and belief.

But he deplores intolerance and misrepresentation of every type and the above facts are submitted solely in the interest of justice and fair play.

CHURCH NO PLACE FOR POLITICAL FORUM.

Editor Constitution: The writer congratulates The Constitution on its support of those who would keep the church out of politics.

He had an illuminating experience in New York state, some years ago, running for the legislature, when preachers read from the pulpits the names of the different candidates for office, and, after each name was read told which ones the Anti-Saloon league thought their people should vote for.

Also, as an elder in the Presbyterian church in New York state, he has seen enough to believe that most prohibitionists there do not approve of the principle of "a fair fight and no favor." He has listened to twenty speeches, at least, presenting the "dry" side of the "cause," but has never heard a single one on the temperance side of the question, nor on what the Bible teaches on this subject. However sinful in other respects he may be the anti-prohibitionist cannot be rightly accused of having put the church into politics.

The Biblical point of view on the prohibition question is generally ignored by its supporters. Preachers with whom the writer of this letter has talked generally get very angry when what the Bible has to say is brought to their notice, and change the subject to something less embarrassing.

In the opinion of the writer any crusade the Christian tries to start should have Biblical backing.

Bible Advocates Temperance.

The Bible not only does not back the cause of prohibition but specifically advocates its opposite, temperance. Temperance in speech (Query: Can a "dry" ever be intemperate?), temperance in everything. Everywhere in the Bible the moderate, temperate use of alcoholic beverages is advocated.

The writer said to an Episcopalian today, "As the Bible so clearly advocates the temperate use of alcoholic drinks why does not some preacher say so sometimes from the pulpit?" "Why," she answered, "everyone who reads the Bible knows that it isn't necessary."

It is very evident that prohibitionists do not want to know it.

The Bible directly prohibits murder, adultery, theft and other evils. Why, then does it not directly prohibit the use of alcoholic beverages? Why is there not a commandment, "Thou shalt not drink wine nor strong drink"? Was there no drunkenness in Bible times? We have numerous statements in both Old and New Testaments to prove it was quite common. And it was spoken of as an evil. Saint Paul even goes so far as to say Christians should not so much as eat with one who was a drunkard.

Evil of Intemperance.

The Bible recognizes the evil of intemperance, and condemns it but does not prohibit the use of wine or other intoxicants as it very evidently believes they can be used temperately.

Here it also differs from the "drys," who have given up hope that liquor's use can be regulated successfully, and have a better way than God's for handling the situation.

The Christian has no right to the assumption that the example of Christ in the proper use of intoxicants is an improper example for our times. Christ's example on this, as on all other subjects, is for the ages.

He not only drank wine but made it, made wine so good He was complimented upon its quality, and as the writer of the gospel according to John adds, "This beginning of miracles did Jesus do and manifested forth His glory." It seems as if the prohibitionist's Christ would have shown forth His glory by turning all the wine at the feast of Cana into water. Here again the Bible doesn't check up with prohibition.

Christ further put the stamp of His approval upon wine by making it one of the elements used in the sacrament. Why did He not sanctify water instead?

Just as those who now advocate a return to temperance by the modification of the laws on prohibition are called "dripping wets" and "friends of law-breakers," so Christ was also vilified as a "winebibber and the friend of publicans and sinners."

St. Paul's Statement.

The principal Biblical quotation which prohibitionists advance to support their cause is St. Paul's statement, "If meat make my brother to offend I will eat no meat." It is a rather far-fetched argument, for the apostle is speaking of the meat offered to idols. St. Paul also advises Timothy to "drink no longer water but use a little wine, etc." Here he is speaking to an elder in the church whose example will be followed and criticised. Evidently if St. Paul had disapproved of the use of wine he would have been careful to have said so.

Is there any higher source of inspiration than the Bible for Christians? Then why all this attempt to make the ignorant believe that prohibitionists are carrying on a "holy" crusade?

Like other movements within the church, which in the past have lacked the support of God's word, this one is also doomed to failure but for the good of His organization it is to be hoped enough Christians can be mustered to keep the house of God from becoming the tool of propaganda which is in direct contradiction to the teaching of the Bible and the example of Christ.

JOHN LORTON LEE.

MORAL, SPIRITUAL INTERESTS DEFINED.

Editor Constitution: Perhaps 60 years a democrat, 65 years a Confederate veteran and 55 years a minister will make for me a place to say some things overlooked by both the foes and friends of the nominee for the presidency, Alfred E. Smith.

Some ministers oppose him because a "moral" issue is at stake. Slavery was a moral issue in Paul's day, yet he subordinated to spiritual interests the moral issue and returned a runaway slave to Philemon. He would not enter politics.

Slavery was a moral issue in the sixties, yet the abolitionists neglecting the spiritualists deluged our country in blood.

Ministers entering politics on a "moral issue" wrought folly and destruction of higher interests. A minister attacks Dr. Mell on a "moral issue," and yet violates all spiritual affinities by ridicule of him.

False Coin.

That is false coin that puts morality in place of spirituality. Dr. Mell did not advise preachers to abstain from a moral issue lest they should lose a money job. To so translate him is to libel him. He exhorted that entering politics on a "moral issue" would cause a minister to lose the opportunity of exhorting his hearers to attain the higher spiritual interests.

An editor of an organ denominational uses it as his personal partisan paper to denounce Smith against the rights of men who pay his salary and own the paper. He justifies this on the ground of a "moral issue."

Such confusion of a moral issue to the neglect of the spiritual can only result from religious intolerance. Managers of the paper are using it for political ends. Ministers, get back to your calling, or get out of the way.

Democratic Victory.

The democratic party in well beseeming ranks will march to victory unprecedented. The eagle shall utter his scream, then the sparrows shall seek the thicket.

The lion of democracy shall shake his mane, utter his roar and the smaller animals of the forest shall hide in their dens. All bolters shall go down into the dust from whence they sprung, unwept, dishonored and unsung.

LETTER TO JENKINS HITS AT INTOLERANCE.

Editor Constitution: The following letter was written by me to Dr. John S. Jenkins, presiding elder, south Atlanta district:

Dear Dr. Jenkins: I have read with considerable interest the report of the committee appointed at the instance of the Methodist ministers of Atlanta on the present political situation, as the same appeared in the Atlanta Journal of yesterday and The Constitution of today. I also read the reply of the honorable Clark Howell in The Atlanta Constitution of today's issue.

It happens that my grandfather was the first Methodist minister to preach in Polk county. My mother, my grandparents, an uncle and two aunts were charter members of the Methodist church at this place. My father was the first stationed pastor. I have been a prohibitionist, by practice and by precept, all my life, and so far as my means and my capacity would permit, I have been an ardent supporter of the Methodist church.

The Methodist ministers of Georgia are raising a question that brings me to the parting of the ways. If the attitude, as evidenced by the report of your committee and the utterances of other Methodist ministers in the pulpit and through the press really represents the spirit and purposes of Georgia Methodism, then I cannot travel with you any further. I will not be lined up with any religious organization whose leading ministers resolve themselves into a campaign committee whose only purpose could be to elect a republican candidate for president. I will not support or be allied with any church whose ministers have nothing better to do than to throw themselves into a political fight and seek to draw the church into such a fight because it happens that the other party has nominated a man whose views on religious matters and on the prohibition questioin do not happen to coincide with their own.

Republicans Stab South.

The republican party, as an organization, for more than 60 years, has lost no opportunity to stab the south. In the keynote speech of Senator Fess he got out of his system one of the bitterest and most unfounded political philippics against the south, her institutions and her sacred traditions that has appeared in the public prints since the civil war. Among other things, he praised the republican party because it had blotted from the face of the earth what he termed that damnable institution of African slavery. He also said that the republican party gave to the union forces, in the person of General Grant, the greatest military leader and strategist that had ever trod American soil. Why indulge in the ghoulish pastime of resurrecting and feasting upon these dead issues? We know that the republican party was responsible for the oil scandal. This unprecedented steal went on, aided and abetted by members of the cabinet and if Mr. Hoover knew of it he acquiesced in it. If he did not know of it he stands indicted before the American public for criminal negligence.

I sometimes think we become fanatical on the prohibition question. If the right of local self-government, which the democratic party alone in America stands for, is lost, then in my judgment our institutions are doomed. The prohibition cause needs the best men in all parties to carry it forward and support it.

Governor Smith's views on the prohibition question do not differ one iota from those of Woodrow Wilson, Thomas Jefferson, Grover Cleveland, Andrew Jackson and other great democratic leaders. In my humble judgment we will never have prohibition if we depend upon political parties, legislation, jails courthouses and electric chairs. This must come through the instrumentalities of the school, the home and the church. We need law observance much more than we need law enforcement. The Methodist ministry will never, in my judgment, convert Catholics to the cause of Protestantism, or bring wanderers into the ranks of prohibition by the harsh denunciatory methods which you and your associates have elected to pursue. In my judgment, it smacks of a fanaticism which would try Jesus Christ as a distiller because he converted a little water into wine, and would read Saint Paul out of the Christian church because he announced the need of a little wine for his stomach's sake.

As above stated, no one could question the right of yourself or your associates to vote the republican ticket or the ticket of any other political faith of your choice. However, some of us still love the traditions of the south and the glorious sentiments and principles for which our fathers battled and for which they need not be ashamed, and we are unwilling to support by our influence or by our contributions a church whose ministry resolves itself into a committee to furnish campaign literature for the republican party. You have your rights and we have ours.

I am, yours very truly.

BISHOP CANDLER'S STATEMENT INDORSED.

Editor Constitution: I have read with no small degree of satisfaction and pleasure Bishop Candler's statement in the public press a few days ago concerning the attitude of the Methodist Episcopal church, south, toward the political questions of the present day. I was taught in the days of my childhood and youth that the Methodist church was in no sense a political institution and that it had but one mission in the world, and that was to preach the gospel of Jesus Christ and scatter scriptural holiness over these lands. This is the view that my sainted father and mother had concernin the church, and to this view I most steadfastly hold. I believed they were right when they taught me this view, and, notwithstanding some of the strange happenings of this present day, I still think they were right. I shall still believe and hold to this view until I am convinced that I am wrong, and that my teachings were wrong. But under the light of recent happenings I am more convinced than ever that my teachings were right, and that I am more than fully justified for entertaining such views.

Bishop Candler, by calling our attention to the position of our Methodist fathers in regard to the church's position, more fully confirms me in my views, that the church is in no sense a political institution, and that our preachers should studiously avoid in their sermons all reference to all mooted and disputed political questions.

Much Expected.

The world expects a great deal of the people called Methodists. They have always taught a new life in Christ Jesus as necessary to salvation and they have therefore taken very high ground in the world of spiritual things. And they have always taught that this new life should be followed up by a life of holy living, going on from one degree of perfection to another till we become full grown men and women in Christ Jesus. Hence we are a peculiar people. Other people, and other churches may get along without that thing we call "religion" but we, as Methodists, cannot. It is our very life. And the only place to get that thing we call "religion" is at that point in a man's life where he is truly repentant and sorry for sin, willing to forsake sin, throw himself wholly upon Jesus Christ for redemption and salvation from sin. All the civil laws, written upon the pages of all the civil statutes of all the ages, are of no avail, so Methodism believes, when it comes to the saving of a human soul from sin. Methodism knows no other way to salvation except by the way of the cross.

Leadership Needed.

The church is suffering today and bleeding at the heart for a safe, sane and deeply consecrated leadership. This is a day when crime and immorality is running at the highest tide known in the history of our great country. Sin is rampant and brazen as never before. The public conscience has been dulled and dubbed until men seem to think that anything is all right, just so they can get by with it. It is not that we need the passing of any more laws, these things do not save folks, but instead, we need the gospel of Jesus Christ as we have never needed it before. God will not hold that preacher guiltless who deserts his post in this day of need and dire distress. Instead of attending national political conventions, writing platforms, and dictating political policies, in my humble judgment, a preacher would be far more useful to the church and the world, if he would seek the face of God, importune with Him for spiritual wisdom, and cry out till God hears for such leadership as will enable him to lead his people out of the misty mazes of doubt and uncertainty, high up on the plains of spiritual safety and security. Another thing I would like to know.

Just suppose that four Catholic bishops, and as many Catholic priests as Methodist preachers were present at the Cannon and Barton convention, and should publish to the world that they had met for the purpose of defeating some candidate for the presidency, what kind of a howl do you suppose would go up from all quarters of this country? It would reverberate and re-echo from one side to the other that the Catholic church was trying to dictate and run the political policies of this country. Yet a few Methodist and Baptist preachers get together under a convention call and do this very same thing.

DEMOCRATIC VOTE URGED BY JACKSON.

Editor Constitution: I enclose an article which you are at liberty to use, as well as this letter.

I am a democrat. All my life I have been a Methodist; the greater part of my life I have been a reader of the Wesleyan Christian Advocate; for more than 40 years I have been a steward in my church, nominated there to numbers of times by some pastors who are now members of the Ministerial association in Atlanta. I have never felt that I was worthy of the office, but I have honestly and humbly tried to do my duty therein and magnify the office and I have devoted much of my time and energy to the cause and supported the church and its institutions to the limit of my financial ability. I am as dry personally and politically as anybody; I was so when it was not popular to be, and the records of my county and state will bear me out in the statement. Having done this I thought that I ought to submit the article to my church paper first. I did so and its publication was declined, although I have not heard of any article in favor of the republican party being declined.

As you will note from its date, it was submitted before the appearance of the wonderful, statesmanlike papers of Bishop Candler and Dr. Mell, and Hon. Hoke Smith's clarion call to democrats.

The wisdom of the fathers in the foundation of this government and the churches on keeping the two separate and distinct has never been more clearly and forcibly exemplified than by the venomous, vitriolic, vituperative, sulphurous article from the ministerial association. Can one imagine hearing in the political arena, on the hustings, or anywhere else, a more bitter, revengeful, vitriolic, blasting, blighting, withering assault being made by one contestant on another? And this from the ministry; the wearers of the frock! God save the mark. Do they, can they think for a moment that such utterances can elevate the ministry in the minds and hearts of the people? Do they think for a moment that the church will be exalted and strengthened thereby? They are very poor students of human nature if they entertain such ideas.

Another thing—they claim they are democrats and have voted with that party; if they have done so, entertaining the ideas contained in their paper, they have been the most servile hypocrits. No sane, reasonable man can reconcile such action with their statement.

Would not a Biblical student conclude after reading the emanation from the ministerial association that the association had been delving in the lower regions for their material and venom rather than on Sinai to get new inspiration and to hear anew the ten Commandments?

Yours truly,
R. D. JACKSON.

JACKSON LETTER.

Mr. Jackson's letter follows:

Editor of Wesleyan:

I have been reading with surprise and amazement your articles and the articles of others in the Wesleyan in the interest of the republican party and its candidates and against the democratic party and its candidates and as I conceive the interest of your publication, your church, your state and the south. I note that you say there may be those who do not agree with your views. Certainly there are many who do not, one of whom I am. If some of the ministry and some editors and other desire to allign themselves with the implacable foes of the south, the republicans, personally and individually, they have the right to do so, just the same as their constituencies have the right to be democrats, but do you think it just exactly right and fair for them while depending upon the church, which is predominantly white and democratic, for maintenance and support, to use their positions and influence against the best interests of their constituents, their churches and our southland, and ally themselves with our enemies? It may be right, but I confess that I am unable to see it that way.

I am a Methodist and a democrat. Our great church and party are both exponents of freedom of thought and civil and religious liberty, and our democratic government is founded on that principle. These are the bed rock foundations of their existence. While I would prefer that the democratic candidate for president were not a Catholic, the great majority of his opponents who are members of other churches would be horrified at the thought that any one should not be allowed to worship according to the dictates of his own conscience. I have never heard Al Smith accused of not being a Christian; some of his accusers might ask themselves, "What must I do to inherit eternal life?"

Small Comfort.

If objection is made to Governor Smith that he believes in states rights on the prohibition question, and the declaration in the democratic platform is not strong enough on the question (the reactionaries said before leaving the convention it was the strongest ever made by either of the major parties) what comfort do they get out of the republican platform and the eight years of corruption of that party in its non-enforcement of the Volstead act, with Mr. Hoover sitting at the council table and neither he nor any other member of the cabinet, not even the president himself, to raise a voice of protest against it or any of the other corruption and thievery uncovered and disclosed by senatorial investigation? What comfort do Georgia democrats get out of Mr. Hoover's practices of social equality with negroes, when he can dine with the political head of the republican party in Georgia, Ben Davis, the negro now being investigated for selling patronage in Georgia? What comfort can any democrat get out of Mr. Hoover giving a social function in Washington at which the color line was entirely obliterated? Imagine if you can the feeling of a southerner being invited to an entertainment at Mr. Hoover's private car with his wife or daughter and on entering the car meet the Savannah negress republican committeewoman, also being entertained at the same function. Can any white man or white woman imagine why Mr. Hoover abrogated the segregation order for his department in Washington, whereby the white employees were separated from the negroes and put in force an order requiring them to mix and mingle in their work? Separate working rooms and comfort rooms were already provided, why not keep them so? The reason was to catch the negro vote in the northern states and humiliate as much as possible the southern whites.

They urge against Governor Smith that he came out of the east side of New York; that he came up from the sidewalks of that wicked city; that he was a poor boy who sold newspapers for a living. Do not these things commend him? He must be a wonderful man to rise to the eminence which he has attained from such conditions and surroundings to be elected four times governor of the great state of New York. I am glad that in these United States the poor and humble can rise to positions of honor and trust if they have merit in them.

R. D. JACKSON.

"INDEX'S SUGGESTION HIT BY CRAWFORD.

Editor Constitution: The following letter, written to Louie H. Newton, editor of The Christian Index, is self-explanatory:

Dear Brother Newton:

I have been a subscriber and a reader of The Christian Index for a good many years, not only that but I have tried to get all my friends and neighbors to subscribe for it. I wanted the Index because being a loyal Baptist I wanted to keep up with the work of my denomination in the state and because I found in its columns articles of value and help, but of recent weeks the Index seems to have changed from a religious to a political paper, and as I take the daily secular papers I get the political news from them and do not need the Index for that purpose, and as the political editorials appearing in the Index are so harsh and to my mind so far from what should appear in a Christian paper I do not care to read them. I think they are calculated to stir up and foment religious prejudice and hatred and my Bible teaches me that no Christian should have any part in that sort of thing. In your issue of July 19th you rail at The Atlanta Constitution and the Macon Telegraph for trying to appeal to race prejudice when in this very issue of your paper and just on the opposite page from your editorial you display a cartoon that has a tendency to create more religious prejudice than all the editorials written by both the papers mentioned, and yet this cartoon appears in The Christian Index. May the Lord forgive us for our inconsistency.

I am an old-time, deep-water Baptist, have been a member of the Baptist church for 33 years, I am now a deacon and have been for a number of years, I have tried to be just a humble follower of Him who gave Himself for me. For all these years, I have stood for and tried to help forward all the interests fostered by our great denomination, and I shall continue to do so, and I shall not hesitate to criticise anything that I believe to be hurtful to the cause, for I am more interested in it than I am in politics. I am a Baptist for several reasons, first because I believe with all my soul in religious liberty and in the absolute separation of church and state, and when my denominational paper gets to be a political paper, and when I see where there has been a political meeting held in one of the great Baptist churches of my state, I am made to wonder whither are we drifting and where are the things that our great denomination has stood for being relegated to, and what has become of our consistency. We have just completed a new Baptist church in my town, this church was built through prayer and sacrifice upon the part of its members, it was built and dedicated to the worship of Almighty God and so long as I shall live and continue a member of this church Willie Upshaw nor any other politician shall ever hold a political meeting in it.

I am not only opposed to the whisky traffic, but I practice what I preach. I am a teetotaler. I have never taken a drink and never intend to take a drink and I am not worrying about the eighteenth amendment for it is not in the least danger, for no matter whether Al Smith is elected or not it will remain on the statute books and I feel sure that were Al Smith to be elected he would enforce it much better than it is now being enforced.

Time to "Back Up."

Now Louie, I have always been willing to let you fellows tell me when I should cooperate in helping in any work to advance the Kingdom of our Lord, but when you get to the point where you undertake to tell us how to vote it is time for you to "back up," for we draw the line there, we democratic Baptists vote as we please, we have always done it, and we always shall do it, and we generally please to vote the democratic ticket, and with "malice toward none and with charity toward all," we are going to do that very thing this time, we are going to vote the straight democratic ticket from Al Smith for president right on down the line to constable, and we are not going to apologize to a single soul in the world for so doing, and strange as it may seem to you my dear brother Louie, we are not going to feel in the least like we have jeopardized our hope of eternal salvation by so doing.

Now, Louie, don't get the idea in your head that I am a politician, for I am not, but I am a democrat, "dyed in the wool," my father wore the gray for four years in the sixties and I love every thread in his old gray uniform. I believe in the things for which the democratic party stands and I am not going to let such a contemptible and damnable a thing as religious prejudice keep me from voting the democratic ticket, neither this time nor at any other time.

Now, Louie, in all seriousness, I wish you would stay out of politics with The Christian Index, you are hurting the denomination, you are hurting the Index and you are hurting the cause. My Bible teaches me that we "can't serve God and Mammon," and I do not believe that you can consistently run a political paper and call it Christian, for politics and religion are mighty hard to mix, and if you will look over the issue of July 19 you will find that there are more than nine pages of the Index devoted to politics, pure and simple, not to mention the cartoons, and one of those cartoons! Louie let me ask you a simple question, and I want you to put your hand on your heart and answer me. Do you believe that if the Master were editing the Index that He would display the cartoon that appears on page 10 of the issue of the Index of July the 19th? I believe the Master meant what He said in the fifth chapter and the ninth verse of Matthew, when He said, "Blessed are the peacemakers: for they shall be called the children of God."

"All Wrong."

Louie, you are a fine fellow and I love you, but I honestly believe you are all wrong in letting politics get into the Index. If you just can't vote for Al Smith because he happens to be a Catholic, or for any other reason, all well and good, there is where we will part company on that one thing, for I shall vote for him, but that should not be allowed to take space in the Index that should be devoted to the advancement of the Kingdom of God. I sincerely believe that Al is going to be elected president and that he will make a great one, and that the good old U. S. A. will rock along smoothly for the next four years and that we will have no reason to regret that we voted for Al.

Fraternally,
THOS. H. CRAWFORD.
Blue Ridge, Ga., July 25, 1928.

P. S. Since writing the above I have read the letter of that grand old man, Dr. Mell, to the Baptist ministers of Georgia, and he is right as he always is. T. H. C.

ALCOHOLIC QUESTION IN BIBLICAL TIMES.

Editor Constitution: It seems from the press reports that the teachers of the various denominations of our state are making prohibition the issue in our political campaign this year.

I want to ask one or more questions, which some or probably all of them may answer to my satisfaction.

WAYNE WHEELER---DRY BOSS

The Story of a Remarkable Man and His Remarkable Power

By JUSTINE STEUART

XI.—A REPUBLICAN DICTATOR IN A DEMOCRATIC CONVENTION

The presidential year 1924 found Wheeler the storm center for two intense political struggles. Opening its annual convention in the early days of the year, the Anti-Saloon league found its national superintendent, Dr. P. A. Baker, dying at his home. Wheeler faced an almost certainty of his opponent, E. H. Cherrington, being elected to succeed Dr. Baker; but by clever strategy, had the election postponed until he was able to control enough votes to secure the selection of a superintendent who would favor Wheeler, and would not interfere with his interests in Washington.

He was now the actual, if not the official, head of the Anti-Saloon league. The next fight, in which his tactical ability and his clever handling of a few votes which formed the balance of power, won him an amazing victory, was the national democratic convention in Madison Square garden. By fighting Al Smith to the last ditch, Wheeler defeated him, and was successful in having a candidate nominated who expressly favored prohibition "enforcement." By his unrivaled skill, he, although a republican, actually dictated to the democrat convention.

The year 1924 was a political year for Wheeler. It opened with his fight to control the national superintendency of the Anti-Saloon league and included his battle to prevent the nomination of Governor Alfred E. Smith, of New York, for president on the democratic ticket. He won both contests. Each time it was his control of a small group of votes, constituting the balance of power, which decided the issue. The Thirty-Year Jubilee convention of the Anti-Saloon league opened at Washington January 12, with the national superintendent, Dr. Purley A. Baker, absent. He was dying; a few months at the longest were all that remained to him of life. He expressed his desire to lay down the office he had held for over twenty years. His logical successor seemed to be Ernest H. Cherrington, manager of the publishing interests of the league, who, with Baker and Bishop James Cannon, Jr., of Virginia, had been the three men most directly responsible for the reference and ratification of the 18th amendment. Wheeler and Cherrington had been opposing forces in the league councils. Wheeeler's idea was law enforcement, and his policy was opportunism. Cherrington's idea was law observance, and his policy education. If Baker's withdrawal from the superintendency was announced at the annual meeting of the board of trustees of the league, Cherrington's election was inevitable. Wheeler sought postponement. A member of his faction addressed the delegates, setting forth Dr. Baker's sudden rally and prospective full recovery. As he presented the story, it appeared as though a miracle had been wrought. His message fell on ears that were eager to believe it. They voted to reelect Dr. Baker for the coming two-year term of office. League men later wondered whether it was the notoriously unbalanced enthusiasm of the man that had dictated his statement of Baker's condition, or whether it had been inspired by Wheeler. When the question was once directly put to Wheeler, he evaded replying. At all events, the election had been postponed temporarily.

Dr. Baker's illness had made necessary the appointment of an assistant, Rev. E. J. Moore, who had been a district superintendent under Wheeler in Ohio. Moore "swung around the circle," presumably busy about national league concerns, but in reality organizing an anti-Cherrington vote in the special election which must inevitably be called when Dr. Baker's rapidly approaching death had occurred. He reported, personally or by letter, to Wheeler in Washington the results of his calls.

When Baker presented his resignation, March 12, 1924, a few weeks before his death, Wheeler realized Cherrington's election was imminent. When the trustees gathered at Indianapolis, he let it be known to a few that he would appreciate a complimentary vote for Baker's post, although he would not accept the office even though elected. The ballot was taken. Cherrington was within a few votes of election. F. Scott McBride, then superintendent of the Illinois Anti-Saloon league, was second, and Wheeler had received his complimentary votes—enough to have made an election impossible on the first ballot. At Wheeler's suggestion word was passed to some of the Cherrington supporters that Wheeler would take the post if elected, with the hint that Cherrington was not anxious for the position himself. Other political methods, familiar to men who had played with caucuses, primaries and conventions for years, were used. Enough votes were drawn from Cherrington to ensure his defeat, while enough of the original Wheeler votes went to McBride to give him the election. Wheeler's "balance of power" had enabled him to defeat the ablest man in the league, after Dr. Baker's withdrawal. Wheeler himself told, to intimates in the league, the story of his successful coup, justifying it by the assertion that McBride would not interfere with Wheeler's Washington activities, while Cherrington might have done so if elected.

By McBride's election, Wheeler became the dominating power in the league, except when the legislative committee or the executive committee were meeting.

Wheeler's next use of the balance of power was at the democratic national convention, held at Madison Square Garden, New York city. The principal contenders for the presidential nomination were Governor Alfred E. Smith, of New York, labeled "wet," and William Gibbs McAdoo, son-in-law of former President Woodrow Wilson, labeled "dry." The various state Anti-Saloon leagues had done what they could to secure McAdoo delegates or, if their state delegation was pledged to some favorite son, to insert in the delegation members who would support McAdoo as second choice. William Jennings Bryan, as arranged four years before, was Wheeler's "contact man" with the convention. Wheeler also had the help of two or three assistants from the league headquarters, besides the new National Superintendent McBride and a few state league superintendents, who came occasionally to supplement his work. The New York State league was unable to give very effective aid because of the recent Anderson affair and because Wheeler preferred to work independently of the state league, since this was a national matter.

The deadlock between Smith and McAdoo soon became evident. Wheeler was the key log in the jam. If he released the McAdoo votes which he had pledged, some of the favorite sons might obtain the coveted prize. Wheeler was invited to meet Governor Smith in a friendly way at a club, where the two quietly talked over the situation. Wheeler, in his discussion of the meeting with an assistant, declared that Governor Smith had tried to make him see that being president of the United States would be quite different from being governor of New York, and that if he were in the white house his course in enforcement of the prohibition law would not be the same as it had been in New York. No suggestion was made by the governor that he would do any definite thing to enforce the law. Generalities were the order of the discussion. It seemed evident that between two men holding such radically different attitudes toward the 18th amendment, there could be no common ground. Wheeler said that both men felt this and merely talked in a friendly, non-committal way. To a remark by Smith, implying the possibility of his election, eventually, Wheeler said that he replied: "Governor, you will never enter the white house." That closed the interview.

Of the possible "dark horses" two were especially objectionable to Wheeler. He was bitterly opposed to Oscar W. Underwood, of Alabama, and had fought him desperately. He later effectively smashed the Underwood machine in Alabama and always believed that he had made imperative Underwood's withdrawal from public life. When some of the southern delegates, drys and followers of the Anti-Saloon league, suggested that overtures might be made to the Underwood group with a view of obtaining from them pledges of support for prohibition in return for Wheeler's support, he declared that he would support Al Smith before Underwood.

Others came suggesting that Governor Ritchie, of Maryland, an open foe of prohibition, might reverse himself and become a dry if assured of Wheeler support. Wheeler, however, held on to the McAdoo standard until the delegates abandoned both Smith and McAdoo and wearidly and hopelessly picked John W. Davis, of West Virginia, as their nominee. A hurried message to Wheeler from Bryan inquired whether the dry leader would oppose Davis' nomination. Wheeler assured Bryan and, through Bryan, the delegates whom he controlled, that he would not oppose Davis' nomination nor would he fight him in the election undess he assail ed prohibition. He felt that the nomination of Davis was tantamount to a republican victory. A republican victory, he was aware, meant the continuance of his influence at the white house.

Because of his conviction that democracy had talked and fought itself to death, the nomination of Charles W. Bryan for vice president hardly aroused his interesgt. He was not even insistent that an ardent prohibitionist should be named for this place on the ticket. A supporter of "enforcement" would satisfy him. He sent the following statement to his dry delegates and then gave it to the press, expressing his attitude in the matter:

"Vice presidential candidates must be for prohibition law enforcement. One of these candidates may be the next president if the election is thrown into congress through failure of either dominant parties to secure the required number of votes. The 12th amendment to the constitution outlines this procedure.

"The candidacy of La Follette, now assured, makes possible the victory of the third party in a sufficient number of states to prevent either presidential candidate from obtaining a majority in the electoral college.

"The procedure outlined in the 12th amendment and the present political situation in the house of representatives would probably prevent the house from naming the next president. The senate then chooses one of the two candidates for vice president having the highest number of votes in the electoral college. This would mean that the candidate for vice president on the republican or democratic ticket would be made president of the senate and become president of the United States.

"A nation constitutionally dry will not elect either a president or a vice president or a vice president who is constitutionally wet or who wavers on the vital issue of prohibition enforcement."

Senator Thomas Walsh, of Montana, was Wheeler's choice when the impossibility of nominating McAdoo became evident. He had discreet friends sound Walsh on the proposal without bringing Wheeler's name into the matter. Only the senator's unwillingness to enter the race prevented an attempt by Wheeler to throw the dry force of the conventioan to Walsh's support.

Before the convention met, Wheeler had endeavored to persuade Bryan to announce his candidacy for the second place on the ticket, believing that the use of his name would swing sufficient strength to McAdoo to give him the nomination. Bryan replied to a wire from Wheeler urging this: "I don't think I would care to run for vice president with anyone, but I could not decide either way without knowing the first man."

Bryan had never been an ardent McAdoo man, tihough he had supported his candidacy in the convention. In one letter to Wheeler he wrote:

"I cannot, of course, discuss candidates purely from a wet and dry standpoint. I must consider their attitude on economic questions and I must also consider their availability. That is, I feel it my duty to favor those who, being sound, have the best chance to win. Both McAdoo and Ralston are dry and, of course, on this subject would be better than Underwood or Smith, and they are better, also, on economic grounds."

This was probably the only time in American history when a republican held the balance of power in a democratic national convention and voted state delegations in solid blocks. Wheeler felt that his convention work was successful. His real purpose had not been to secure the nomination of McAdoo or any other man. His true aim had been to prevent the nomination of Governor Smith or any other wet. In that he had succeeded.

Wheeler also succeeded in preventing the adoption of any platform plank that reflected on prohibition. In this he was greatly indebted to Bishop Cannon, of Virginia, a lifelong democrat who appeared before the platform committee and made the argument for the dry forces. Others who were dry democrats supported Cannon's fight before the committee. Wheeler presented to the committee the following statement as the official expression of the Anti-Saloon league:

"Any beer and light wine plank would be repudiated by the voters in over 90 per cent of the territory of the nation which is dry under state and local laws. Congress cannot legalize what the states have prohibited.

"The 18th amendment placed an obligation on congress and state legislatures to make prohibition uniform and efficacious throughout the nation. This obligation would be repudiated by any beer proposal raising the alcoholic content higher than that permitted in over three-fourths of the states. A beer or wet plank would spell defeat for any party.

"We do not ask for a dry plank because legislative issues are fought out in congress and state legislative districts. A national dry platform will not secure the votes of wet congressmen.

"The people will expect the democrats to adopt a strong law enforcement plank. It will be appropriate and helpful to meet the challenge of a wet minority that the 18th amendment and the laws enacted pursuant thereto cannot be enforced.

"Law enforcement is the foundation of orderly government. The only platform policy consistent with the democratic principles is a declaration for the enforcement of laws enacted by the required constitutional majority through their chosen representatives.

"As Andrew Jackson, the great democrat, said, 'No amendment can be made in the constitution except in the mode pointed out in the constitution itself. Every mode else is revolution. The laws of the United States must be executed.'

"A platform plank urging law obedience and the law enforcement will appeal to the friends of constitutional government. Refusal to adopt such a plank will please only the enemies of majority rule and law enforcement."

When the convention adjourned, Wheeler prepared a jubilant utterance, pointing out his success in preventing the nomination of a wet candidate. Bishop Cannon, however, as chairman of the league's executive committee, after a heated interview with Wheeler in the Herald Square hotel, ordered the statement withheld from the press. As a democrat and as chairman of the committee which was supposed to direct Wheeler's activities, he made the only statement which was issued by the dry organization, simply saying:

"The wets have been defeated in their efforts to secure a wet plank or a wet candidate at the democratic convention. There is no smell of beer or wine in the democratic platform and the candidate is a strong advocate of law enforcement.

"BISHOP JAMES CANNON, JR.,
Chm. Legislative Committee, Anti-Saloon League of America."

Wheeler long resented this action by Bishop Cannon. He was proud of the part he had played at Madison Square Garden and saw no reason why he should not advertise his success. He was unable to see the tactical error involved.

Wheeler did not attend the republican national convention, but was represented there by B. N. Hicks, who had recently been appointed an assistant in the legislative department of the league. Wheeler was sufficiently close to the leaders of the republican party to feel certain that any candidate named by the convention could have his unqualified support. Besides, there was little quesabout Coolidge receiving the nomination.

The La Follette group caused Wheeler many anxious hours. He disliked third parties. He overestimated the strength of the radical-progressives, as he termed them, and feared that they would make impossible the election of any presidential candidate at the polls, thus throwing the election into the house.

With the close of the national convention, Wheeler threw himself into the campaign. For the second time he forced the wet group to publish the list of men whom they indorsed for the senate or the house. This time the wets were cautious and held their lists until very near the date of election. He prodded them, through the press, into giving out a statement, with the usual disastrous results to themselves. The wets listed 262 candidates for the house who were unsatisfactory to them. Of course, 219 were elected by the drys. They named 22 candidates for United States senator, in 17 states, whom they opposed. These 17 states elected dry senators. Of six other candidates indorsed by the wets in five states, only one was elected by them. Of the 13 new United States senators elected in 1924, all but two were favorable to prohibition legislation. In both house and senate, Wheeler had increased his already large majority for prohibition.

Wheeler summarized the election, so far as it concerned presidential candidates, as follows:

"We followed out the general program agreed upon by the executive committee, not to make the wet and and dry issue any more prominent than necessary as between the presidential candidates. There was no change in the situation after the committee met, except the issue which arose in the northwestern states, as we had anticipated it might. As Senator La Follette grew in strength in that section, both dry republicans and democrats insisted that he was unworthy of the support of dry voters in view of his consistent record against prohibition. We had a constant volley of telegrams from members of congress and others asking for his record. We, of course, gave it, and also his statement that he would enforce the law. In a done-dry state this was not satisfactory to the average voters and Senator La Follette lost tremendously because of his wet record. His dry friends, on the other hand, were constantly appealing to us and sending committees to Washington to try to get a statement from us that he would be aggressive for prohibition enforcement and therefore satisfactory. We told them that he must make his own statement, that all we could do would be to give his record and the statements that he had made. You have doubtless seen the appeal that was sent out by his committee attacking the president and Mr. Davis and practically representing La Follette as the only man whom the drys could consistently support. It fell on deaf ears, however, in view of his wet record.

"Dr. Davis was a disappointment because of his deviation from his own party platform on several issues. Many of our democratic friends frankly told me that it was an element of weakness in his campaign. His constant repetition of wet catch phrases like, 'Personal liberty,' 'illegal search and seizure,' and 'home rule,' gave the people the impression that he was making a bid for wet support. When one read his speeches and took his explanation, as he gave it to me personally, they were not so objectionable, but in allowing the people in the wet centers to believe that he was against the prohibition cause and in using wet catch phrases, I think he lost several votes in states where he might otherwise have had a chance to win for every vote he got from the wet centers."

Among the successes of the campaign, Wheeler counted the defeat of Senator A. Ousley Stanley, of Kentucky, as a personal scalp taken in the fight. Stanley had attacked the Anti-Saloon league on the floor of the senate. Wheeler sent his assistant, Ira Champion, to Kentucky for six or eight weeks, in which time the state was effectively organized for Stanley's overthrow.

In congress this year, it was impossible to secure the enactment of much legislation. Wheeler worked hard to secure the adoption of the prohibition reorganization bill, now known as the Cramton bill, but was not successful. Enforcement appropriations and a coast guard bill were passed. Other minor bills, including the alien deportation bill, were only perfunctorily urged.

The wet group introduced 59 identical bills in congress, providing for the modification of the Volstead act to permit the sale of beverages containing 2.75 per cent alcohol. Hearings on these measures were held by the house committee on the judiciary. The whole affair was largely a sham battle. The wet group must have known their own weakness too well to have any hopes of passing such a bill. The drys knew their own strength equally well. Besides this, Wheeler had received assurances from both republicans and democrats that these bills would not be given any consideration by congress. Congressman William R. Green, of Iowa, chairman of the house ways and means committee, had written Wheeler the following letter, in January:

"I very much regret that I shall be unable to attend the banquet of your league this evening. The house has recently made a call upon the ways and means committe to bring out a revenue bill at so early a date that the work consumes all the time I have to spare, but you understand, of course, that the league has my best wishes for its success.

"The question has frequently been asked of late as to whether the ways and means committee would be likely to consider legislation which would have the effect of licensing so-called light wines and beer and bring in as it claimed, a very large amount of revenue to the government. I have no authority to speak for anyone but myself, but I might relate an incident from which the members of your league might form an opinion as to whether this was likely to be done.

"I was one day conferring with the ranking democrat on the ways and means committee, Mr. Garner, when a prominent attorney representing the brewing interests asked to have a few words with us. He said in substance that he was ready to prepare a bill which would permit the manufacture of 2 1-2 per cent beer and bring into the government a very large amount of revenue, but that he did not wish to go to the trouble of preparing the measure and presenting it to the committee unless there was some likelihood that the committee would consider it favorably.

"I told him that in my judgment the measure would have no chance of being approved by the committee and Mr. Garner said in substance that it would be a mere waste of time to submit it. Mr. Garner further said that he would not sanction any legislation that had for its purpose a breach of the 18th amendment.

"You can read this letter at your banquet as my message to your guests.

"Very truly yours,
"W. R. GREEN."

The bills did not go to Green's committee. The result, however, was the same. They died. Wheeler used the hearings to secure national publicity for anti-beer propaganda. His brief filed with the committee was encyclopedic. He distributed it in great quantities in every state where the wets seemed likely to raise the beer issu.

Several attempts were made during 1924 to oust Haynes from his place as commissioner of prohibition. Of these, Wheeler wrote: :

"In each instance we have been able to learn of it in advance and offset the drive. Another effort will be made in the near future. It will be more difficult to offset it this time."

Haynes was not the only one in trouble in 1924. William H. Anderson, former superintendent of the New York Anti-Saloon league, was tried and found guilty of third-degree forgery, the charge being based on an alteration of the New York league's books by which part of the compensation paid to a solicitor was listed as expense money instead of salary. Other charges had been brought against him, but these did not come to trial. A New York attorney had informed Wheeler in 1922 of the difficulties between Anderson and the solicitor named Phillips, which might eventually get into the courts. The relations between Wheeler and Anderson had been strained for some time. Anderson, in letters, had accused Wheeler of jealousy and had boasted that he "had to use the axe on him." These letters had been sent by their recipient to Wheeler. In spite of his personal dislike for Anderson. Wheeler realized the harm that might have been done if any attack were made on a prominent league man during the 1922 primaries. He urged upon Dr. Baker the advisability of buying off Phillips, but found Anderson opposed to this, on the ground that Phillips had no claim and could not make good his case. The more Wheeler investigated, the more confused he confessed he was by the statements made by Anderson. Eventually he declined to have anything to do with the whole affair and, to the insistent requests of the press for a statement, confined himself to this utterance in January, 1924:

"The case against Mr. Anderson is now on trial in the court in New York. I am not an attorney in the case and have not been consulted concerning it and it would be entirely improper for me to make any statement concerning it at this time."

The national publicity given Anderson's trial embarrassed Wheeler and the officers of the league who, eventually, gave out this statement, February 4, 1924.

"Superintendent William H. Anderson is immediately under the supervision and control of the board of directors of the Anti-Sloon League of New York, which board has strongly supoprted him and is now strongly supporting him. The officers of the National Anti-Saloon league have carefully followed the developments in this case, but have refrained from making any statement that might be considered as an effort to influence the procedure of the courts while the case was pending.

"Now that the case has been appealed to the higher courts and in view of the fact that it has become a matter of nation-wide interest and discussion, the officers of the Anti-Saloon League of America appeal to the league's constituency to reserve judgment until the case is finally disposed of in the higher courts.

"We believe that eventually it will be shown that Mr. Anderson did not defraud and did not intend to defraud anyone, which is the question involved."

Anderson's broad-ax methods had not made many friends for him in the league, although it had won him a certain following among league supporters. Wheeler declared that he felt relieved at his removal from the councils of the organization and regretted only the accompanying embarrassment to the league's activities in New York.

An abortive boom of United States District Attorney William Hayward, of New York city, for the republican candidacy for governor of New York was part of Wheeler's activities in this political year. This was largely complimentary, to testify to Wheeler's appreciation of Hayward's work in prosecuting liquor law violators in New York, and also in return for Hayward's services in supporting Wheeler's law enforcement plank at the Cleveland convention of the republican party.

Wheeler, aided by Dunford, in 1924, prepared briefs for the use of others in many cases involving prohibition enforcement. The most important of these were the case of Everard Breweries v. Day, involving the constitutionality of the supplementary prohibition law, and the case of Yellowley v. Lambert, raising the question of the constitutionality of the visions of the national prohibition act and the supplemental prohibition act which limit the prescription of intoxicants. In these, as in every other case briefed this year, the league's contentions were upheld by the courts.

Things New and Old About the Bible

BY REV. W. P. KING.

A VARIETY OF VOLUMES.

All of the following volumes are published by the Modern Library, Inc., New York city, at the uniform price of $1 postpaid.

"The Ego and His Own," by Max Stirner. "The Ego and His Own" is the Bible of extreme individualism. It is a unique book, born of the brain of a unique genius. Written in the first half of the nineteenth century, it was promptly forgotten along with its author, who died unknown and in poverty. The book rose to life again when Nietzsche's philosophy began to compel the attention of all thinking people. It is quite natural that Stirner's "The Ego and His Own" should have been swept into popularity by Nietzsche's great vogue. The views of the two writers are in striking agreement on all essential points. They are both subversive of all existing institutions, and they both preach the gospel of the ego as the supreme arbiter of all things, the one and sole guide of conduct, the source of all truth, right and justice to himself and for himself alone. There is but one ego, and the individual is his prophet. Stirner's book is the boldest negation of the state, property, religion and morality. These are all products of collective human life; whereas Stirner is interested only in the world that the individual makes for himself. "I am my all in all," he says, "I am the only one. Nothing is more to me than myself."

"Creatures That Once Were Men," by Maxim Gorky. Gorky is still the greatest literary representative of revolutionary Russia. Born of the people, and having experienced in his own person their wrongs, their sufferings and their misery, he was enabled by his extraordinary genius to voice their grievances and their aspirations for a better life as no mere intellectual could. His success was instantaneous, and when the Russian people rose in rebellion against their oppressors in 1905, he was the stormy petrel of the revolution, the evangel who, in thunderous notes, and in words that all the masses could understand proclaimed the glad tidings of the new hoped-for freedom. His latest autobiographical works show that his pen has lost none of its old cunning, that he has retained in full his revolutionary ardor and aggressive fighting spirit for the cause of human liberty, and that maturity, while mellowing his creative genius, also intensified and strengthened it.

The stories contained in this volume are among the very best of his writings.

"Alice in Wonderland," "Through the Looking Glass," "The Hunting of the Snark," by Lewis Carroll, with an introduction by Alexander Woollcott. With the inclusion of "The Hunting of the Snark" this volume may be regarded as "The Works of Lewis Carroll." The addition of the Tenniel illustrations gives it the capping flavor. In his introduction, after telling the strange story of how the obscure Reverend Charles Lutwidge Dodgson became the immortal Lewis Carroll, Mr. Woollcott writes:

"In the sixty years that have passed since then, this gay, roving dream story, Alice in Wonderland, and its sequel have seeped into the folklore of the world. It has become as deeply rooted a part of that folk-lore as the legend of Cinderella or any other tale first told back in the unfathomable past.

"The Man Who Was Thursday," by G. K. Chesterton. The salient gift that Chesterton puts into his marvelous control over the amazing. In a few hours the whole world has become permeated with the anarchist idea, and we are not half as astonished as some of the professor are in "The Man Who Was Thursday." Chesterton's characters can juggle with the stars and planets and moons without evolving any disbelief in our minds of their actual existence. To be Chestertonian, they are too impossible, these characters, not to be real: they have too many divine flashes of wit not to be human: they have too much of Chesterton within them not to be large and delightful.

"Woodrow Wilson's Selected Addresses and Public Papers," edited with an introduction by Albert B. Hart. President Wilson's most important and significant addresses and public papers from his first inaugural address to his address of December 2, 1918, before sailing for France. With introduction and valuable index.

The most up-to-date and practical volume of the kind yet published, for the private library; for school and college classes as a source book; as an adjunct to the study of government and international relations; for the public speaker. This volume is also a contribution to the understanding of the character and action of the head of the nation in a great crisis.

"Fourteen Great Detective Stories," selected and with an introduction by Vincent Starrett. This anthology includes stories by Edgar Allan Poe, A. Conan Doyle, Richard Harging Davis, Arthur Morrison, Ernest Bramah and others.

There are 14 stories in all—some of them appearing in an anthology for the first time, all of them notable examples of a type of fiction whose popularity seems to know no bounds.

It is difficult to find more exhilarating mental recreation than in a masterful detective story.

In this volume, you have some of the best. In the midst of mental relaxation you are given an insight into the seamy side of human nature.

EVERYDAY QUESTIONS

BY DR. S. PARKES CADMAN

Lincoln, Neb.

I am an old-fashioned sort of man, but I do not get much encouragement from my family. "Dad is behind the times," is the remark I am accustomed to hear. I don't want to be out of touch but I can't surrender my convictions. What would you suggest? Don't interfere with convictions except to correct and inform them; then express them. Unlike mere opinions, they must have priority or you will count for nothing in or out of your family. You do not state what yours are, but I presume they lean to parental and moral authority as against individual preference. If so, in the main you are right.

Authority is as essential to life's maintenance as air and light are for its physical forms. It is based on the observation of life itself and not on dogmatic reasonings. A certain continuity of experience runs throughout the human story.

Moral moronics may rave against this universal order and the vicious imagine vain things about it. But you can be sure that what has always operated is still in operation, and that whatever has worked once may work again. These are the conclusions on which men rest the religious, social and political institutions that preserve the race from disintegration. Anything which contradicts them is futile and occasionally ferocious.

So stick to old-fashioned ways attested by experience, but give them another name. Fashions have nothing to do with life's fundamentals. They belong to millinery establishments or to the intellectual vanities and insolence of the hour. The lasting principles challenged by society's evanescent moods survive criticism and rebellion, pursue a changeless course inevitable as that of the stars, and obey the purposes of the Higher Power which has ordained wisdom's ultimate survival and folly's ultimate extinction.

I have a cousin, who after the death of her husband twelve years ago, formed an unmarried connection with a man who was several years her junior. In a recent letter she invited me to visit her, and on my refusal to do so she accused me of "unrighteous judgment." How shall I handle the situation? Please omit my address.

You letter suggests a fear of moral contagion should you accede to your cousin's request. Her retort shows an uneasy conscience which attributes to others the "unrighteous judgment" of which she herself is guilty. My first impulse is to advise you to go to her and do whatever you can to legalize the illicit union in which she is involved.

Unless there are other reasons than those you state, why not compromise between a prolonged stay and a hurried call? Spend enough time upon her case to discharge your duty in it. Show her in a friendly and human way that she exposes herself to just criticism. Plead for her conformity to the social regulations which self-respecting men and women observe for obvious reasons. Endeavor to effect the marriage of the couple at the earliest possible moment, then help her, as the old folks were wont to say, to make "an honest woman" of herself.

Faith in God's Allness Absolute Demand Of Christian Science

Editor Constitution: In your issue of July 29, Rev. W. P. King, in his column, "Things New and Old About the Bible," again attacked Christian Science, referring to it as "Antichrist," and a "demon-possessed cult." In so doing our reverend friend manifested either a startling ignorance of Christian Science, or an intense bias. Therefore, that your readers may be rightly informed I offer this brief correction.

Confronted by a religion that has reinstated primitive Christian healing—and which today through solely spiritual means is again meeting humanity's needs, in destroying sickness, sorrow, sin and limitation of all sorts—stalled theology scorns Christian Science, and, branding it "Anti-christ;" would rule it out of the temple.

Nevertheless, Christian Science, steadily growing regardless of such criticisms, neither denies nor opposes Christ. Conversely, its world-wide spiritual healing and regenerating effects are produced only as its adherents manifest the mind of Christ. Christian Science demands an absolute faith in God's allness; therefore, those who would continue to benefit by its spiritual teachings must understand to some extent the immutable and universal law of mind, God, eternal good: and man's oneness and sonship with the Father, which the teachings of this religion clearly and simply set forth. The universality and availability of this law was fully demonstrated by Christ Jesus in raising the dead, feeding the multitude, stilling the tempest and healing all manner of sickness.

It is a proud Pharisaical self-righteousness, such as charged Jesus with having "a devil" that again incites crtics to pronounce Chritian Science "a devil possessed cult." Such an epethet is as unwarranted as it is unkind; it no more defines the nature of Christian Science than it defines the nature of Jesus' teachings. Referring in "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" to such opposition to truth, Mary Baker Eddy writes on page 342: "He that decries this science does if presumptuously in the face of Bible history and in defiance of the direct command of Jesus 'Go ye into all the world, and preach the gospel,' to which command was added the promise that His students should cast out evil and heal sick."

All religions and all religionists, including those claiming to be progressive, must measure to the standard set by our common Master, Christ Jesus: "By their fruits He shall know them." Following this logical reasoning, the Apostle James wrote: "Thou hast faith, and I have work: show me thy faith without thy work, and I will show thee my faith by my works." (2:18.)

Youth's Yearning

(A SONG OF OLD SCHOOL DAYS.)

The new gang likes the latest
In fads at school, by heck;
But give me that old fashioned boy
That stood "on the burnin' deck!"
In tight brown jeans and calico shirt,
With never a dream of fame,
From the little red schoolhouse by the road
These learned statesmen came.

Ah, then we had little modest girls,
That charmed with "Auld Lang Syne,"
And made those sooty rafters ring
With "Bingen on the Rhine,"
The Friday evening exercise
Heaved many a woeful sigh
When they lived again that "Felon Cell"
And "Stay there 'till I die."

Ah then, little Mary wasn't ashamed
To bring her lamb to school,
And she didn't bob her sacred curls
Nor break the honored rule
By playing truant for dancing balls
And dates at the picture show;
In fact wherever "Mary went,"
Her mother "would surely go."

Those were the days and old boys now
Look back with wishful gaze,
When fellows learned their A B C's
The rugged old hickory ways:
They call us great, we've money to spare,
But, ah, this miserable wreck
Would give the world for little bare feet
And a stand "on the burnin' deck!"

—THOMAS JEFFERSON FLANNAGAN.

At the Smaller Theaters

In the New York Theaters

BY PERCY HAMMOND

New York, August 4.—A problem in conduct confronts the local drama lovers. Shall we welcome or repulse Earl Carroll when he returns to Broadway Monday night and asks to be readmitted to the circles of the virtuous? It will be remembered that Mr. Carroll broke a law not long ago and was sent to the penitentiary. His slip from rectitude was in the form of a falsehood told in defense of a woman's good figure; and a shocked community straightway expressed its horror by riding him out of town upon a rail. Mr. Carroll's fiction was flagrant in the eye of a truth-telling people, whose, vengeance was speedy and severe. To make his perjuring doubly heinous he lied awkwardly, an inexcusable sin.

Now, after a period of expiation in Atlanta, Ga., Mr. Carroll is at the city gate—suggesting that he be restored to the drama. Beneath the white sheet of contrition he wears the gay taffetas of "The Vanities," the institution that misdirected him into his recent wrongdoing. "Let me in," he pleads, "for I promise never to tell another story." His petition is augumented by prayers from W. C. Fields, the sententious comedian, and from a kneeling band of composers, dancers, librettists and beauties. What shall a neighboring of ardent law-abiders do in the circumstance? Bid the culprit return to his ball and chain or welcome him back to probity, in the hope that our example and companionship will encourage him not to err again?

I propose that we postpone our decision until Monday night. Let us permit Mr. Carroll to enter, with the understanding that if his "Vanities" is not entertaining he shall be sent to jail for the third and last time. In case it proves to be amusing, it might be well to allow him to stay for a while upon probation. Our orders should not be too stringent. We should say to him in the words of the Poughkeepsie reformer in the ancient "Belle of New York,"

"Of course, you can never be like us, But be as like us as you're able to be."

Ring Lardner, whose baseball tragedy, "Elmer the Great," I ballyhooed last week with all the fervor of one who has not seen it, acknowledges my shifty compliments as if they were meant to be sincere. He summers near by me in East Hampton, Long Island, and, being of the naive or trustful type, he has faith in his neighbors and the newspapers. In Boston and Chicago the critics were honest in their approval. My object, however, in prematurely flattering "Elmer the Great" (if you will pardon these suburban intimacies) was to gain access to Mr. Lardner's private bathing beach which he shares with Irvin Cobb, the Belle Syndicate, Grantland Rice, the U. S. coast guard, J. Hartley Manners and the East Hampton village improvement coterie. It would be cruel to print Mr. Lardner's innocent communication, and therefore I shall keep it secret, as follows:

Dear Mr. Hammond: Your mash note in last week's paper simply slayed me with gratification, reviving as it did my lost faith in East Hampton, where (the realtors told me) Art is appreciated and the artist known and admired. I moved here two months ago with my family and one-half dozen brusque police dogs trained to discourage the more raffish of my worshipers from carrying away sections of the bookcase or bits of plumbing as souvenirs of their visit to the home of genius. To date our only callers have been our quaint southern neighbors on the left, a family named Grantland Rice (probably an abbreviation of Reisenstein), who come over every day or so to borrow a medicine dropper in which to shake up cocketails, and until I read your passionate paragraphs but two denizens of the place had given the slightest inkling that they were aware of my identity and accomplishments.

Both of these were ladies. One of them sat next to me a dinner and remarked, "I'm afraid I won't understand half you say, Mr. Lardner, because I suppose you talk nothing but slang." The other, my hostess at the time, expressed a desire to shoot craps with me. "I want to hear," she said, "some more of those funny negro phrases like you use in your stories." I was beginning to class the town with Charleston, S. C., where a young reporter asked me last winter when I was going to write another "Houseboat on the Styx."

But you, Mr. Hammond, have apparently read my stuff or you wouldn't gush so over it, and no doubt you have told or are telling some of your East Hampton friends about me, so that I may soon expect something besides dumb looks and vague mumblings of "Glad to meet you, Mr. Lauder (or Larned) when I am introduced.

Our play (Mr. Cohan's and mine) is coming into New York about the first of next month. Its first name was "Fast Company," but we are now calling it "Elmer the Great," in the hope that ministers will think it is Elmer Gantry. I finished writing it just a year ago today and Mr. Cohan finished tearing it up late last March. I attended the first rehearsal in April and though I had been poured into the wrong theater. There was nothing of the original left but the name of the leading character, and I might state at this point that Walter Huston plays that character in a way that will make even you look up a few new adverbs.

Fortunately Mr. Cohan was too busy to be at all the rehearsals, and during his absence I slipped four of my own lines back into the script. I am going to make New York an offer similar to the one I made Chicago where "Elmer" has been running since the middle of June. To the first man or woman correctly guessing which four lines are mine I will present a devot from Tom Heeney's nose. In Chicago the prize was a bottle of bath salts, and was won by Al Capone.

Mr. Hammond, in return for your beautiful tribute to me and my gifts I take pleasure in promising you two tickets to "Elmer's" New York premiere, and I want you to bring the Perfect Wife with you. I only regret that your seats will be in the balcony, but the entire lower floor is reserved for Mr. Cohan's children and mine.

RING LARDNER.

All-Talking Picture Held Over at Rialto

A page was added to local motion picture history last week when "Lights of New York," the first all-talking picture, was flashed on the screen of the Rialto theater.

And another page is slated to be added, since popular demand has resulted in announcement from Manager W. T. Murray that the sensational picture would be held over for this week, with the accompanying Vitaphone vaudeville bill.

Of course, it was only a matter of time before a picture in which the story would be made clear by the voices of the characters on the screen would make its appearance and now that it is here one must admit that if it had nothing else to commend it except its sheer novelty this in itself would be sufficient to win great success for it.

Before going further into this, however, it must be said that "Lights of New York" has a great deal to commend it outside of its unusual treatment. Its producers in setting out to film an all-talking picture could hardly have selected a better vehicle. As it stands it is one of the most unique and diversified entertainments that has been offered on stage or screen and as such it is to be judged. It contains something of everything and it moves with a speed that is astonishing. It teems with youth.

To adequately present such a picture an unusual cast was necessary and this it has. Helene Costello, as the country girl working in the chorus of the night club, gives an extremely good performance. It is a role that calls for versatility as well as a variety of emotions, all of which she handles with a sense of art. Cullen Landis is the youngster from the small town, and Mary Carr has the role of his mother. Eugene Pallette contributes a good bit of acting and so does Wheeler Oakman, as the dissolute owner of a night club. All of the roles in the picture are skillfully played.

The story of "Lights of New York" was written by Hugh Herbert and Murray Roth and was directed for Warner Bros. by Bryan Foy. It is destined on account of its novelty and its acting to talk itself into favor wherever pictures are popular, and this means everywhere.

The present demand for beef is chiefly for a few choice cuts from about 18 per cent of the beef carcass, but the goal of government specialists is to produce animals in which every cut will be tender.

GARBO IN A NEW ROLE IN CURRENT LOEW FILM

"The Mysterious Lady," with Greta Garbo, will be the feature picture attraction this week at Loew's Grand theater. Miss Garbo plays the part of a Russian spy in a picture that is said to be sinister, daring, thrilling to the very last moment and one which stirs the interest at all times.

Gowns like none she has ever worn before, were designed for Greta Garbo to be used in her latest Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer starring feature, "The Mysterious Lady."

The "Garbo collar" is seen on one gown. It is only a half collar effect of silver lace embroidery, applied to a green satin-crepe draped evening gown. The collar stands upwards only on the right side and is a part of the trimming on the bodice.

Instead of figure fitting dresses like she has worn heretofore, drapes and panels take their place in Miss Garbo's new wardrobe to create classic, statuesque lines.

In the new picture which Fred Niblo directed, Miss Garbo plays the part of an exotic Russian spy who falls in love with an enemy officer whose downfall she had plotted. Conrad Nagel is seen in the opposite role.

The adventures of these two move to a climax after the man discovers the woman is a spy and repudiates his love for her. In revenge she brings about his dishonarble discharge from the army. He is sentenced to a long prison term but escapes and follows the woman whom he hates as he once loved, to her home in Russia. There, after tragedy, comes understanding.

Because the United States has a growing number of cities with populations greater than some entire states, it has been predicted that eventually such metropolises will have to become independent city states if they are to have efficient government.

Movietone Is Installed At Loew's

Loew's Grand theater this week will launch its series of Movietone programs to be presented by the perfect Movietone, the latest type of machine to be manufactured. The Loew program will contain many novelties which will be offered here for the first time.

Work of installing the latest perfected Movietone began several weeks ago and exhaustive tests have been made during the week.

The Movietone features will be offered in addition to the regular Loew program of vaudeville and feature pictures.

"Street Angel" Fox Movietone Film at Howard

The first of the Howard's "Blue Ribbon" season of pictures in sound will be presented at that theater this week. It is "Street Angel," a William Fox Movietone production completely sychronized with a musical score played by the Roxy theater orchestra of 105 pieces. This picture is the first Movietone feature to play Atlanta. Starred in it are Janet Gaynor and Charles Farrell, the same two brilliant stars who scored such a tremendous hit in the never-to-be-forgotten "Seventh Heaven."

Advance reports are that "Street Angel" is one of the really outstanding productions of the year, and critics have acclaimed it better than "Seventh Heaven." "Street Angel," is the same production that played the Globe theater in New York for 11 weeks at $2.00 a seat, and later, broke all box office records of the great Roxy theater in New York.

Frank Borzage, who also produced "Seventh Heaven" featuring the same stars, is said once more to have proven himself one of the screen's leading directors. Under his direction Miss Gaynor and Mr. Farrell rise to new heights and their performance in "Street Angel" takes place with the best acting achievements of the year, it is said.

A love theme was especially written for "Street Angel" entitled "Angela Mia" (My Angel). It is heard all through the picture.

Julia Dawn, the Howard's "golden voiced organist," whose selections at the Wurlitzer have proven so popular, will offer another delightful treat.

Lillian Morton, Delightful Comedienne, Tops at Grand

:: LOCAL FAVORITE RETURNS CURRENTLY ::

BY ELMO HAMBY.

Perhaps the most delightful personality that an Atlanta stage has ever entertained, Lillian Morton, beyond whom in the realm of stage comediennes and singers there is no whomer, will return to the city this week, heading a vaudeville bill at Loew's Grand theater.

On a previous appearance here, Miss Morton captivated her audiences with a personality that was as new and different as it could possibly be from the ordinary stereotyped comedienne's style, and her appearance here this week is scheduled to elicit even more uproarious approval than before.

Personally, no other act of this nature has held even half as much entertainment nor real enjoyment, and concurring in this sentiment were other local reviewers on Miss Morton's previous visit.

A singing comedienne, Miss Morton subtly portrays a number of characters in song in a manner so skilful that these persons are set out on the stage in full verisimilitude despite the fact that the talented songstress uses not a bit of character makeup.

Also combined in the many talents of the popular singer is the ability to make the ordinary "hot" blues, or "personality singer" look like the veriest dub at the game. In fact, there is little in the way of vocal symnastics, from grand opera, to blues, that Miss Morton fails to achieve in the greatest degree.

Her initial appearance here brought forth from your reviewer a remark that talent such as this was the biggest of Broadway big time and the still stands for that opinion wholeheartedly.

A theatrical audience such as Atlanta's, knowing Broadway just as well as Peachtree, can't be wrong.

Welcome back, Miss Morton!

Clara Bow Seen As 'Bad' Apache In Met Picture

Much has been written of the girls and women who have loved not wisely, but too well, and Clara Bow appears at the Metropolitan this week in the story of a girl who loved wisely, but still too well. She appears as a member of an Apache gang in Paris, and in love with one of the ringleaders, a comparative newcomer who has become a leader because of his daring. In the midst of a "job" her man is captured. The man who captured him is an old friend and instead of turning him over to the authorities, gives him a new start, but takes him away from the girl.

Her man gone, the love of the girl turnes to hate, and she swears revenge on the man responsible; and gets it, but there is a bitterness to the sweets of revenge, and it gives the picture a climax.

The role is said to be particularly suited to the type of work that Miss Bow does, and she is said to make the most of her opportunity.

The story was inspired by the writings of a famous writer of hundreds of years ago, who said "there is but one kind of love, but there are a thousand different copies," and this picture is the story of two kinds of love, one sacrificing and the other devastating.

Lou Tellegen, famous screen and stage star, has an important role in the picture, and so has Donald Keith, another prominent screen player.

The chief causes of deafness among children not born deaf are scarlet fever, measles, meningitis, falls and blows, and whooping cough.

Mystery Comedy Is Current Bill On Keith Screen

As one of the features of the "Blue Ribbon" show headed by Lasses White and company, the Georgia presents for the week's film fare starting tomorrow a mystery thriller running to comedy called "A Thief in the Dark."

"A Thief in the Dark" is said to let all bars down and to allow to troop into the picture every possible laugh, thrill and mystery angle imaginable, not to mention a slice of carnival life and a little romance on the side.

The action of the picture mingles the sawdust atmosphere of a wagon show with the settings in and around a pretentious mansion house of mystery.

The plot depicts efforts of a gang of side-show crooks to rob a wealthy jewel-collector and his attractive granddaughter. The crooks fail in this, but the leader kills the old man.

In an effort to bring the murderers to justice, the girl visits the side-show and persuades the crooks to "materialize" her grandfather's spirit so that he may identify the slayer.

The seance is held in the girl's home during an electrical storm, while a country sheriff, superstitious colored butler and a comedy girl servant are being frightened at every turn by "apparitions" which employ sliding panels and secret passageways.

The picture is a farce and as such serves as a laughmaker fitting quite admirably with the comedy angles of the vaudeville show, the management says.

AL MOREY PRESENTS PUBLIX 'DANCING FEET'

Al Morey's part of the first of the blue ribbon shows to be presented at the Howard will be the Publix stage hit "Dancing Feet." This is Al's second week at the Howard, and he promises a show that is said to be even better than his first. His performance last week has assured him of a long stay at the Howard. With his boyish personality and his ability as a capable musician, Atlantans are sure to like him.

The featured star this week again is a comedian. His name is Harry Rose and his billing is "The Broadway Jester." He was formerly principal mirth provoker of George White's "Scandals." His ready wit has entertained New York for many years. His appearance at the Howard should do much to pack the big Publix house again this week.

Harry Vale and Willie Stewart, two steppers, will make their second appearance at the Howard. Their last appearance here should be remembered as the boys are very clever, and offer something new in dance steps.

The "It" girls of songland was the manner in which Martha Vaughn, golden-haired singer, was described by Elinor Glyn, whose fertile mind coined the now famous two-letter word, after the well known writer heard Miss Vaughn sing recently. Miss Vaughn will be another feature of the program.

A well trained ensemble of Publix dancers will also be seen.

"The Golden Voiced" organist, one of the most popular features at the Howard in the person of Julia Dawn, will offer a novelty at the Howard organ.

WAR PICTURE FEATURE ON CAPITOL SCREEN

It is an accepted fact that public taste in motion pictures runs in cycles. Immediately after the world war battle scenes were unpopular and stories of the conflict drugged the market. Now there is a widespread demand for war pictures and foremost among the producers is William Fox, who is responsible for giving the screen "What Price Glory?" Now, Fox is bringing back to the screen John Gilbert in "Honor First," with Renee Adoree in the principal feminine role.

The story of France during the momentous days of 1914 comes to the Capitol theater for one week starting Monday. Gilbert is cast in a dual role, playing the characterizations of twin brothers caught in the vortex of Paris during the early days of the war. While they bore a striking resemblance to one another in the flesh, these brothers were totally unlike in character.

Their identities become tangled and the plot works into a situation of love, adventure and intrigue, with Renee Adoree, heroine of notable screen triumphs, appearing as the Parisian girl who is sought by both men.

Critics who have viewed this picture assert that it gives John Gilbert one of the finest opportunities of his career and that he has seized it with the characteristic force that has ranked him among the foremost players on the screen.

As a stage feature the Capitol will offer "Getting Gertie's Garter."

Cameo.

John Gilbert in "Cameo Kirby." Norma Shearer in "The Latest From Paris," Marie Prevost in "On to Reno" and the John Fox story "The Trail of the Lonesome Pine" make up the Cameo program for this week.

"Cameo Kirby," which opens Monday for a two-day run, is a reissued John Gilbert feature, which deals of the romantic drama of the Mississippi steamboat days.

The story of "The Latest From Paris," which plays Wednesday and Thursday, is unique. Miss Shearer represents a New York firm of clothiers, and travels on the same trains with other drummers.

"On to Reno," which runs Friday only, is a witty attack on the wholesale freedom factory at Reno.

"The Trail of the Lonesome Pine," for Saturday's showing, is taken from the famous John Fox novel.

Psychology Lecture.

Before the CURTAIN

By ELMO HAMBY

Movietone Installed At Loew's Grand.

With the installation for current Monday opening of Movietone at Loew's Grand, there remain now but two principal Atlanta theaters without sound devices, a situation which should indicate to even the least alert mind that these folks aren't spending money simply on a passing fad.

Movietone news, as other Movietone products, all produced by William K. Fox, is the most practical and the most sure-to-last of all methods of sound and shadow devices, and the Grand will present this feature each week in addition to its regular programs as heretofore arranged, it is announced.

While the program of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, producers of the majority of films shown at Loew's, does not now include any near-completed sound pictures, it is eminently probable that sound features will make their debut at this vaudeville house in the near future.

And with the advent of sound pictures, and a continuation of the vaudeville policy, every known form of amusement, practically, will be presented by Loew's Grand. At least, every form of theatrical amusement and entertainment which is made feasible by popular favor.

Installation at the Grand is said by engineers to be particularly good. Much of the success of any sound device depends on the way in which the theater is constructed, to bring out the tonal qualities in voice and singing, making a perfect or nearly perfect installation.

Lillian Morton Returnss to Grand.

Offering itself as the only slight blemish on the face of a perfectly delightful prospective vacation for your contributor currently, is the fact that I won't be able again to enjoy the marvelous vaudeville presentation of Lillian Morton, who returns this week to Loew's Grand theater.

Previously, Miss Morton on her initial appearance in Atlanta supplied audiences with an act that for your reviewer was a delectable oasis in the midst of a season of unusually bad variety turns, and I think that the majority of audiences must have thought much the same way.

Tiny Miss Morton, billed as the "pocket edition comedienne"—that chap that originated that was a real press agent—is a singer of a style completely her own, and her offering is quite as big-time as they ever get.

First All-Talkie Continues at Rialto.

Safely started on the road to busting something or other in the way of records, "Lights of New York," the first "100 per cent all-talking motion picture," will enter its second Atlanta week Monday at the Rialto theater, where Manager W. T. Murray last week enjoyed record business with the film.

There's something about these talkies that's seeping into the movie audiences, for no talking picture yet, excepting none, has had a story that was worth calling to mind again, and yet the spectacle of "see and hear" has broken records established by the silent drama.

Greta Garbo Seen in New Loew Film.

The alluring whiteness of the queen of all movie sirens, Greta Garbo, again will be seen this week at Loew's Grand, in a new picture, "The Mysterious Lady," reputed to be quite good, and certain to be absolutely marvelous to Garbo fans, regardless.

The siren is seen in the role of an exotic Russian spy, who makes the mistake of falling in love with the head man of the enemy's forces, which she is detailed to observe and report operations.

The chief, at length, discovers that she is a spy, and in disgust sends her from him. Angered, she causes him to be sentenced to a long prison term. He escapes, follows her to her mountain retreat, and there reconciliation follows, as it should.

Happily ended, what?

Whoopee!—For Myself and Readers, Too.

That'll be about all, now, I reckon, for a coupla weeks!

On the STAGE

General fire alarms and all that may be the rule in Atlanta this week, for the—to say the very least—wildly alluring young woman on the left, Martha Vaughan, is to be featured on the Howard theater stage this week with Al Morey, new band leader. The ensemble is from the Eviston-Napier company at the Capitol theater. Top, right, is Walter McNally, to be featured all week at Keith's Georgia. Hugh Herbert, in "The Prediction," is being held over at the Rialto theater with "Lights of New York," the first all-talking picture. The Dalen and Banger revue is a feature at Loew's Grand theater.

Lillian Morton Tops New Bill At Loew's Grand

The best amusement fields in New York were culled for the new vaudeville bill to be offered this week at Loew's Grand theater, with Lillian Morton, the dainty little comedienne of several big Broadway productions, as the headline attraction. Miss Morton is known as "the pocket edition comedienne" and she is full of fire and pep. She does a breezy comedy turn, which is similar in many respects to the work she did with the big Broadway shows and on top of this she brings with her a dozen or more of her own original song hits. She is one of the most finished singers of comedy songs in the show business and her appearance here on the new Loew bill is one of the most notable events of the summer theatrical season in Atlanta.

Ted Dolan and Art Bonger will appear with their singing and dancing revue. Here is another act that comes direct to Atlanta from recent Broadway engagements. This act is offered by four men and three girls and is said to be particularly strong as a dancing show.

Raymond Wilbert, the comedy golf genius, will bring his act to Atlanta. He is an expert with the golf clubs and knows all the trick shots and in addition is said to be a clever comedian. He keeps up a running fire of comedy as he does the most difficult tricks with his golf clubs.

Jack and Rita LaPearl are about as staple as flour in a grocery store. They have been coming here regularly every year and always bring something new and pleasing in the comedy line. Both are singers and include some new songs in their turn.

Sergeant Franklin, sharpshooter, will appear in a novelty act with Ruby Royce. The act is entitled "Trifles With Rifles," and feats in marksmanship are performed.

GOOD PICTURE BILL PROMISED PATRONS OF PONCE DE LEON

An excellent and well-balanced program of screen entertainment this week is provided for its patrons by the management of the Ponce de Leon theater, popular community playhouse at Ponce de Leon avenue and Boulevard. The regular "amateur night" program, featuring a splendid variety of local talent, is billed for Tuesday.

The week opens auspiciously with "Everybody's Acting," a Paramount picture, offering the popular combination of Ford Sterling and Betty Bronson in the stellar roles. In addition to the amateur stage program, "The Mad Hour," a First National feature, starring Sally O'Neil and reported to be an excellent source of amusement, is booked for Tuesday's appearance on the screen.

"The Four Flushers," a Universal picture of considerably reputation, that presents the "collegian" cast, is the Wednesday attraction at the Ponce de Leon. The week's double bill brings to the Ponce de Leon's screen "Rose of the Golden West," a splendid picture that presents Gilbert Roland and Mary Astor in the leading roles.

Saturday's screen offering is the ever popular Bebe Daniels in "Feel My Pulse."

Fairfax.

The Fairfax theater opens up the week with Richard Dix in "Sporting Goods" on Monday. It is a great farce with Dix as his best as a traveling salesman selling trick golf suits which he claims if a golfer wears one while playing an opponent he will never lose.

Tuesday Warner Baxter and Margaret Livingston will be seen in a great picture, "A Woman's Way." As extra attractions are little Noreen Anderson in her "Back Seat Driver" act, also Pat Third, the well known blues singer. Jack Holt in "Heritage of the Desert," a Zane Grey novel, will be the screen's feature attraction for Wednesday.

Emil Jannings, called the world's greatest actor, will be seen Thursday and Friday in "The Street of Sin," which carries you to the Limehouse district in London. Saturday Hoot Gibson will be seen in "Riding for Fame."

Tudor.

Heading the Tudor theater's list of pictures for the week will be "Dugan of the Dugouts," a drama of the world war packed with humor and fun. On Wednesday and Thursday, Fred Humes will thrill you in "The Arizone Cyclone." On Friday and Saturday, Ken Maynard will again show you that he is the screen's greatest rider, in "Grey Vultures."

"Dugan of the Dugouts" will open Monday for a two-day run. Wednesday and Thursday Fred Humes will take you out into the west in a manner you will like, in "The Arizona Cyclone." Humes would rather fight than eat and he didn't care how big they were, but when they tried to rob him his flying fists went into action and when he stopped for breath Arizona looked like no man's land during the world war.

Friday and Saturday the king of western stars in another hit, "The Grey Vultures," and that star is Ken Maynard. Maynard has built up a reputation as the screen's foremost rider and western star and in this one he certainly proves that he is good.

Empire.

Back to Atlanta for the first time since its sensational run of a few weeks ago, the greatest of all underworld thrillers, "Chicago After Midnight," with Ralph Ince and an all-star cast, will open the week's program of screen attractions at the Empire theater. Richard Barthelmess in "The Noose," is to be Tuesday's traction.

On Wednesday, George Bancroft in "The Show Down" will be shown. Alluring, intriguing, romantic Paris with its Latin quarter, opera, boulevard cafes will be literally transferred to the stage of the new Empire Thursday when "A Woman's Way" will be shown. Friday's double program is to be "A Gentleman of Paris" on the screen, and at 8 o'clock in the evening another large "Amateur Nite" contest, with Manager Alpha Fowler again in the role as "master of ceremonies," will be staged.

"Man of the Forest" will bring the week's entertainment to a close on Saturday.

Famous 'Lasses' White Toplines New Keith Bill

The new show opening Monday at Keith's Georgia has a hard spot to fill, following the show which closed Saturday, but the Georgia management insists in all sincerity that the "Blue Ribbon" show opening tomorrow with "Lasses" White at its head is miles ahead of it.

As a matter of fact the list of attractions does look unusually promising and much is to be expected of not only Lasses White, the minstrel, but of Harry Conley and Company the stage and screen comedian in "Slick as Ever" and Walter McNally, Ireland's baritone in a song cycle.

This trio of headliners should prove sufficient, but there are also two other acts and the feature picture, "A Thief in the Dark" on the program.

Lasses White, who recently headed his own minstrel show, has forsaken the big troupe for vaudeville and is said to have cut his company down to his star members, retaining the "meat 'of his material. They present in vaudeville the blackface skit called "The Blackville National Guards" in which Lasses is the new recruit who has a terrible time learning the steps or respects for his officer.

Further comedy comes from Harry J. Conley as the slick, wise-cracker whose material was written by the "ace" of vaudeville authors, Millard Mack.

Walter McNally, the rich-voiced baritone, will probably provide the only serious note on the program with his song cycle in which he is assisted by Marie Fleming. The other acts on the bill are LaSalle & Mack; "Static Nuts," and Ed and May Ernie, novelty dancers. The feature picture, "A Thief in the Dark," and a new issue of Pathe News complete the program.

BABY HEALTH CENTERS ANNOUNCED FOR WEEK

The Baby Health centers for next week were announced Saturday by Dr. J. P. Kennedy, city health officer, as follows: Tuesday, August 7, Adair school; Wednesday, August 8, Fair Street school; Thursday, August 9, Forrest Avenue school; Friday, August 10, J. L. Key school.

Mothers are invited to bring infants and children up to four years of age. All centers open promptly at 1:30 p. m.

AL H. WOODS COMEDY IS CAPITOL FEATURE

Another Al H. Wood's production, "Getting Gertie's Garter," will be the stage offering at the Capitol theater this week when the Eviston-Napier organization will appear in roles that should give each member of the company an opportunity to do their very best.

Staged under the personal direction of Faye Hammond, who also will play one of the leading roles, "Getting Gertie's Garter," should have an auspicious presentation, as the Eviston-Napier company has presented this offering on more than one occasion, and it is said that Mr. Hammond has played the leading masculine role at least a half dozen times.

According to the management, scenes of somewhat sensational proportions are flashed at intimate occasions during the presentation, and enticing musical selections and snappy dance numbers will be inserted to keep up the fast stepping pace of the original action, permitting the comedy situations to find its proper place for approval of the theatergoers.

The Ace High Four, consisting of Reynolds, Morley, Asbury and Hammond, will appear in musical selections, and again will vie for popular favor with their interesting quartet numbers. The orchestra under the personal direction of Howard Rossman, musical director of Eviston-Napier company, will be on hand to do its share to keep up the fast gait set by the players.

The screen feature is John Gilbert in "Honor First," with Renee Adoree in the leading feminine role.

Alamo No. 2.

Lillian Gish appears in the most modern role of her entire career in "The Enemy," a Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer production which appears at the Alamo theater, No. 2, Monday only.

It is a lavish filmization of the famous Channing Pollock stage success, a mighty war drama dealing with the spiritual havoc wrought by the world conflict, rather than the physical damage. It presents the famous star in the role of the tragic "Pauli," a young Austrian bride who is torn from the arms of her husband on her wedding night and thrust into the boiling cauldron of devastating hatreds and brutality. Her husband was a pacifist; her dearest friend, an enemy alien. She saw her babe die of malnutrition; her father-in-law fatten on the ill-gotten gains of a war baron.

Miss Gish is ably supported in this struggle of a war-torn people by Ralph Forbes of "Beau Geste" fame, and others of note, including George Fawcett, Frank Currier, Polly Moran, Karl Dane, Fritzi Ridgway, John Peters and Billy Kent Schaeffer. Fred Niblo directed.

Camp Highland Changes Staff For This Month

Camp Highland, Y. W. C. A. summer camp for girls, begins the last month of its season Monday, August 6. Changes are made each month in the camp staff, the junior and senior assistants being chosen for a period of one month and other leaders changing from time to time. With the arrival of several new officials Monday, the camp will present an unusually strong group of directors for the last month. The August staff includes Miss Lucile Crabtree, director; Mrs. R. J. Bates, hostess; Miss Alice C. Moss, recreation director; Miss Martha Farrar, swimming director, Miss Louise LeBourveau, assistant swimming director; Miss Jabe Sheffield, pianist; Miss Julia Peacock, tea room postmistress.

The senior assistants will be Misses Margaret Coyne, Lucille Buchanan and Martha Skeen. Miss Jane Randall will be chief junior assistant and will have on her staff Misses Rachel Burnett, Sara Burnett, Laura Belle Hoey, Annie Gartrell, Hortense Brown, Louise Smith and Josephine Flournoy. With the exception of a few of the highest officials of the camp, all other leaders are volunteer workers who give their services because of their interest in the camp. Competition is always keen for the various positions on the staff and hundreds of applications are received each year, especially for the junior and senior assistant posts, which are filled by high school and college girls. For this reason the camp director is always able to choose competent assistants and the frequent changes are made with the purpose of giving as many as possible the opportunity of serving on the staff.

The new system of swimming instruction started this summer by Miss Martha Farrar, director, has proved most successful and will be continued for the rest of the season. Outstanding events of every week are written up for The Highland Sentinal, weekly paper issued by the girls of the camp. Miss Louise Parks is editor of the current issue of The Sentinal.

Miss Glasco Weds J. A. Butler, Jr.

An interesting event to a wide circle of friends is the marriage of Miss Catherine Alice Glasco to John Andrew Butler, Jr., which took place Thursday, July 26, in the new parsonage of the East End Methodist church in the presence of a small group of relatives and friends, the ceremony being performed by the pastor, Rev. M. M. Maxwell.

The bride was gowned in a model of peach georgette with accessories to match. Her flowers were bride's roses and valley lilies.

Mr. and Mrs. Butler are now at home at their home on South avenue.

Masterpieces In Silver

THE old masters of silversmithing are few in number and originals of their works are priceless.

It is fortunate that faithful reproductions of these classics in silver may be made.

In purchasing copies of old silver patterns, however, it is well to select from the Freeman collection, where designs are authentic and workmanship superior.

Miss Arnall Weds Frank Banks At Quiet Ceremony in New York

Of sincere interest to a wide circle of friends throughout the state was the marriage of Miss Bess Arnall to Frank Banks, which was solemnized Wednesday, August 1, in New York city in the presence of a few intimate friends and relatives.

The bride is the youngest daughter of Mrs. J. T. Arnall and the late Mr. Arnall, of Senoia, Ga. She is the sister of Mrs. S. T. Martin, of Griffin; Mrs. H. E. Aderholt, of Jeefferson, and J. F. Arnall, of Chicago, Ill.

Mrs. Banks is a graduate of the Senoia High school and Georgia State College for Women, Milledgeville, and for the past few years has made her home in Atlanta, where she has a host of friends who regret that her marriage takes her from this city to reside.

Mr. Banks is the son of Mr. and Mrs. B. L. Banks, of Senoia. He received his education at Georgia School of Technology and is now connected with the Great American Insurance company, of New York.

After August 15 Mr. and Mrs. Banks will be at home at 1700 East Fifteenth street, Brooklyn, N. Y.

Miss Young Weds William L. Ponder In Canton, Ga.

Canton, Ga., August 4.—A wedding of cordial interest was that of Miss Mabel Young and William Lester Ponder, which was solemnized Thursday, August 2, at 3:30 o'clock at the home of the bride's brother, Melvin Young, Dr. T. Baron Gibson, officiating in the presence of an assemblage of relatives and close friends.

Befor the bridal party entered Miss Willie Sue Bowers sang "The Day of Golden Promise," and R. B. Sims sang "Because," with Miss Ruth Groves as accompanist. To the strains of Mendelssohn's wedding march little Miss Elinor Reed, of Wake Forrest, N. C., and Valeria Rudasill entered, carrying ribbons and forming an aisle for the bridal party.

The maid of honor, Miss Mae Evans, of Atlanta, cousin of the bride, was gowned in blonde georgette with lace trimming and accordion pleated skirt. She wore a becoming small tan hat and carried pink rosebuds, showered with lavender sweet peas.

The bride entered with her brother, Melvin Young, by whom she was given in marriage, and was met at the altar by the bridegroom and S. Carl Dooley, who acted as best man.

The beauty of the bride was enhanced by her becoming gown, a smart fall model of tan flat crepe, fashioned on straight lines. Blue velvet applique design on the side of the waist and around the neckline and blue stitching made an attractive finish. With this she wore a blue velvet coat, forming a smart ensemble, and a felt hat. She carried pink rosebuds showered with valley lilies.

Miss Evelyn Young had charge of the bride's book. Immediately after the ceremony Mr. and Mrs. Ponder left on an automobile trip to Asheville and Hendersonville, and other points in North Carolina.

MRS. F. O. STONE REGETTA JUDGE AT LAKEMONT

Mr. Wing Given Surprise Party.

A surprise party in the form of a wedding shower to Maurice C. Wing, whose wedding to Miss Minnie Raymur Holland will be an event of August 18, was given at the home of Mr. and Mrs. M. H. Berry on Sophia place by the young ladies of the Cable Piano company Thursday evening.

The decorations throughout the house were vivid yellow and crimson garden flowers. At the conclusion of supper the "shower" presentation was given in the form of a bundle of laundry tied in the old-fashioned way in a colored table cloth brought in on the head of the family maid and consisted of gifts for the trousseau and traveling comforts. There were two special features of entertainment besides dancing. Miss Mary E. Speer carried the guests back to the past and into the mysteries of the future with her artistry in palmistry. A book under the title of "Wisdom to the Married Man" was made, each guest contributing a page of words of wisdom to the groom-to-be, written in acrostics according to the name of the author.

Those present were Maurice C. Wing, Mr. and Mrs. M. H. Berry, Madames Nina Hurst, Jean Harwell, Louise Wimbish, Eva Lou Bowen, W. B. Nichols, Misses Kate Atwell, Mary Young, Betty Hall, Helen Knox Spain, Marion Speer, Jessie Laukford, Mabel Bryant, Virginia Dodd and Mary E. Speer.

Board of Executive Directors Of Women Voters Meets Tuesday

The board of executive directors of the Atlanta League of Women Voters meets Tuesday at 10:30 o'clock at league headquarters. Besides the usual business, several interesting matters are scheduled to come before this meeting, including a discussion of the league's participation in registration reform in Atlanta and tentative plans for a business women's meeting. Mrs. Alfred Bailey, president, will preside.

During the summer months finance and membership are the two features of league work which are stressed. Mrs. Harvey Payne, chairman of membership, has undertaken the work of organizing delinquent members, and will be assisted by Mrs. Virginia Henderson. The entire list of Atlanta members who have failed to renew their memberships this year has been taken over by Mrs. Payne, and she will supervise telephone calls to these members. The membership goal for 1928 is 1,000, and already more than three-fourths of that number have been enrolled.

Finance work is making rapid strides toward the completion of the league budget, under the capable supervision of Mrs. Harry Lechter Greene, acting finance chairman. The Second Ward league is the first organization to complete more than its quota. Mrs. R. E. Rollins, finance chairman for that ward, announced at the finance meeting Thursday, July 2, that her ward had gone over its budget, and would attempt to help further with league finances. The Twelfth Ward league, as announced by Mrs. C. W. Butler, finance chairman for the twelfth ward, has already formulated plans which will complete the sum apportioned to her ward by the budget. The first ward was the first of the league ward organizations to complete its budget this year, and there is keen competition among the other organizations to raise their apportionments as soon as possible.

Those who have pledged money to the league for this year will please meet their pledges before the fall months set in, in order that those months may be given over to planning the work for next year, rather than completing this year's finance work.

Registration continues to be an important topic for study and discussion among league members. Headquarters offers to the membership booklets which carry a model registration law, and which will make profitable study for ward meetings during the coming months. All members are urged to familiarize themselves with this subject, which is of paramount interest to residents of the city of Atlanta at this time.

Mrs. J. P. Billups, chairman of the Eighth Ward league, announces that her organization will hold a rummage sale during the month of August for the benefit of the league and requests that all persons who can donate rummage call Walnut 8472 and notify headquarters.

Miss Woodall Weds Larry E. Smith.

Mr. and Mrs. S. G. Woodall announce the marriage of their daughter, Venola Dorothy, to Larry E. Smith, of Kinston, N. C., July 18, in the chapel of Christ's Episcopal church, the rector of the church officiating.

The bride is the third daughter of Mr. and Mrs. S. G. Woodall, formerly of LaGrange, and a musician of note. Through her charm and personality she has won many friends throughout Georgia and North Carolina. Mr. Smith is the son of Mr. and Mrs. J. S. Smith and a prominent business man of Kinston.

After a two weeks' stay in Moorehead, N. C., the bride and groom are at home in Kinston.

THE SYNONYM FOR ROYALTY

~ ERMINE ~

IN fact and fiction, in song and story, Ermine has ranked from time immemorial with the Queen's crown jewels, with velvet carpets and diadems, with purple hangings and princely gestures! Suggestive of royalty and romance, Ermine Coats today walk the fur-lined path of fashion with an air traditionally and peculiarly their own, bringing into a tailored, practically-clad world an aura of almost forgotten splendor—a luxury and a richness as old as Time and as new as the morning.

At Allen's—three versions of the Ermine wrap are selected for your choice—the beautiful model sketched being one that boasts a rich shawl collar of dyed white fox. The August Sale Price is $1148.

A Summer Ermine model boasts skins worked diagonally and a large self roll collar.

Another — select Ermine with pelts worked up and down, self Paquin collar, novelty cuffs.

GEORGIA PRODUCTS EXHIBIT MAKES HIT

That the display of Georgia-made products shipped by air mail to New York a few days ago by the Atlanta Chamber of Commerce is making a distinct hit at the Waldorf-Astoria hotel was indicated in telegrams received Saturday by B. S. Barker, executive vice-president of the Atlanta chamber. They were from Will P. Taylor, Jr., manager of the Waldorf-Astoria hotel, and John R. Young, of the Merchants Association of New York.

"The display makes a splendid showing and is attracting wide attention in the jade room of the hotel," telegraphed Mr. Young. "We have installed a sign above it reading: 'Georgia-Made Products, forwarded from Atlanta Chamber of Commerce by Air Mail,' and the exhibits are being examined with a great deal of interest by many visitors, who comment on Atlanta's enterprise.

"Photographs for publication in the New York papers were made today, with a group of visitors, including Robert Adamson, vice president of the Bank of Commerce; James O. Boone, president Georgia Society of New York; Thomas B. Randles, assistant postmaster; John R. Young, of the Merchants' association, and Will P. Taylor, maunger of the Waldorf-Astoria.

"The exhibits came through on schedule time by the air mail and everything was in excellent condition. We congratulate Atlanta on her enterprise."

The love of mother, mother love, and the joy of a happy home, embodying the essential charm of the Gainesborough school, are masterly depicted in the exquisite full-length portrait of Mrs. Robert F. Maddox, and her lovely little daughter, Miss Laura Baxter Maddox, painted by that distinguished artist, Charles F. Naegele, reproduced in today's gravure pictorial section of The Constitution. The portrait, six feet in length, is framed in gold, and hangs in the spacious drawing room at Woodhaven, the Maddox home on Pace's Ferry road, fitting into a perfect space on the wall opposite to the broad, massive stone mantlepiece. It is difficult to imagine a more sympathetic rendering of two such beautiful subjects, the clinging attitude of the little girl expressing love of parent, that greatest treasure in every home, while the enfolding pose of the mother shows the soothing joy of motherhood and mirrors the true melody of life.

The balanced arrangement, graceful and natural to a great degree, and the skillfully executed background with its trees and bit of blue sky, are parts of a perfect whole. The canvas admits of a near or distant viewing without losing the sense of mass and beauty. Mrs. Maddox wears an evening gown of cerulean blue chiffon, its filmy draperies veiling flesh pink satin, and her little golden-haired daughter is in pink chiffon. At the left of Mrs. Maddox lies a leghorn hat, banded in blue velvet and adorned with a cluster of pink roses, laid upon the railing of the terrace to correspond with the spray of pink roses arranged in careless-like fashion at the right of the childish figure. The background, so Gainesborough-like in its conception, strongly suggests the English garden at the left of the house, giving the effect that the two beautiful subjects strolled into their own picturesque garden at Woodhaven and spread a transparent shawl on the terrace before taking their seats.

Of the artist, Mr. Naegele, there is much that can be said of his remarkable talent in catching the likness and grace of his subjects. He gained national renown as a portrait painter long before coming to Georgia to open his studio, "Art Crest," near Marietta. Perhaps his most famous portrait is his "Divinity of Motherhood," hanging in the national art gallery in Washington, D. C., and its position is never changed from one year to another. He studied under Chase and Sartain in New York, going abroad afterward to visit the European art galleries. His work is masterful and smooth, and so light of touch that the brush marks are never visible to the eye. Other noteworthy qualities of his work are freshness, vitality and fascination, and he paints the texture of flesh with extraordinary subtelty.

According to Mr. Naegele, who easily belongs in the first flight of American portrait painters, "Portraiture becomes an important factor in that it not only depicts a facsimile of the natural body of man or woman, showing form, complexion and features as we see them, but in order to give the portrait distinction it must reflect the soul, essence or flame of the mental body—that which thinks, feels and makes decisions. When this is successfully accomplished in the portrait, it must be admitted that such a portrait is an important record to be passed on to future generations for historical purposes."

NOWADAYS it is quite the thing for society girls to turn "plane crazy" and take to the air from Candler field. There are two who have been taking aviation lessons for several weeks, keeping the matter a dark secret from their parents, who have not learned of their venturesome flights up-to-date. They have not dared to purchase special flying togs as yet, preferring to wear a mechanci's suit over their everyday costumes when they sail above the clouds twice weekly.

Lieutenant and Mrs. Johnny Gill flew from Birmingham, Ala., last week, via Atlanta, to pick up John Dean Turner, and the trio tooled to Augusta, where Mr. Turner married Miss Mary Wade, sister of Mrs. Gill, who, as Miss Sarah Wade, made her home in Atlanta. Mrs. Gill is as fine a pilot as her husband, and makes her flights in feminine togs, topped by a warm leather coat to protect her from the icy blasts of air.

THE HOME of John Jacob Raskob, campaign manager for the standard bearer of the democratic party, Governor Al Smith, built at Graymont, Del., is an exact reproduction of the Pan-American building at Washington, D. C., and thereby hangs an interesting story. It was while Mr. Raskob served as a dollar-a-year man during the world war that he and Mrs. Raskob lived in the national capital, and became so impressed with the beauty of the marble peace temple wherein representatives of all the Americas hold council. Then and there he obtained permission to duplicate the exterior of the building, and set architects and artists to work on the plan.

The interior of the two edifices differ widely, as the Graymont home was builded for the comfort of Mr. and Mrs. Raskob and their 11 children, the oldest of whom, Milliam Raskob, met an untimely death in a motor accident only a few months ago, being the first break in the devoted family circle. The third floor of the mansion is evenly divided between a well-equipped hospital and infirmary, where convalescents may be amused and nursed back to health.

A dense growth of pine, cedar and juniper trees grow in the forest surrounding the mansion. Just 30 years ago, Mr. Raskob took his first position, a five-dollar-a-week job as assistant stenographer in a Lockport, N. Y., store, a fact he often narrates to his children, from which he climbed to a prominent place among the capitalists of the United States.

The distinguished and aristocratic ancestry of Mrs. Raskob is a source of great pride to the great financier, who rose from poverty and obscurity. He recently had published for private circulation a handsome and profusely illustrated volume on the Green family of Maryland, which was particularly prominent in Cecil county. Mrs. Raskob was married in June, 1906, and was Miss Helena Springer Green. She is a lineal descendant of Governor Thomas Green, who was an associate of Leonard Calvert in the expedition of the Ark and Dove. He was the successor of the first governor of the province after Calvert's death and until communication had been held with Cecilius Calvert, second baron of Baltimore. Mrs. Raskob and her children may have a prominent part when Maryland, in 1934, celebrates the tercentenary of the landing of the Ark and Dove. Mr. Raskob has had those of his children as desire to make application go into patriotic societies, like the Sons of the Americans and the Daughters, the Colonial Dames, the Society of the Descendants of Colonial Governors and several others, the membership of which brings social and political prestige. Mrs. Raskob, having so large a family and being of a domestic turn, has not been interested in such associations, although she is on a committee of the descendants of Maryland's founders to aid the tercentenary. Left an orphan in her youth, this lady was reared by a maiden aunt, Miss Mary Cordley, in the old Green home in Chestertown, Md., and in order to give her niece better educational advantages Miss Cordley moved to Wilmington and entered her in the Ursuline convent, from which she was graduated. It was at the social affairs centered about the cathedral that Miss Helena Green met Mr. Raskob, private secretary to Pierre du Pont, drawing the princely salary of $100 annually. Mr. Raskob has spent thousands of dollars on the alma mater of his wife and recently purchased an immense tract of land for the Ursuline nuns and has built modern, up-to-date scholastic edifices in the prevailing group style. He plans to erect a handsome new cathedral on the old site of the Ursuline convent. All of his daughters of school age are pupils there, and as these nuns teach boys until their twelfth year, the sons also learned their alphabet from some of the same nuns who taught their mother.

ALONG with the exciting presidential campaign, holding the nation's keenest interest, Dan Cupid is busy conducting one of parallel importance so far as Atlanta belles and beaux are concerned. Both campaigns are scheduled to come to a thrilling climax in the fall, with the election returns and wedding bells vieing with one another. The first announcement marking the September prospects features a popular and charming girl who came to Atlanta several years ago from a neighboring Georgia town with her parents for residence. Although she has never made a formal debut, she has enjoyed extreme popularity and will be greatly missed by her countless friends when she goes to the capital city of South Carolina to begin her matrimonial career.

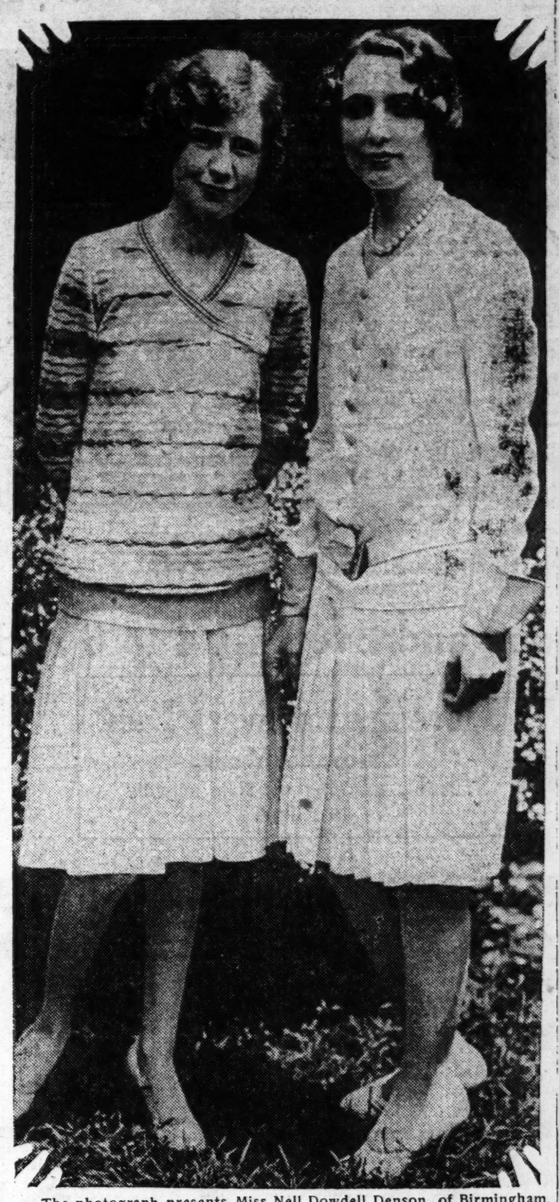

Even before September arrives, Atlantans will read of the marriage of a popular debutante of last season, which will follow the engagement announcement by only a few days.

Even before this only child was formally introduced to society by her adoring parents, she had become a favorite with both the older and younger set. Exclamations of joy will be forthcoming from her scores of admirers when it is made known that she will wed the Atlantan who was so constant in his attention during her long to be remembered debutante season.

RANKING as the best of the twenty-odd women players of golf on the Greenville Country club links in South Carolina, Mrs. John Milam, the former Aline Patterson, of Atlanta, plays with the lowest ladies' handicap and has to her credit a whole shelf of trophies. She is affectionately termed Greenville's "Queen of the Links" and is among the most popular of women, being considered a real sport. Her average drive is from 165 to 175 yards and nearly always it is straight and true, which is more than can be said of 90 per cent of male players whose average drive is from 250 to 275 yards, with fine approach and putting to her credit.

Mrs. Milam has won in her golf achievements practically all the trophies offered for women at the Greenville Country club, including the Knox cup, won in 1927 and 1928; the Poe cup, which she won several times; the Webb cup, which she won twice, and the winning of the women's championship cup once. Thrice she was in the first flight of the southern championship tournament, meaning that she was actually playing for the woman's championship of the south in the events at Birmingham, New Orleans and Charlotte, finishing well in the finals, but did not quite make the low score. Her five best scores on the course have averaged 92, which with her handicap gives her an average net of 72. Mrs. Milam is most encouraging to beginners and has done much to promote the interest of the game, ever ready to play with beginners, giving accurate advice in learning golf and teaching the players how to get the most pleasure out of the game.

Lovely Visitor and Charming Hostess

Barrett-Conner Marriage Is Of Wide Social Interest

A recent announcement of interest to friends in Georgia and Mississippi was that made by Mr. and Mrs. Edward Dixon Barrett of the marriage of their daughter, May Belle, to Dr. Cyrus Bernard Conner, the marriage having taken place April 12 at Opelika, Ala.

The bride is the elder daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Barrett and one of the most charming and popular members of the younger contingent. Being especially talented in music, she has taken a prominent part in the social and cultural life of the city.

After attending high school, she studied in private schools and at the Atlanta Conservatory for three years where she was a pupil of Charles Frye, violinist. She completed her education last year at Brenau college, Gainesville, where she majored in violin and voice and was affiliated with the Alpha Gamma Delta sorority.

The bride has one sister, Miss Martha Adair Barrett, a popular student at Gulf Park college, Gulf Park, Miss. On her maternal side, she is a descendent of the well-known Starke family of Georgia and a neice of R. Weldon Evans, popular real estate dealer, and of Dr. Henry G. Carter, prominent surgeon, both of this city.

On her paternal side, Mrs. Conner is a grand daughter of the late Martha Adair Barrett and Rev. J. L. R. Barrett, of Gainesville. She is also a grand neice of the late A. D. Adair, pioneer citizen and builder of Atlanta.

Dr. Conner graduated in June from the Atlanta Dental college. He is a prominent member of the Psi Omega fraternity. He is a cousin of Dr. Tom Conner, with whom he made his home prior to going to Chattanooga, where he is now connected with the office of Dr. J. L. Austin.

Dr. Conner is of the well-known Conner and Sneed families of Mississippi where they have long been identified with prominent interest of that state. He and his bride are at home at 503 Young avenue, Hampton Heights, Chattanooga, Tenn.

Miss Bohnette Weds Mr. Abel.

The marriage of Miss A. L. Bohnette, of 994 Lanier boulevard, N. E., and James P. Abel, of Cincinnati, Ohio, was solemnized July 30 at 4 p. m. by Rev. S. Lyons, at Ponce de Leon apartments. The young couple will be at home after a short honeymoon trip at 3334 Woodburn avenue, Cincinnati, Ohio.

TO MY FORMER PATRONS AND FRIENDS IN ATLANTA:

Personally I want to extend a special invitation to you to visit our big Furniture Emporium during our formal opening hours on next Monday afternoon and evening, 4 to 6 and 7:30 to 9:30.

As you doubtless know I have been engaged in the Furniture business for many years. I say to you candidly — honestly — that never before have I been able to show you such stylish—such superb—furniture as you will see on our floors now, as we re-enter the Furniture business in Atlanta.

For several months I have searched the furniture markets. I have looked diligently for the very latest—the newest—the prettiest patterns in furniture. I believed Atlanta wanted such furniture, and was entitled to it. I found what I was looking for, and this wonderful, beautiful display has been assembled here for you.

While you will find all of this high quality — new — furniture here, you will also find furniture of medium price—everything to furnish and fit practically any kind of home—a palace or an humble cottage.

And when you come here to buy, you can arrange your own terms—if you want terms.

Personally I am glad to be back in Atlanta, after a brief stay in Florida—glad to be back where I can serve so many loyal friends in this—the best city in the world.

Come to see us Monday.

American Furniture and Carpet Company Formally Opens Its Doors Monday Afternoon

Six Big Floors of Beautiful Furniture on Display, Corner N. Pryor and Auburn Ave.—Music and Souvenirs for Ladies.

New Home of the American Furniture and Carpet Company, Formerly occupied by this company some two years ago.

Atlanta's newest, and one of its largest, furniture houses—the American Furniture and Carpet company—will formally throw open its doors to the public Monday afternoon from 4 to 6 o'clock and again in the evening from 7:30 until 9:30 o'clock.

Souvenirs, flowers, music and all the other entertaining features that go to make a real attractive opening will be on the program both in the afternoon and evening.

The opening of this furniture concern brings back to Atlanta Colonel R. A. Gordon, president of the company, who has been temporarily residing in Jacksonville and other Florida cities for the past two years.

In former years Colonel Gordon and M. W. Reid, his associate, who is still connected with him, conducted a large furniture house in this city, and upon their re-entry into the furniture business here they secured the same location formerly occupied by them at the corner of North Pryor street and Auburn avenue.

Colonel Gordon, who has been in the city for the past month looking after the details of his new business here, has already received a cordial welcome from his hosts of friends. He will welcome many of them again, as well as many of his former patrons, Monday afternoon and evening as they stroll through and enjoy the inspection of six big floors of beautiful furniture and other house-furnishing goods.

Colonel Gordon was identified with the city government in Atlanta for several years, as fourth ward councilman, alderman and mayor pro tem. He is prominent and active in civic organizations, and a high official in Elkdom.

The building occupied by the new furniture concern has six large floors, each of which is filled with the very latest designs in furniture, carpets, rugs, odd pieces and scores of other house furnishings.

During the reception hours Monday—4 to 6 and 7:30 to 9:30 p. m.—no sales will be made in the furniture house. The entire sales force and many others directly and indirectly connected with the company will conduct the visitors through the big furniture building. A breezy orchestra will dispense music all the while, and every lady visitor will be presented with a pretty souvenir.

On Tuesday morning the store will open for active business, and many of the specials—at special prices—on display Monday will doubtless be snatched up by eager buyers.

Andrew J. Miller, well and favorably known in furniture circles for many years, is first assistant to Mr. Gordon, and will have charge of many details in the management of the store. Other salesmen and those connected with the company are:

R. B. Smith, W. J. Huff, Mrs. B. Freeman, David E. Shumaker and Miss Pauline Holeman.

W. M. Reid, vice president, who has been associated with Colonel Gordon for many years, and who is now residing in Miami, Fla., where he looks after business interests connected with the furniture house, will come up for the opening Monday. He will be glad to see many of his old Atlanta friends.

W. H. Gordon, son of Colonel Gordon, who is in charge of the American Furniture and Carpet company in Jacksonville, will also come to Atlanta for the opening.

"For several months," said Colonel Gordon, "since I have known that I was going to open in Atlanta, I have been searching the furniture markets of the whole country in my determination to bring to Atlanta the highest quality—the newest—the prettiest—furniture obtainable. I am glad to say I have been successful. Those who attend our opening on Monday will be almost astounded at the remarkable showing we will make of fine furniture. Our six floors are filled with everything new—the last word—in furniture, from the most expensive suites to all manner of odd pieces, mirrors carpets, and the like. I am going to be proud to show this wonderful display Monday, and hope all of my former patrons and friends will visit us.

"Personally, I am mighty glad to be back in Atlanta again. It seems more like home than any other place to me."

J. K. OTTLEY SPEAKS TO LAWYERS FRIDAY

J. K. Ottley, president of the Fourth National Bank of Atlanta, will discuss "The Relationship Between the Banker and the Lawyer, With Special Reference to Trusts," at the next monthly dinner of the Atlanta Lawyers' club, to be held at the Henry Grady hotel at 5:30 o'clock Friday afternoon.

The program of this meeting of the lawyers' club will include several musical numbers given by Mrs. Weeden B. Nichols, lyric soprano. Mrs. Nichols is soloist for the First Baptist church. She will be accompanied by Mrs. Clyde Withers.

The recent rapid development of corporate trusteeships in connection with estates makes Mr. Ottley's talk one of special interest to the members of the lawyers' club, whose membership includes nearly 300 Atlanta attorneys.

WORTH COUNTY TAX RECEIPTS SHOW GAIN

Sylvester, Ga., August 4.—(Special.) The tax equalizers of Worth county have completed their work and W. B. Holton, receiver, has just completed the digest which shows a gain over last year of $104,553. The negro property showed a loss of about $12,000, while the property of the whites showed a gain of about $115,000.

Many Furniture Concerns Making Beautiful Displays

It would be difficult indeed to select from the beautiful furniture displays to be seen at the American Furniture & Carpet Co., just what concern has the most attractive designs.

Every piece of furniture on the six floors—every odd piece—every chair—has its peculiar and distinctive and almost exclusive design and appearance.

It would seem, judging from the marvelous displays, that every manufacturer of furniture—even on the simpler and inexpensive designs—has tried to out-do the other in producing the latest and newest and prettiest designs.

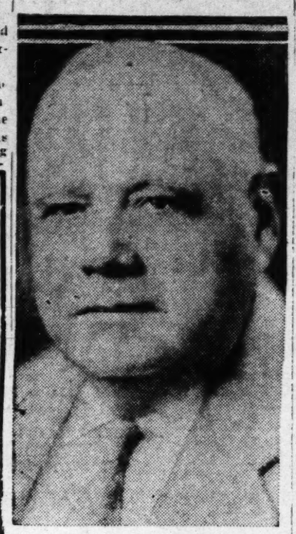

Among many other pretty overstuffed living room suites, and other designs in furniture, that will attract attention at the formal opening of the American Furniture & Carpet Co., will be the products of the Fox Manufacturing company, of Atlanta. This company has grown to be one of the largest of its kind in the southeast, and its products are shipped to all sections of the country. The American Furniture & Carpet Co. is making a splendid show of this furniture manufactured right here at home.

Another local concern which is making a splendid showing at the American Furniture company with its line of living room suites is the Capital City Chair company. Its line of goods is well known over the south, and the officials of the new furniture house are much pleased with the beautiful display they have been able to make from this Atlanta concern.

High Point, N. C., known perhaps as the leading furniture manufacturing center in the south, is well represented on the floors of the American Furniture & Carpet Co. through the products of two of High Point's leading manufacturers. The Tate Furniture company and the Continential Furniture company. Both of these concerns have been producing a line of goods which has been handled in the past by the local furniture house, and each has a beautiful display. Mr. Lamar Feagle is the southern representative for the Tate Furniture company.

Among other beautiful exhibits at the American Furniture & Carpet Co. are those from well known manufacturers at Grand Rapids, Mich. These are the Luce Furniture company and the Sligh Furniture company, the products of both of which are among the most beautiful of all the displays on the floors of the furniture house.

A wonderful display of bridge, table and floor lamps, manufactured by the Rembrandt Lamp company, L. W. Freeman, southern representative, will be one of the pretty features of the formal opening of this big local furnitur house.

Continental Display Fine At American

Many of the notably attractive bedroom designs to be seen at the new establishment of The American Furniture & Carpet Co. are manufactured by The Continental Furniture company at High Point, N. C. The Continental Furniture company is one of the largest manufacturers of bedroom furniture and secretaries in this country and certainly no merchant could boast of a finer source of supply.

More than 26 years of steady growth and popularity has attained a popularity for Continental Guaranteed Superior Quality Bedroom Furniture that is nationally known. Under the able management of its president, Mr. Fred N. Tate, The Continental Furniture company is producing merchandise that is far above the average in construction and finish. The cost of Continental bedroom furniture is kept well within the bounds of economy so that every home can afford to invest in its true comfort and wearing qualities.

The officials of the American Furniture & Carpet Co. are desirous that their friends and the visitors on Monday to their formal opening see and examine many of these attractive Continental suites.

Mrs. John Talmadge Discusses Episcopal Thank Offering

Mrs. John Talmadge, Jr., of Athens, custodian of thank offerings for the diocese of Atlanta for Episcopal women, issues the following article concerning the great united thank offering. She says:

"Nobody knows, nor can guess what will be the amount of the next united thank offering to be presented in Washington this fall by the Episcopal women, but the news of the last in 1925 was received with jubilation! That offering was made by 91 American diocese and missionary districts, but that is not all. While American women were handing over their funds to their parish treasurers, the women of other lands were doing the same thing. 'I am sending you five pesos,' writes a church woman from Mexico. The women of Africa, China, Japan, southern Brazil and Cuba also heeded the call of the little blue box, and when in September, 1925 every society was busily collecting its gathered treasure, there came across sea and continents, by special messengers, the loving gifts of these women whom we have to call 'foreign,' for lack of a better term. Their gifts met our gifts—and everybody knows the rest—$912,841.30.

"The united thank offering now supports 217 missionaries, of whom 84 are in the domestic and 133 in foreign fields. In order that these special charges of ours may be better supported, it was decided to put aside one-tenth of the offering each triennial, and the interest used that we may comfortably provide for emergencies, and that human sorrows and illnesses may find the treasury furnished with that substantial help which does much to mitigate distress.

"Does not this thought touch women to the quick of her conscience? Is it not enough to make her determine to do more than ever before? Woman's offering, for women, and through women, for the world! That is the romance of our united thank offering. And, so understanding its meaning both to those who give and to those who receive, is it not worth while to make this offering even closer and dearer—and to urge all women to have a part in it?"

H. M. ATKINSON CALLS FIRST CHEST MEETING

Members of the executive committee of the Atlanta Community Chest, appointed as the first official act of Harry M. Atkinson as president, have been called to meet Monday afternoon in the office of A. E. Thornwell, in the Candler building. Plans for the 1928 appeal for public support of the city's charity work will be developed.

According to Mr. Atkinson, reorganization of the Community Chest as brought about last week will be reflected in new methods and a new spirit in contacts with the public.

"The new administration intends to take the public into its confidence in every way," Mr. Atkinson said. "We shall seek to win and keep the confidence of the people of Atlanta, and to do this we must deserve it. This can be done only by a sound, businesslike, economical, honest administration of the chest fund, which is a sacred trust.

"The public may expect monthly publication of our financial statement, because we are convinced the public should know what becomes of their contributions to charity. We can and will make the Community Chest a great success in Atlanta this year, because Atlanta does not do things by half-way when a worthy cause is presented."

Most of the personnel of the old organization is retained in the enlarged chest group, the most important executive change being appointment of Frank Miller, former director of the Knoxville, Tenn., chest, and for 18 months service secretary of the Atlanta organization, as executive succeeding Roy F. Gates.

Eugene R. Black and W. C. Wardlaw are new vice presidents, and the new executive committee, with Rodney Morison, Jr., as chairman, includes Edward H. Inman, S. C. Dobbs, Louis J. Elsas, Walter B. Stewart, W. Bayne Gibson, T. C. Law, A. E. Thornwell and Thomas H. Daniel.

DECATUR AVIATORS HOLD MEET TODAY

An exhibition of stunt flying and of parachute jumping will be staged at Tuggle flying field, Decatur, at 2 o'clock this afternoon. Neal Stewart, veteran flier, will go through a number of difficult stunts in his plane, American Eagle, which will be all the harder to accomplish because of the small motor of the plane. Archer Hoffman will make three or four parachute jumps in an attempt to set a new altitude record, trying to land safely from a height of 10,000 feet.

Other pilots of the field will attempt their first solo flights for the benefit of the spectators. These fliers are Jim Williams, George Hanson and Hubert Duckworth. There will also be several planes on hand to take passengers on observation flights.

The Tuggle field is located one mile outside Decatur on the Athens road.

Impressions Given Of International Episcopal Meet

Following are extracts from an article which appeared in the July number of "The Spirit of Missions" published by the national council of the Episcopal church. The article was written by Francis Chomin Wei, of Wuchang, China, editorial correspondent and a representative of the Episcopal denomination.

The following impressions of the International Missionary conference held in Jerusalem March 24 to April 8, given through Chinese eyes was "truly international, genuinely Christian and desperately missionary, says Mrs. Frank Woodruff, Episcopal editor, who compiled the impressions in the article on the conference in the Holy Land for the official church page, written by Miss Cho Min Wei, vice president of Central China university at Wuchong, and editorial correspondent of "The Spirit of Missions." The article reads:

"For two weeks ending on last Easter day the enlarged meeting of the international missionary council was held on the Mount of Olives, Jerusalem. It is difficult as yet to appraise the importance of that meeting; we are still too near to it. But no one who was there would have the least bit of doubt as to the significance of that gathering. It was a truly international meeting. Peoples in Africa as well as in Australia, in North and South America as well as in Europe and Asia, fifty all told, were represented by 250 delegates, who again were equally divided between the older and younger churches. The languages in which prayers were offered were numerous enough to baffle the most accomplished linguist in the world. There was hardly a Protestant denomination unrepresented. All shades of opinion concerning theology, creed and ecclesiastical polity, as far as the Protestant churches go, must have had their exponents there. But never during the days we were together in the meetings did the feeling cross the path of consciousness that these various differences hampered in any way our fellowship in Christ.

"In confronting all important problems, we relied not on our own experience, but on the divine guidance of Almighty God, which we knew would come to us through prayer and through our absolute surrender to Him In all our discussions we had before us constantly the mind and heart of Jesus Christ, as revealed to us by His utterances and works, by His life and character, so intimately associated with the scenes and landmarks open to our view from Olivet, the Jordan, the wilderness, the temple area, the golden gate, Bethany, Calvary and the Mount of Olives itself. The towering figure of Jesus in human history assured us then more in the meeting and more emphatically than ever before what God is and what man may be! The Resurrection is our only hope. Therefore, on Easter Sunday, the last day the conference met on the Mount of Olives, the hopeful note rang more distinctly and more assuringly than ever before. The whole conference from beginning to end was preeminantly Christo-centric. It was the same christian spirit that stamped the conference as unmistakably missionary. 'It is by coming into fellowship with Christ,' the conference declared, 'that we find in ourselves an overmastering impulse to share Him with others . . . We do not go to the nations, called non-Christian, because they are the worst in the world and they alone are in need, we go because they are a part of the world and share with us in the same human need . . . the need of redemption from ourselves and from sin, the need to have life complete and abundant and to be remade after the pattern of Christ-likeness.' In short the conference was truly international, genuinely christian and desperately missionary.

"We from the east were particularly touched by the courageous attitude of the conference in its determination to combat in modern society all that is contrary to the principles of the kingdom of God and to penetrate every department of modern civilization with the spirit of Christ. In this determination reached unanimously by the 250 delegates from all the 50 nations, we can see a strong ray of light struggling from the very source, to break finally through the dark clouds now covering the glory of Him who has come to proclaim the abundant life that the loving Father has from eternity in store for all of us, His children, regardless of color, racial or national distinctions."

U. of Atlanta association, and director of the Ruby anniversary pageant to be presented Sunday evening at 7:30 at the city auditorium. Photograph of Mrs. Burke by Lomax studio.

Requiring at least three or four hundred characters in costume to present the Ruby anniversary pageant, at the city auditorium this evening, August 5, at 7:30 o'clock, the interesting and unique performance will undoubtedly attract a large crowd of interested spectators. Baptist pastors of Atlanta have unanimously agreed to close the churches for this evening and not only their congregations but friends ar cordially invited. There will be no admission charged at the door and no collection or offering will be taken.

The pageant is under the auspices of Baptist Woman's Missionary union of Atlanta association, which represents 225 missionary societies of all grades from 63 churches of the association. Mrs. Wilbur N. Jones, superintendent of Atlanta association of B. W. M. U., directs the pageant which was written by Mrs. W. D. Burke of the Grant Park Baptist church. Forty years of remarkable progress of south-wide Woman's Missionary union will be represented by groups from missionary societies, young peoples auxiliaries, girl's auxiliaries, Royal Ambassadors and Sunbeams. Stewardship, mission study, personal service, good will centers, Georgia Baptist hospital, orphans' home, Margeret fund, training school and other phases of the work will be graphically presented.

Appropriate music by the best artists of the city will be rendered during the program. George Hambrick will preside at the city organ, and Miss Minnie Hecker, Mrs. Cooper and Solon Drukenmiller will lend their voices in the service of song.

Mrs. Jackson Issues Report on Children's Work in District

Mrs. J. R. Jackson, superintendent of children's work for Woodbury, Ga., Methodist auxiliary, in the LaGrange district, writes on the subject as follows:

"The meetings of the children's society of Woodbury, Ga., are entirely in line with our ambition to forward the interests of mission work this year. At the first meeting of the year, children from each primary and Epworth junior divisions attended, and were graded according to proper age. The primary and Epworth junior meetings are held jointly, there being a small number in each division. At these meetings the devotionals are messages that each young heart needs to gain strength for God's work.

"The stories told are planned to stir the children to their responsibility in "service." The reports show many constructive activities and also show what a help-giving band of children, can do to extend God's kingdom, and the joy which they experience, brings them manifold blessings. A sick child was supplied with milk by some of our juniors; magazines were sent to afflicted children to aid in their amusements, a box of supplies (valued at $4), was sent to goodwill industry, and 10 little booklets were made and sent to Scottish Rite hospital, Atlanta.

"Japanese pictures are shown at the meetings to better acquaint the children with the field for study. Posters are used, too. A Japanese house is now ready to be constructed.

"We have additional features to hold the interest, such as giving souvenirs—U. S. flag-pins in February and ribbon badges in junior colors for a May meeting. That the interest is being held is proved by increase in attendance over each preceding meeting, 34 being our largest attendance. This number included several adult members who aid us in this way and also by contributing our books for study. "Kin and the Crab" has just been ordered for our study this summer.

"Publicity is given the meetings by announcing them at church services. Sometimes posters are used for this, too. We sent a 'write-up' of our work to Juniors and to the Wesleyan Christian Advocate. We thank Mrs. Tilly and Mrs. Field for that which appeared on the church page of the Constitution. Mite-box openings stand out delightfully in the minds of the children because of added pleasures, well-filled mite-boxes, and the fact that every child is on the program at one time. A house-to-house canvass was made for enrolling babies.

"We will let the conference officers decide whether we deserve the name 'Blue Ribbon' auxiliary, or not. We have gained all points excepting net increase of members and the reason of this is that we secured as members in the early part of the first quarter all the Methodist children of the town."

Methodist Board Meets Tuesday.

The Methodist board of city missions meets Tuesday, August 7 at 10 o'clock in First Methodist church. Representatives of the Atlanta board who attended the recent conference on city and rural mission work at Lake Junaluska, N. C., will bring echoes of that conference as the principal part of the program for the August meeting.

Mrs. Hugh Harris of Emory university, who was the devotional leader for that conference, will bring the same message to the board here. Mrs. H. W. Dent and Mrs. Manget will report on different phases of the meeting and Miss Dorothy Crim will give the findings of that conference. Miss Crim was a member of the findings committee. Although the Wesley community house is closed for August, this meeting will be important for the fall work will have to be anticipated and plans made for reception of the new worker who will arrive before the next board meeting.

Mrs. Nat Kaiser Receives Requests.

Quilt pieces, bridge partners, flowers and reading matter, cigarettes and automobile drives, are among the requests coming to Mrs. Nat Kaiser from thirteen organizations of Atlanta which care for the sick and the shut-ins. Mrs. Kaiser's long service in hospital relief work and in other ways makes her the recipient of many requests for personal service and small gifts. Those willing to give such services or time or means are requested to telephone Mrs. Kaiser at Hemlock 0446.

Briefly Told

Mrs. F. T. Vincent, Macon, superintendent of the Baptist W. M. U., of the Rehobeth association, was one of the speakers at the Baptist meeting at the Houston Factory, Fort Valley, Friday, July 29, when representatives of 21 churches of the state united in a good fellowship meeting.

Miss Virginia Bow, young people's leader of Baptist Woman's Missionary Union of Georgia, left Atlanta August 2 for Blue Ridge, Ga., where she will be one of the prominent teachers of the Baptist assembly, whose guests will be entertained at the Mary P. Willingham Industrial school August 3 to 10.

During the Baptist assembly at Blue Ridge there will be the usual meeting of the trustees of the Mary P. Willingham school. Mrs. W. J. Neel, Cartersville, president of Georgia B. W. M. U. and also of the board of trustees of the school, is in attendance upon the assembly and one of its most popular teachers.

Mrs. Ben S. Thompson, vice president for east central division of Georgia W. M. U., is at Blue Ridge and presiding as assembly hostess.

Mrs. Wilbur N. Jones, superintendent of Baptist Woman's Missionary union, of Atlanta association, and director of the ruby anniversary pageant to be presented at the city auditorium at 7:30 o'clock this evening extends a cordial invitation to all interested friends.

The State Mission Study institute, under the direction of Mrs. Taul White, Rome, state chairman of mission study, for Georgia W. M. U., will be held at Bessie Tift college September 5 to 7, inclusive, opening at 8 o'clock.

After the business meeting of W. M. S. at Druid Hills Baptist church on Monday, August 6, there will be a social hour in honor of Miss Mary Crawford, who is sailing for China August 13, from Vancouver. The McConnell Sunday school class at Y. W. A. will also entertain for Miss Crawford.

The West Eng Baptist church will give a reception and silver tea Monday afternoon, August 13, at 3 o'clock, in honor of Mrs. Clarke, wife of Dr. W. Harvey Clarke, who, with her husband, sails for Japan in September.

About 40 women were present at the July meeting of W. M. S. of the Capitol View Baptist church, at a miscellaneous shower given to Miss Mary Crawford, who returns in August to her missionary work in north China. The little Sunbeams of the church participated in the shower. Two W. M. S. circles donated money to help Miss Crawford keep two Chinese girls in school the coming year. In the absence of Mrs. O. B. Garner, president, Mrs. C. E. Chapman, vice president, president. Mrs. W. L. Allen, secretary, of second district of Atlanta Baptist W. M. U. and Y. W. A. counselor, made the Y. W. A. report and noted the increased interest the society is taking in world-wide missions and mission study. The pastor, Dr. Cutts, was presented and introduced Dr. G. J. Davis, who has recently come to Atlanta as superintendent Atlanta Baptist association.

Mrs. Robert E. Harvey and Mrs. C. A. Simpson will entertain the executive board of the Woman's Missionary and Benevolent society with lunch in the church at 1 o'clock Monday, August 6. This will be an all-day meeting of the women, the executive board meeting at 11 a. m. and the business session at 3 in the afternoon, Mrs. J. Furniss Lee, president, who has been out of the city several weeks, is expected to return in time for the meeting. Mrs. Carter Helm Jones has left New Jersey for St. Louis, accompanied by the pastor, and they will visit Dr. and Mrs. Ashby Jones.

The Methodist board of city missions meets Tuesday morning, August 7, at 10 o'clock at the First Methodist church.

School of Missions Opens at Emory.

The interdenominational school of missions opens at Emory university Monday, September 17.

SPARTA PASTOR HOLDS REVIVAL

Sparta, Ga., August 4.—Rev. W. T. Pearman, pastor of the local Presbyterian church, is holding revival services this week in the Presbyterian church at Crawfordville. It happens that this month is the minister's vacation period and he is taking a portion of his time in revival work. Rev. Pearman is a forceful speaker and also a talented singer, having been trained in England, his homeland, for an opera singer before he took up the ministry. He is therefore an evangelist and song leader combined. Services will be resumed at the local church early in September.

Programs on National Defense Outlined by National Chairman

The following prospectus for chapter programs on "National Defense" for 1928-1929 has been proposed by the office of the national chairman at Washington, D. C.:

September—"Defense of the Republic"—To offset theories of "change in the social order."

October—"Defense of Citizenship"—To remedy failure "to get out the vote."

November—"Defense of Family Relations"—To counteract "companionate marriage" and other experiments tending to tear down the American home.

December—"Defense of Religion"—To oppose efforts "to abolish belief in God."

January—"Defense of Education"—To rout un-American teaching in schools and colleges.

February—"Defense of Patriotism"—To overcome lack of respect for heroes and patriots.

March—"Defense of the 'Common Defense'"—To reduce opposition to the proposed navy building program and attacks on military training.

April—"Defense of Industry"—To combat the socialistic idea of "production for use and not for profit."

May—"Defense of Cultural Relations"—To thwart plans to pervert art, music, drama, literature and pageantry.

June—"Defense of the Flag"—To discourage use of substitute flags—peace flags, Esperanto flags, red flags.

State Regent Issues Rules For Honor Roll

Mrs. H. Fay Gaffney, state regent, sends the following message to chapter regents relative to honor roll requirements and publication of proceedings:

"My Dear Chapter Regents: Below is a list of honor roll requirements extracted from proceedings, page 218. Please read them carefully as this is the first time the list for same has been published. I especially urge the regents of newly organized chapters to study the high points found in our 1928 proceedings.

"In behalf of every Georgia daughter, I express deepest appreciation to Mrs. Bun Wylie, Mrs. Frances Brown Chase and her efficient press committee for the most attractive proceedings and thank them most earnestly for their untiring efforts."

The requirements for the honor roll are as follows: (1) State and national dues (see bylaws, article 8); (2) 10 cents per capita for immigrants' manual; (3) 10 cents per capita for national defense; (4) five cents per capita for Angel and Ellis islands; (5) 15 cents per capita for Lucy Cook Peel memorial fund; (6) 15 centr per capita for the Fannie Trammell memorial loan fund for education of boys and girls; (7) 15 cents per capita for loan fund for Georgia State Woman's college at Valdosta; (8) 25 cents per capita for Georgia's gift as a potential donor towards Constitution hall; (9) $2 from each chapter for marking historic spots.

Board of Management Passes Resolution.

The following resolution was passed by the national board of management, N. S. D. A. R., June 21, extolling Secretary Kellogg's policies and raffirming their stand for the defense of America.

Whereas, The national society, Daughters of the American Revolution, has enunciated and has demonstrated its confidence in and fidelity to the constitution of the United States:

Whereas, The society ever holds in jealous reverence those eternal truths and fundamental principles which the founders of the republic recognized when they brought our nation into being as an independent sovereignty, desiring quiet with all nations and "domestic tranquility" within:

Whereas, The D. A. R. looks with favor on constructive elements shielding and preserving our inheritance from the past and promoting future national progress;

Whereas, The national society, Daughters of the American Revolution, aims to have its activities harmonize with plans for human betterment and conform with modern methods conducible to the peace of the world; therefore be it

Resolved, That the national board of management of the Daughters of the American Revolution in the June, 1928, board meeting assembled make known to the Honorable Mr. Frank B. Kellogg, secretary of state, our agreement with his able and sincere presentation of our nation's willingness to hasten the lasting peace of the world; and be it further

Resolved, That we extol Secretary Kellogg's efforts in bringing to finer realization the development among nations of a stronger respect for each other's economic welfare, national rights, personal privileges and the upbuilding of civilization around the globe and assure him of our faith in his policies, the meanwhile reaffirming our stand for the defense of America.

D. A. R. President General Is Presented at Court of St. James

Mrs. Alfred J. Brosseau, president general, national society, D. A. R. was presented at the Court of St. James on the evening of May 9. The following message from Mrs. Brosseau describes very vividly and most interesting the ceremonies attending her presentation at court. Mrs. Brosseau being received as the president general of D. A. R. makes her presentation of wide-spread interest throughout the country.

"As the Paris bears me homeward across the broad Atlantic, my thoughts turn alternately to the joys that await me in my own country and the pleasant experiences that have come to me in the two countries to which I have recently bade farewell. The main objective of the trip was to visit the two chapters of the D. A. R. in London and Paris and to get into closer touch with those far-off groups in order that our mutual problems might be better understood. The contact was delightful and enlightening in the extreme. I am happy to say that in both cities our chapters are comprised not only of the finest women belonging to what is termed the "American Colony," but they are true representatives of their native land, and of them we may well be proud. I found a fine spirit of harmony and cooperation existing, notwithstanding the fact that the organization of a chapter in any country other than our own is bound to be marked by serious handicaps.

Courage, loyalty, and devotion are required to carry on the work of the parent society in a far-away land. News travels slowly beyond the borders of the United States, and with distance it diminishes in detail and accuracy. Therefore I say to you, Daughters, if you are ever tempted to feel a sense of remoteness from Washington, remember the over-seas chapters, from China to our own territorial possessions, and compare with sympathetic understanding their isolation and your proximity. While in London mine was the privilege of being presented at the Court of St. James on the evening of May 9. It was as your president general that the honor came to me, and I want to now share with you that wonderful adventure.

There was a considerable wait in the Mall in the twilight of that May afternoon, as the hundred or more motors formed a long line, but any possible dullness was relieved by the sight of mounted troops and marching bands, all attired in gay, scarlet uniforms, and the constant movement of the throng of spectators. With a friendly, disarming curiosity the onlookers gathered on the sidewalk and peered into the windows of the cars, the while commenting audibly in a most casual manner upon the occupants and their attire. The court functions mean much to the English and they feel a possessive interest in all the details and occurrences.

Early Arrival.

My own motor was near the beginning of the line, and when that line strated I was very quickly within the gates of Buckingham palace. From the moment I entered the doors until they closed again upon my final exit there were numerous uniformed footmen and guards to guide and direct my progress from coat-room to throne-room. Being an early arrival, I was ushered immediately into the throne room, a portion of which had been roped off and chairs provided for about 200 guests. Promptly at half past nine o'clock their majesties entered the room to the familiar strains of "God Save the King" and were unostentatiously seated. The royal family and members of the court had previously assembled and surrounded the throne and there they remained until at the close of the evening the king and queen departed.

The first to be presented were the members of the various diplomatic corps and their families. That line was colorful in the extreme, many native oriental costumes being interspersed with brilliant uniforms and the conventional court dress.

The setting for the royal ceremony holds all the grandeur, the beauty and the dignity of historic pageantry, but the presentation itself is marked by such quiet, orderly regulation that it appears to border upon simplicity. The line moves with clocklike precision and instinctively one feels the security of that order. The train of the dress, for instance, that could be provocative of so much grief is laid on the carpet by attendants, and removed and thrown over the arm by other attendants at precisely the right moment of entrance and exit.

As one walks past the throne and pauses to make a slight curtsey before the king and queen, one receives in return a gracious bow from their majesties. The custom of backing out of the room no longer prevails, but the presentee faces the queen until she turns to meet the next comer and then passes quickly out to mingle with the throng, to partake of supper or to return as an observer in the throne room. The close of the evening marks a grand rush for the favorite Bond street photographer. The galleries are open until 1 o'clock and the crowds pour in, laughing happily, all eager to have finished with that part of the evening's procedure and to escape from the crush. It would be almost an anticlimax to the dignified drawing room were it not a custom so long established that it seems quite a part of the momentous evening.

Court Restrictions.

Approximately five or six hundred were presented the same evening, eight of whom were American women. Each year our ambassador is privileged to present, during the entire season, exactly 33 of his compatriots in addition to those connected officially with the embassy in London. At that, he is allowed a greater number than the ambassador of any other country. There are slight restrictions as to court dress. The gown itself may be of any material or color, but the train is of stipulated length. The time-honored custom of wearing the soft veil and three white feathers on the head is still required, and it is an unwritten law that one carry either a fan or flowers.

Queen Mary is said to be very observing and alert to the many personal details that mark the ensemble of those in the passing throng. On the other hand, as one looks into her eyes, one sees there the spirit of the real woman—the woman who, as queen, has endeared herself to her subjects. One hears quite freely that she is intensely interested in American women.

The experience of a presentation at the Court of St. James is unique and delightful and for an American it cannot fail to be memorable. And let it be here recorded that one is not compelled to make concessions to one's democratic spirit. The question is merely one of orientation and for a brief time becoming a part of and enjoying the highest social honor that one country can bestow upon a guest from another land. I can well imagine that visitors from other shores who are greeted by our chief executive and his wife in our own beloved white house carry away with them mental pictures and reactions quite similar to my own upon this occasion.

The sloping green lawns of Staten island greet my eye. New York city's famous sky line makes the approach a reality. The Statue of Liberty, rising out of the waters of the harbor assures me that I have reached my journey's end. My heart sings as I pass the symbolic figure guarding that most priceless of possessions—my own, my native land!

Mrs. Kincaid Is Hostess.

Mrs. Harvey Kincaid was hostess at a bridge party Saturday evening at her home in West End. She was assisted in entertaining by Miss Nan Barber and Mrs. Roy Stonecypher.

MASON CHESTER FREED TWICE IN TWO WEEKS

Arrested on an Atlantic City warrant for gaming as he stepped, two weeks ago, from the federal penitentiary, where he had done a year under a Mann act charge, Mason Chester, 42, of Philadelphia, was released Saturday from Fulton Tower by order of Governor L. G. Hardman, who had been notified the Atlantic City charge was dropped.

Chester, a former Florida real estate operator, had resisted extradition to New Jersey during his two weeks' stay at the Tower. Chester was convicted at Knoxville, Tenn., on the Mann act charge.

D. A. R. Compiles Guide Book.

A guide book for tourists as well as for instructive reference is being compiled by the D. A. R. to be published as soon as all the information is available. The book will be a national guide for students, historians, teachers and travelers and will cover points of early settlement, where treaties were signed, birthplaces and homes of noted people, battlefields, old forts, spots where noted leaders fell or had headquarters, educational or religious places of interest, memorials and monuments, old trails and other miscellaneous spots of historic interest.

Mrs. R. J. Travis, of Savannah, as state chairman of historic spots, has appointed a chairman from each county as well as one in each city where material is abundant to cover subjects demanding special attention over the state. One of the interesting features of the guide book will be the choice by vote of the most historic spot in Georgia. A vote will be taken from each chapter of the D. A. R. in the state for the most historic spot in the state.

Another matter of public interest in which the D. A. R. is now engaged is that of marking historical spots along the highways. John N. Holder, chairman of the state highway board, has agreed to take the matter up with the board as requested by Mrs. Travis. Mrs. Travis has also approached various other organizations requesting their cooperation and inviting suggestions as to spots of historic interest to be marked.

Among the organizations who have complied are the Colonial Dames of America, the United Daughters of the Confederacy, the National Society of the Daughters of 1812 and the American Legion auxiliary. A list of the committees appointed by Mrs. Travis will be published in next Sunday's Constitution.

BEAUTIFUL OCTOBER BRIDE-ELECT AND CHARMING BRIDES OF THE MID-SUMMER SEASON

The trio of lovely figures above includes, from left to right, Mrs. Irving Schweppe, who before her marriage, which was an important social event taking place at St. Luke's Episcopal church at high noon Tuesday, was Miss Kate Thompson, lovely daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Thompson; Miss Nancy Boston, beautiful young daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John H. Boston, of Marietta, whose engagement is announced today to Joseph S. Raine, Jr., their marriage to be among the brilliant events of early fall; and Mrs. George P. Rosser, formerly Miss Margaret Cochran, whose marriage was solemnized at a beautiful July ceremony at the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. W. N. Cochran, on Springdale road. Miss Nancy Boston and Mr. Raine To Wed Saturday Evening, Oct. 13

The announcement of the engagement of Miss Nancy Boston, of Marietta, and Joseph Shelton Raine, Jr., of Atlanta, carries unusual social interest to a coterie of relatives and friends in southern and eastern society circles. The wedding will be a notably brilliant event, taking place Saturday evening, October 13, in the First Methodist church in Marietta, followed by a reception at Bostonia, the ancestral home of the bride-elect's parents, Mr. and Mrs. John Houser Boston.

Miss Boston is the younger daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Houser Boston and the sister of Mrs. Frank Harwell, of Los Angeles, Calif. She is the granddaughter of the late Senator Edward Broadus Smith and Virginia Adams Smith, of Monticello, and Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Boston, of Marietta. After graduating from Penn Hall, Chambersburg, Pa., both in an English and dramatic course, Miss Boston completed her education by extensive travel in the United States and Europe. She has been one of the most popular members of the younger set, not only on account of her beauty, but because of her charming personality. On her maternal side she is descended from the Reids and Adams of Putnam and Massachusetts, the Flournoys, Broaduses and Hudsons of Virginia and the Rountrees of South Carolina. She is a great-granddaughter of the late Governor James Smith, of Arkansas. Each name stands out prominently in the history of the south. The bride-elect's grandfather, Irby Hudson, was for 28 years speaker of the house of representatives. On her paternal side Miss Boston is the grandniece of Georgia's war governor, Joseph E. Brown, and the niece of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph E. Boston and Mr. and Mrs. Frank Boston, of Atlanta, and Mr. and Mrs. Robert Mills McNeel, of Marietta. She is a very beautiful young girl, being of a perfect blonde type, with golden hair, sparkling blue eyes and exquisite complexion. Her graciousness of manner and sweetness of disposition have endeared Miss Boston to a wide circle of admiring friends.

Mr. Raine is the eldest son of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Shelton Raine, Sr., and a grandson on the maternal side of the late Captain and Mrs. John Alexander Miller, highly esteemed and beloved pioneer residents of Atlanta, who moved here right after their marriage in Maysville, Ky., to take a leading part in the early history of the city. His grandmother before her marriage was Miss Mary Hall, member of one of the most aristocratic and wealthiest families in the bluegrass state. His mother formerly was Miss Edna Miller, one of the most popular and attractive matrons in Atlanta society. His paternal grandparents, the late Mr. and Mrs. Joseph S. Raine, were also from Kentucky, and were representatives of distinguished families of that state. They, too, took prominent leadership in the social and business life of Atlanta.

After graduating from Tech High, Mr. Raine entered the Georgia School of Technology, finishing his education at Steven's Tech, New York. Mr. Raine is a member of the Alpha Tau Omega fraternity. After leaving college he became identified with the American Surety company and was located with that company two years in Philadelphia, but subsequently transferred to the office in Atlanta, where he holds a responsible position. Mr. Raine is very popular, both in the business and social world. He is a brother of Mrs. Marion Watson, of Montgomery, Ala.; Misses Edna Belle, Dorothy, Mamie and John Raine.

Miss Knox Honored At Engagement Tea.

Miss Florine Brown was hostess at a lovely tea Saturday afternoon at her home on Clairmont avenue, in Decatur. Charles Knox and George Wright, Jr., distributed cards announcing the engagement of Miss Mary Elizabeth Knox to Albert S. Happoldt.

Assisting the hostess were Misses Frances Virginia Brown, Nell Candler, Louise Johns, Louise Giradeau, Katherine Happoldt, Mesdames A. K. Adams, Alvin Moore, E. T. Lindsay, Glenn A. Duncan, John Wilcox, Carl Pirkle, F. A. Happoldt, Roscoe Knox and M. L. Knox.

One hundred and seventy-five guests called during the afternoon.

Mrs. A. F. Link Honors Visitors.

Mrs. A. F. Link was hostess at a bridge-tea Saturday afternoon at 3 o'clock at the Biltmore hotel.

Bridge was played on the terrace of the hotel overlooking the Biltmore gardens. Following the game tea was served at the individual tables. The honor guests at this affair were Mrs. Fred Goddard, of New York; Mrs. C. B. Spratling, of Alabama, and Miss Abbie Matthews, of Jacksonville, Fla. Sixteen friends of the hostess were invited to meet these lovely visitors.

Driving Club Dinner-Dance Attracts Visitors

The dinner dance Saturday evening attracted a large assemblage of prominent Atlantans and summer visitors. Dinner was served at tables on the terrace which was illuminated by the glow from myriads of Japanese lanterns and the rays of a full August moon. Dancing was enjoyed during the dinner courses to the strains of popular music played by an orchestra.

Among the interesting parties featuring the occasion was the party at which Mrs. John E. Murphy entertained in honor of Miss Gladys Hanson, who has spent the summer in Atlanta and who returns to New York next week to take up her theatrical duties. A group of close friends of the honor guest were invited.

Dr. and Mrs. Dan Elkin entertained a group of friends in honor of Mrs. James Gould, of New York, formerly Miss Marian Goldsmith, of Atlanta, who is spending two weeks as the guest of her mother, Mrs. J. W. Goldsmith, at her home on Peachtree street.

Major and Mrs. Allen M. Burdett entertained at a farewell party to Colonel and Mrs. George F. Baltzell, who leave August 18 to make their home in Jacksonville, Fla., and Major and Mrs. John J. Hester, who leave early in August for their new station in Fort Lewis, Washington state. Covers were placed for Colonel and Mrs. Baltzell, Major and Mrs. Hester, Colonel and Mrs. Emory S. Adams, Colonel and Mrs. Henry S. Wagner, Lieutenant and Mrs. Gilbert Proctor, Lieutenant and Mrs. Ralph E. Powell and Major and Mrs. John R. Holiday.

Mr. and Mrs. Ivan E. Allen entertained Mr. and Mrs. John E. Smith and Mr. and Mrs. Cator Woolford.

Misses Ethel and Sarah Kunzig, of Mount Vernon, N. Y., were central figures in a party including Mr. and Mrs. Edward Gay, Jr., James Johnson, Hubert Duckworth and James Williams, Jr.

Shadburn-Watkins Wedding Solemnized at Noon Ceremony

A marriage of cordial interest to a wide circle of friends was that of Miss Susan Shadburn and Robert Lee Watkins, which was solemnized Saturday, August 4, at high noon, at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Dan W. Shadburn, on Clairmont avenue.

Rev. J. Wiley Quilian, pastor of the first Methodist church, of Decatur, performed the wedding ceremony in the presence of relatives and intimate friends of the bride and groom.

The home was beautifully decorated with myriads of lovely garden flowers, carrying out a color scheme of pink, green and white, with an improvised altar in one end of the living room, and a background of palms, smilax and ferns, interspersed with stately lilies and tall white candles in silver candelabra.

Preceding the ceremony Miss Francis Collins played "Meditation," from Thais as a violin solo, and C. W. Dieckmann rendered the wedding march from "Lohengrin."

First to enter, coming down the stairway to the living room between ropes of smilax, which formed an aisle to the altar, was the little flower girl, Miss Dana Shadburn, youngest sister of the bride. She wore a dainty frock of flesh colored georgette over the same shade of satin and carried an old-fashioned nosegay of garden flowers in pink and white.

The maid of honor, Miss Sara Shadburn, wore a charming costume of independence blue georgette, her small blue hat and slippers matching her gown. She carried a shower bouquet of garden flowers in shades of pastel.

Lovely Bride.

The bride, who was given in marriage by her father, Dan W. Shadburn, was radiantly lovely in an ensemble of grey kasha beige, trimmed with a touch of rose and black. Her modish hat of felt and velvet, and her gray slippers carried out the shades of the ensemble. She carried a bride's bouquet of swansonia roses showered with valley lilies.

The groomsmen were Carlton Hardwick and Thomas H. Watkins.

Raiford Watkins, brother of the groom, acted as best man.

Immediately after the ceremony a reception was held, at which Mrs. Shadburn, who wore a becoming costume of rose beige trimmed with lace, was assisted by Mrs. Ralph Gordy, Mrs. Myron Southwell and Miss Virginia Grimes, of Statesboro. Mrs. Watkins, mother of the groom, wore a gown of powder blue georgette, lace trimmed, with a corsage of pink roses. Miss Leola Richards and Mrs. Thomas H. Watkins kept the bride's book.

Following the reception the young couple left on a motor trip to Washington, D. C., and points in the east.

Out-of-Town Guests.

Among the out-of-town guests were Loss Shadburn, Mrs. W. B. Shadburn, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Moon, Mr. and Mrs. Jones Yow, Miss Katherine Yow, Charles Stringer, Mr. and Mrs. John Allen, Miss Nan Allen, Mrs. W. L. Shadburn, Miss Daisy Shadburn and Mr. and Mrs. W. N. Nunn, of Buford, Mr. and Mrs. Minor Shadburn, of Griffin, Mr. and Mrs. Ewen Griffin, of Manchester; Mr. and Mrs. Ed Marshall, of Montezuma; Mr. and Mrs. Frank Grimes, of Statesboro; Miss Virginia Brooks Grimes, Statesboro; Mr. and Mrs. J. G. Brock, of Fairburn; Mr. and Mrs. J. M. Watkins, Mr. and Mrs. H. R. Watkins, Whitesburg; W. S. Somers and Hon. J. C. McKoy, of Newnan, and Miss Maggie Gay, of Woodland.

Union Bible Club Discontinues Meetings.

The Woman's Union Bible club, taught by Mrs. T. R. Kendall, will not meet again until early fall.

Williams-Wright Wedding To Take Place Saturday

The marriage of Miss Jean Austin Williams and Albert Wright will be an event carrying social interest, taking place Saturday evening, August 11, at 8:30 o'clock, at the home of the bride-elect's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Henry G. Williams, on Lombardy way. The ceremony will be performed by Rev. Richard Orme Flinn, pastor of North Avenue Presbyterian church, in the presence of immediate relatives and a group of close friends.

Miss Williams will be given in marriage by her father, Mr. Williams, and her only attendants will be her sister, Miss Marion Williams, acting as maid of honor, and Miss Martha Williams, as junior maid of honor. George H. Sessions, Jr., of Marietta, Ga., will act as best man for Mr. Wright.

Forming an aisle and carrying the ribbons through which the bridal party will pass will be Misses Jean Austin, Martha Ridley, Frances Wright, Dorothy Stiff, Nell Johnson, Mesdames Garrard Williams and Forrest Adair, Jr. Mrs. H. Clay Moore, Jr., will keep the bride's book, and assisting in receiving and serving punch will be Mesdames Howard Dobbs, Jr., Ada Peeples Butler, Beaumont Davison, Jr., Robert Daniels, of Swainsboro; Mark Mayes, of Tifton; Misses Caroline McKinney and Isabella Poer, of West Point. Mrs. Elyea Carswell and Miss Sarah Smith will render the musical program.

An informal reception follows the ceremony and Mr. Wright and his bride-to-be leave for a motor trip of two weeks' duration.

Biltmore Orchestra To Give Concert.

Music lovers who dine at the Biltmore Sunday evening will enjoy a rare treat in the program which has been arranged by the leader of the Biltmore concert orchestra, Edmund Kneisle. The orchestra will play melodies from the opera, "The Force of Destiny," by Verdi, the minuet from "The Serenade," by Mozart; selections from the light opera, "Baron Trenck," by Strauss, and song hits from the current Broadway musical successes. In addition to this the Biltmore string quartet, which is composed of two violins, a viola and a cello, and which is under the leadership of F. H. Gilbreath, the first violinist and concert master of the orchestra, will play a gavotte by the French composer, Jean Baptiste Rameau, and a special arrangement of MacDowell's "To a Wild Rose."

This program will be given during the dinner hour on the terrace of the Biltmore gardens from 6:30 until 9 o'clock.

All Saints' Auxiliary To Be Honored.

Members of the woman's auxiliary of All Saints' church will be entertained at an afternoon tea on Monday at 4 o'clock at the home of Mrs. Robert C. Alston on Andrews drive.

Officers of the auxiliary include Mrs. John F. MacDougald, president; Mrs. Rupert Horton, vice president; Mrs. Robert P. Hare, treasurer; Mrs. Albert Walden, secretary, and Mrs. Dunbar Roy, custodian of the united thank offering.

All members of the auxiliary are urged to attend.

Habersham Chapter To Sponsor Bridge.

The Joseph Habersham chapter, D. A. R., will sponsor a bridge-tea Friday afternoon, August 10, from 4 to 6 o'clock at Habersham, Hall.

Members of the chapter and other organizations may make reservations by phoning the resident hostess, Mrs. Love, at Hemlock 5028, or Mrs. A. C. Whitehead, chairman of the house committee.

Miss Rosalind Harris Is Honor Guest.

Miss Rosalind Harris, of Baltimore, Md., the attractive guest of Miss Betty Davison, was honor guest at an informal luncheon party Saturday at which Miss Ruth Ozburn entertained at the Piedmont Driving club. Covers were placed for six close friends.

Miss Fleming Honors Bride-Elect.

Miss Georgia Fleming was hostess at luncheon Saturday, entertaining in honor of Miss Zoe Hicks, a bride-elect. The luncheon was given on the terrace of the Biltmore hotel gardens. Covers were placed for eight friends of the honoree.

'Relics of the Confederacy' Told In Article on Official Page

BY MRS. J. M. TOOMEY.

In the county courthouse, which stands in the historic old town of Washington, Wilkes county, is housed one of the most interesting collections of relics of the Confederacy to be found anywhere throughout the southern states. The courthouse was built on the site of the old Heard House, in which the last meeting of the Confederate cabinet was held, the room in which the relics have been placed being approximately over the historic Davis chamber. The museum is the property of the last cabinet chapter of the United Daughters of the Confederacy, whose members have collected and carefully preserved these valuable mementos of the "Lost Cause." During the past few months a committee from the chapter has been recataloguing the relics and arranging them on shelves and in cabinets where they may be easily displayed.

Space will not permit a description of each of the many valuable specimens within the museum, but some of them bear such close relations to the closing scene of the Confederate government that it seems quite fitting to mention them here. One of the most interesting articles in the museum is Jefferson Davis' camp chest, which the chapter purchased from Mrs. Belle Virgin, daughter of Colonel John Weems, to whom it was presented by Colonel Taylor Wood, a member of Davis' staff, on behalf of the president, as shown in Colonel Wood's letter to Mrs. T. M. Green, of Washington, dated February 16, 1900, in which he says:

"The camp chest was sent to President Davis by some of his English friends, through the blockade during the last year of the war and was used by him and his staff, after the evacuation of Richmond, during his ride through the Carolinas."

In 1888 the following news article appeared in a paper: "Mrs. Belle Virgin, of Washington, Ga., has in her possession the camp chest used by Jefferson Davis while visiting the armies of the south. A northern man once offered her $1,000 for the chest, which she refused. He then ran his bid up to $3,000, when the unwise Virgin told him she would not sell the relic at any price to a man who had been an enemy of the south."

This news article attracted the attention of a man in Pittsburgh, Penn., who was so impressed with the sturdy loyalty of this daughter of the old south that he wrote her a letter requesting her hand in marriage. The letter, written in the beautiful phrasing and perfect penmanship of the past generation, is carefully preserved in the museum.

Prized Possession.

Another prized possession is a small box of tapers that was taken from the person of President Davis when he was captured by a private in the federal service. It was by him given to his commanding officer, who in turn gave it to Major General Edward McCrady, Charleston, S. C., July, 1865. In 1897 Major McCrady presented it to Mrs. W. R. Davis, who at that time was a resident of Charleston Mrs. Davis later removed to Atlanta, and on July 22, 1898, presented the box of tapers to Miss Winnie Davis. At Mrs. Davis' request it was presented by her husband, Captain W. R. Davis, company C, 59th Alabama regiment. The letter of presentation is preserved with the box of tapers. Several articles from the room in which the meeting was held have been preserved with loving care, among these being a piece of one of the window curtains. This material, about one yard in length, is of glazed English chintz on a beige background, with flowers of blue, rose and green. These colors are as clear and bright as when first used.

Other articles from the room are the beautiful old colonial mantel, and the lock and door knobs of solid brass. Here also is a beautiful gavel made of mahogany from the stair rail leading from the room to the lower floor. During Mr. Davis' stay in Washington he was entertained in the home of Mrs. M. E. Robertson, who presented several priceless relics to hte museum, among them being a bottle of tea that ran the blockade and which was given to Mrs. Robertson by President Davis while her guest. She also presented the inkstand used by Burton Harrison, secretary to Mr. Davis, while her guest. This quaint little inkstand is of white and gold china. It has a well in the center, on three sides of which are sockets for quills, and on the fourth side an opening through which to pour the ink.

General Robert Toombs.

Many relics pertaining to the life of General Robert Toombs, illustrious son of Wilkes county, have been preserved; chief among them being a handsome uniform of Confederate grey with trimmings of gold braid, as befitted his rank. It was presented by his granddaughter, Mrs. Camille DuBose Colley, of Washington. The leather-covered trunk used by General Toombs during his adventurous life as a fugitive was presented by Captain Charles E. Irvin, of Washington, who was a devoted friend of General Toombs.

A canteen, presented by W. Alex Hardy has a cover of blue cashmere beautifully embroidered in shades of green, red, yellow and blue, with all of the precision and beauty which characterized the handwork of the women of the old south. This canteen was used by Mr. Hardy from 1861 to 1865 and was carried through the battles of Fredericksburg, Gettysburg, Spotsylvania Court House, Mine Run and the Wilderness. The mess bucket carried through the war by Captain John Wingfield, of the Irvin Artillery Rifles company, has been preserved. It has two compartments, the upper one of which has a folding handle and served the soldier as a frying pan. The tin drinking cup used by Captain Wingfield is in the lower compartment. A wooden box about three feet long by two feet wide used by the Soldiers' Relief association, of Washington, for shipping supplies to the men at the front. A bundle of thread and tape is from the Confederate army store in Washington, which was sacked just before the federals reached the village. These things were picked up on the street by Mrs. J. J. Robertson, who presented them to the chapter in 1900 or 1901. A Confederate wooden shoe sole made in 1863 by M. A. Pharr, Sr., and presented to the museum by Mrs. M. A. Pharr, Sr., carefully placed in a wooden box, is a wool card and a bat of soft fleecy wool, together with some wool thread smoothly wound on a small spindle, which was presented to the museum by Dr. W. S. Lane, a brother of Miss Annie M. Lane, who for a number of years has served the chapter most efficiently in the capacity of historian.

Following Relics.

Mounted on cardboard with an inscription giving data as to where they were obtained are the following relics: A piece of a timber from the vessel Star of the West, which received, from the battery on Morris island, near Charleston, S. C., the first cannon shot of the civil war. A splinter from the temporary flagstaff erected by Major Anderson during the bombardment of Fort Sumter, after the flagstaff was shot away. Bit of insulated wire used at Fortress Monroe to explode torpedoes by electricity. A small piece of the flooring of the bed of the gun at Fort Johnson, which fired the signal to commence the bombardment of Fort Sumter, April 12, 1861. A piece of a timber from the Confederate ram Virginia (known as the Merrimac). Also a horseshoe made from the armor plate of the Merrimac. A piece of the flag from Fort Moultrie that was flown during the bombardment of Fort Sumter. This was given to Governor Pickens by the commander, Colonel Ripley, and was afterwards given to Dr. B. H. Teague, Aiken, S. C., by Mrs. Pickens. Dr. Teague presented all of these very interesting relics to Henry Cordes, of Washington, who in turn presented them to the Last Cabinet chapter.

A number of sabers, bayonets and Joe Brown Pikes used during the war by Wilkes county men have been presented to the chapter. Each of these has an interesting bit of history attached to it, to which the passing years lend added romance. A collection from the battle grounds of Spotsylvania and the Wilderness contains bullets, shells, minnieballs and pieces of timber with bullets embedded in them. The museum contains an unusually fine collection embracing many kinds of "wilcat" paper including "shinplasters." (Small denominations of $1 or less) issued by states, municipalities, corporations and individuals. An original package contains ten cartridges for an Enfield rifle is from the Augusta arsenal and is dated September, 1864.

After the last battle of the war, at Appomattox Courthouse, a Miss Jones, whose father owned the property on which the fight occurred, picked up a bullet on the battlefield. She preserved this relic and in 1895 presented it to Mrs. T. M. Green, of Washington, who gave it to the museum. A collection of shells from the battlefield around Atlanta, Manassas and other places are arranged on a table where they make a most interesting display.

Letter in Book.

Many books of peculiar interest to descendants of the men who wore the gray may be found in this museum. For instance, there is a small Latin book of poetry published in Paris, 1809, in which the following letter is placed:

"Hyde, Georgia, May 12, 1901.

Esteemed Friend: Please hand the little book to the Daughters of the Confederacy. It has a very interesting history. Was taken from the pocket of a Confederate soldier, who fell in the second battle of Manassas, by a federal who was wounded and captured by the confederates, who treated him so kindly that he learned to love the southern people.

After the war, to show his appreciation, he helped to educate several southern girls.

"SALLIE SMITH."

The picture of this noble-hearted northern gentleman is pasted in the front of this quaint little volume. Another interesting volume is the Bible carried through the entire four years of the war by Lieutenant W. G. Barret, company B, 7th Georgia regiment, infantry, afterwards captain independent cavalry. The notebook used by a musician of the band of the 37th Georgia regiment, presented by B. F. Bradley, musician. The book is hand made, the binding of stiff cardboard, being sewed to a canvas strip which forms the binding. The book is about three and one-half by five inches in size and the bugle calls and other martial airs contained in it are written in long hand. Another relic presented by Mr. Bradley is a base baritone horn that was captured from the enemy at Mills Valley and used in the band of the 37th Georgia regiment until the end of the war. Among the many valuable newspapers in the museum is a file of the "Southern Field and Fireside," published in Augusta, Ga. The issues date from April, 1861 through 1865, and are replete with news pertaining to the government, armies and navy of the confederacy. One feature of these papers which impressed the writer was the size of the sheets. The issues of 1861 and 1862 were printed on paper 14 1-2 by 21 1-2, whereas from 1863 on through the remaining years of the war the size of the sheets was reduced to 11 by 16 1-2 inches. This no doubt was caused by the scarcity of paper.

In the issue of December 14, 1861, appears the following article relative to the adoption of the confederate battle flag:

"The Battle Flag."

"A friend and officer in the Burke Sharp Shooters attached to the Independent Georgia Volunteers, writing from headquarters under date of the 3d instant, sends us a design of the recently adopted Battle Flag, and a copy of the following address:

"General Order, November 22.
"Headquarters 2d Army Corps,
"Army Potomac.
"December 8, 1861.

"Soldiers: The Battle Flag now unfurled in your ranks was delivered to the regiments of this corps without comment. The major general commanding was satisfied that the gallant men who marched from the valley of the Shenandoah to the assistance of their brethren on the plains of Manassa, and who contributed so largely to the success of our arms on the 21st of July, are determined to die upon the fields rather than abandon or surrender the standard entrusted to their keeping, through him by their former commander, General Johnston, the commander-in-chief of this army. Their comrades who have joined more lately are expected to share the same determination..

"By command of Major General G. W. Smith.
(Signed) "JASPER S. WHING,
"Major A. A. A.

"This flag is four by five and a half feet; gold stars, blue cross-stripes, red ground, yellow edged trimming, one and a half inches broad; white binding next the staff, in which eyelet holes are worked; gold flowing cords bind it to the staff—gold tassels."

Many other articles of great historical value may be found in these newspapers, which are being arranged for permanent binding.

"The Daily Citizen."

Among the collection of papers is a copy of the last issue of "The Daily Citizen," dated July 2, 1863, of Vicksburg, Miss. This paper was edited by J. M. Swords and was printed on wall paper. It was issued all during the siege of Vicksburg, the copy in the museum containing a number of articles relative to that beleaguered city. Evidently the type was set up ready for printing when the city was taken possession of by the federal troops, for in the lower left-hand corner of the page appears the following:

"Note— July 4, 1863: Two days bring about great changed. The banner of the union floats over Vicksburg. General Grant has 'caught the rabbit,' and he did bring his dinner with him. The 'Citizen' lives to see it. For the last time it appears on 'wall paper.' No more will it eulogize mule meat and fricasseed kitten, urge southern warriors to such diet nevermore. This is the last wall paper 'Citizen' and is, excepting this note, from the type as we 'Yankee printers' found them. Copies will be valuable in years to come as a curiosity."

This was in reply to a paragraph at the top of the column, which read as follows:

"On Dit.—The great Ulysees—the Yankee Generalissimo, surnamed Grant, has expressed his intention of dining in Vicksburg on Sunday next, and celebrating the Fourth of July by a grand dinner and so forth. When asked if he would invite General Joe Johnson he said 'No, for fear there will be a row at the table.' Ulysees must get into the city before he dines in it. The way to cook a rabbit is 'first to catch the rabbit,' and etc."

Even with the city surrounded by the enemy the brave spirit of the southern people could indulge in humor and this spirit was caught by the men who took over "The Citizen." In 1901, Mrs. G. E. Lyndon, a charter member of the chapter and who also served as president for several terms, presented to the chapter the camp chair belonging to Benjamin F. Wade, of Virginia, and used by him during the entire war. One thing which never fails to attract the attention of visitors to the museum is a sheet of paper from which Confederate paper was made; also a sheet of bond paper and a slip of palm from the tree placed in the hall in Charleston, S. C., and under which secession was declared. Many newspaper clippings pertaining to historical events are being arranged for a scrap book. One of these, a dispatch from New Orleans to The Atlanta Journal, dated December 11, 1889, gives a graphic description of the funeral of Jefferson Davis.

Funeral Exercises.

In describing the funeral exercises the correspondent says in part, as follows: "The floral offerings surpass in beauty and design anything that has ever been seen before in the south, the prided home of flowers. Among the most noticeable from an 'unknown' was a wreath of moss and leaves with a card giving this reading:

"'The poor widow's mite to the chief of our cherished Confederates.'"

With this clipping is a piece of black crepe pinned to a short length of white satin ribbon bearing the words:

"In Memoriam—Jefferson Davis."

Tourists from many states have visited the museum and have been quite enthusiastic over the splendid collection of things pertinent to the rise and fall of the Confederacy. It is now opened only by request, but the chanter hopes at an early date to have the room open to visitors at least two days per week.

Keep History Straight, Urged By Mrs. Lane

The following article is from the pen of Miss Annie M. Lane, who collects data for the American Historical association, and is historian for life of the Last Cabinet chapter, U. D. C. She resides in Washington, Ga., and is familiar with the traditions and facts regarding the visit of Mr. Davis to Washington. Captain M. H. Clark, the last acting treasurer of the Confederacy,, gives the story in full of the departure of President Davis from Richmond, Va., his stay in Washington, Ga., and his capture at Irwinville, Ga. To pay the debts of the Confederacy, and to distribute the Confederate species the last cabinet meeting was held. Every order is accompanied by a receipt from the party receiving their money at this time. This and many other interesting facts I have copied from the treasurer's books, and with his sworn testimony that the truth might be shown. Captain Clark says: "As we journeyed from Richmond our first stop was at Danville, Va., next at Greensboro, N. C., then we stopped at Charlotte, N. C., arriving at Abberille, S. C., on the morning of May 2, 1865. After we had crossed the Savannah river on a pontoon bridge, we fed our horses and had breakfast.

Colonel Burton had left us previously to join Mrs. Davis in Washington, Ga., where she and her son awaited the coming of Mr. Davis. They were the guests while there of Dr. Fielding Ficklen's family. On the night of May 5, 1865, the last cabinet meeting of the Confederacy was held in an upper room of the old building which was a branch of the state bank at that time. Dr. Robertson and his family were living in the bank building, and Mr. Davis took dinner with them on May 5. Next morning Colonel William Preston Johnston informed me that Mr. Reagan had had me appointed treasurer to take charge of all treasury matters and I was ordered to report to him, and on so doing was handed my commission which is now before me as I write and reads as follows: "Washington, Ga., May 6, 1865. H. M. Clark, Esq., is hereby appointed acting treasurer of the Confederate States, and is authorized to act as such during the absence of the treasurer. (Signed) Jefferson Davis."

Returning to my wagon train to get some necessary articles President Davis rode up with his party and there spoke his farewell to me. The treasury train arrived soon after President Davis left, and I had to report to General Basil W. Duke, who was encamped at the Mineral spring about one mile out from Washington, Ga. He turned the whole treasury department over to me there. Selecting the shade of a large elm tree as the "treasury dept." I commenced my duties there as "acting treasurer of C. S." (He tells of the amount of money paid out and gives the receipts as signed by each man who received money.) Knowing that the whole country would be filled with spies, Mr. Davis thought it best to travel with as little display as possible. On the morning of Thursday, May 6, with a single companion, he rode out of Washington, Ga., bound south. Just after dark on the night of May 4 Judge Reagan and a small party left Washington, and overtook Mr. Davis some time during Friday.

Mrs. Davis and the children followed in their carriage driven by John Davis, the young negro who had brought Mrs. Davis from Richmond. They had with them a covered wagon with provisions, etc. After leaving Washington, Ga., on May 6, Mr. Davis spent the night just over the line of Taliaferro county. On the night of the 6th he slept at the home of Mr. Lee Warthen in Washington county, Georgia. On the 7th of May he slept at the home of E. J. Blackshear about 10 miles from Dublin, Ga., Laurens county. His next stop was at Eastman on the 8th, then to Wilcox county he went and spent the night at Abbeville, Ga., which was the 9th of May. On the 10th of May he was captured at Irwinville, in Irwin county.

Miss Lane's article gives an account of the capture of Mr. Davis and family, also the capture of Judge Reagan, Burton N. Harrison, Francis R. Lubbick nd Colonel W. T. Johnson, who were brought to Macon and delivered to General Wilson. Judge Reagan who was postmaster general of the Confederacy in his "Memoirs," gives an interesting account of the flight and capture of President Davis and his incarceration in Fortress Monroe. There a newspaper correspondent stealing the inscription from Dante's Inferno, wrote above the door of President Davis' cell: "He who enters here leaves hope behind." Providence ordered it otherwise and Mr. Davis lived to be honored by his people and to give to the world his great book, "The Rise and Fall of the Confederate Government."

The last Cabinet chapter, U. D. C., presents in this issue pages from the history of Wilkes county during the late sixties in the dramatic mood, in which that period transfigured men into great living personalities, who will remain silhouetted against the sky of our national life as long as lovers of idealistic stories find in these facts of history poetic images as absorbing in interest as knights of romance.

Catoosa Chapter U. D. C. Organized by President.

During a visit to her sister, Mrs. R. L. Magill, in Ringgold last week, Mrs. W. Trox Bankston, president of Georgia division, U. D. C., assisted in the organization of a new U. D. C. chapter, which will be called the Catoosa chapter. The following officers were elected: President, Mrs. M. D. Costephens, vice president, Miss Carrie Green; second vice president, Mrs. R. L. Magill; recording secretary, Miss Frankie Edwards; treasurer, Mrs. Olin Merritt; registrar, Mrs. Lorah Graham; chaplain, Mrs. J. W. Green; historian, Mrs. W. E. Bryan.

Between 1906 and 1926, rising standards of medical education created a difficult situation for smaller medical schools and the number of medical colleges in this country dropped from 162 to 80.

'Drama of the Lost Cause' Told By Dr. Toomey on Today's Page.

BY DR. J. M. TOOMEY.

In the dark days of 1865, just before the surrender of General J. E. Johnston, President Jefferson Davis left Charlotte, N. C. He was accompanied by a troop of two thousand mounted men, his cabinet (with the exception of two members), his personal staff and a specie train, part of which is said to have contained the property of the banks of Virginia, being shipped southward after the fall of Richmond. After a journey of easy stages through South Carolina, President Davis and his command reached the banks of the Savannah river on May 3, 1865. Early in the morning of the following day Jefferson Davis crossed the Savannah, and entered Wilkes county, Georgia, the land of his forefathers. It was in this county that his parents lived until just a few months prior to his birth, leaving here for their new home in Mississippi. Then, too, in the churchyard at Phillip's Mill church, in the southwestern part of this county, lie in unmarked graves the mortal remains of his grandfather, Samuel Davis, and other ancestral relatives.

President Davis was accompanied on his entry into Washington, the county seat of Wilkes, by a company of cavalry, part of his cabinet and his personal staff; the rest of the original command he had left on the Carolina side of the Savannah river; the secretary of war, Breckinridge, remaining with them. During the next day, May 5, a cabinet meeting was held, and a requisition for money was made by Mr. Breckinridge to make a partial payment to the cavalrymen who were stationed on the Savannah. This requisition may have prompted the writing of the last order of the Confederate government, which is as follows:

"May 5, 1865.

"Major R. J. Moses, C. S., will pay $10,000, the amount of bullion appropriated to Q. M. department of the secretary of war to Major R. R. Wood.

"By order of Q. M. general.
"W. F. ALEXANDER,
"Major and Asst. to Q. M. Gen."

The receipt of this requisition is also made:

"Washington, Ga.,
"May 5, 1865.

"Received from Major R. J. Moses three boxes estimated to contain $10,000 in bullion. This has not been weighed or counted and is to be opened before two commissioned officers and a certificate of content made, which certificate is to be forwarded to Major R. J. Moses and by the amount certified to the undersigned is to be bound.

"R. R. WOOD,
"Major and Q. M."

Visits Washington.

While in Washington, Ga., President Davis was the guest of J. J. Robertson, who lived in the old Heard house, and it was in this building that the last cabinet meeting of the Confederate States of America was held. Mrs. Davis, who had preceded her husband into the county seat of Wilkes, was a welcomed visitor at the home of Dr. Ficklen, which is now standing on the southeast corner of Water street and Alexander avenue. This old mansion, whose halls are now so silent, was once the center of the social activities of the aristocratic town of Washington. On its spacious verandas, in ante-bellum days, the belles and beaux of the neighborhood would gather, and influenced by a soft southern moon gleaming through the magnificent oaks on the front lawn, have whispered of other things save war. Today as this old home stands, in its dilapidated state, it is a fitting memorial to the shattered hopes and cherished dreams of a "just but lost cause." While the Confederate leaders were in Washington, the gold of the specie train was made secure in the vaults in the Heard building and in a basement crypt in a mercantile establishment on the south side of the public square. This latter place of safety is now standing, a two-story brick building, little changed exteriorally, with improvements internally; yet these changes do not obliterate the conditions as existed in 1865. This building is now occupied by the city's veteran grocer, W. E. Shelverton. The vault, which is unchanged, is built to the front of the building, in the basement, and extends under the sidewalk, and its one entrance is guarded by a heavy iron door. The writer had occasion to accompany Thomas Camp, now residing in Atlanta, on an inspection of this cellar. Mr. Camp, who was one of the guards detailed to protect the funds in this vault, states that, due to narrowness of the staircase which permitted entrance only by single file, he and another guard were sufficient to protect this treasure.

The passage of General Upton, a federal commander, close to Washington en route to Augusta, and the possibility of Washington being invested by the "Yankees," as this was a Confederate depot of supplies, caused Jefferson Davis to hasten his departure. Choosing ten men, since a larger force than that at his command would be necessary for protection against the great numbers of the enemy in this section, and then too a larger escort would be more conspicuous, Jefferson Davis left Washington. He was accompanied by his staff, which was composed of Captain Campbell, of Kentucky; the commander of the escort, Lieutenant Barnwell, of South Carolina, and Colonels F. I. Lubbock, J. T. Wood and W. P. Johnston. Their departure was none too soon as the federal forces quickly followed them southward and this pursuit culminated in the capture of Jefferson Davis near Irwinton, Ga., on May 10, 1865. Secretary Reagan remained in Washington after the departure of Jefferson Davis, for the purpose of transferring the funds of the Confederate government; these funds have been variously estimated but no official figures can be secured. The transfer of the funds was made to a Mr. Semple, a bonded officer of the navy, and his assistant, a Mr. Tidball. The orders to these men were to endeavor to convey this specie from the zone of danger, transport it abroad and place it in the hands of the creditors of the Confederate states. After the disposition of these funds Mr. Reagan rejoined President Davis.

Departure Hastened.

Haste in departure was imperative to this specie train, with hopes of uniting with the force of cavalry on the Savannah, so that protection could be secured through the Carolinas and to the coast; however, this force of armed men, meeting the vanquished soldiers of Johnston's army, and learning of the terms of this surrender, had decided to participate in these terms and consequently had dispersed. This train traveled safely through the day, but on encampment for the night in Lincoln county, about four miles from the Savannah river, the guards were quickly overpowered and the loot of the specie train begun. Tradition states that the robbery was perpetrated by former soldiers of the Confederacy, aided and abetted by people living in this vicinity of the state. When the news of the robbery of the train reached Washington, a band of former Confederate officers and soldiers hastened to the scene with hopes of recovering part of the treasure. They were successful in securing $75,000, which was turned over to the commander of the federal forces in Washington. This money seemingly was lost in "military channels," as no record of its receipt was written in military reports. The federal troops also took a hand in searching for these moneys and held as prisoners men found in the vicinity of the robbery, and even tortured women, thinking that by such cruel and wanton acts information could be secured which would lead to a recovery of greater sums. The total amount of the content of this specie train is not known; it has been variously estimated; however, much of this treasure was stolen and distributed. A bag of gold containing $5,000 was found in the front yard of General Robert Toombs, and in all probability elsewhere like distributions were made. Reports of buried gold and silver bullion have inspired treasure hunters to diligently search among the hills and in the beds of creeks in this section of Lincoln county, with high, but so far as is known, unrealized hopes of uncovering part of the gold and silver which once belonged to the Confederate states of America.

Last Confederate Cabinet Met In Washington, Wilkes County

But their memories e'er shall remain for us
And their names, bright names, without stains for us;
The glory they won shall not wane for us,
In legend and lay
Our heroes in Gray
Shall forever live over again for us.
—A. J. R.

The following article from the minutes of the Last Cabinet chapter, U. D. C., of Washington, Ga., tells of the efforts made by the chapter to preserve the building in which the final meeting of the Confederate cabinet was held.

"In the fall of 1898, the question of buying the property on which stands the Last Confederate Cabinet building was agitated by Wilkes county. At that time it was considered a necessity that the old building should be torn down to make way for the new courthouse, should the county make the purchase. A Daughter of the Revolution, through the local paper, suggested that the building which might be termed the grave of the Confederacy should be saved and placed in the care of the Daughters of the Confederacy. March 17, 1899, 13 ladies met at the residence of Mrs. T. M. Green and organized the Last Cabinet chapter, in commemoration of the 'closing scene of our nation's tragedy.' The charter was secured in April, 1899. The charter members were Mrs. S. C. Sanders, president; Mrs. L. M. Hill, first vice president; Mrs. C. E. Irvin, second vice president; Miss Gertrude Cordes, recording secretary; Mrs. W. M. Sims, treasurer; Mrs. B. S. Irvin, historian. Mrs. G. E. Lyndon, Mrs. E. Y. Hill, Mrs. H. E. Kemme, Mrs. Julia Ficklen, Mrs. F. H. Colley, Mrs. E. F. Andrews.

The members wished to make a brave effort to save the historic building from vandalism. That the place is rich in historical interest, history will verify. It is really the "cradle and the grave of the Confederacy." Many of the early speeches of General Robert Toombs, whose home was in Washington, and who was the prime mover in the cause of secession, were delivered from the balcony of this very building. The town furnishes no adequate auditorium, save the open air, for the eager throngs who were moved by his matchless eloquence. On May 3, 1865, the last meeting of the Confederate cabinet was held in the northwest corner room of the second floor of this building. The president, the secretaries of the war, navy, postoffice and treasury departments were present. The official winding up of these departments declared the end.

Wilkes county bought the property a few months ago for a new courthouse site. The price paid was $8,000. The taxpayers opposed to building a new courthouse at present on account of the increased taxation necessary for the building. It may be a year before there is a change of feeling along this line. This will give the Daughters an opportunity to urge the Georgia division to give this work precedence, because of the urgency of the case, and to bring the matter before the United Daughters of the Confederacy convention in November. The minutes for 1898 report 14,169 members. It is proposed that each chapter of the U. D. C. appropriate one-half of next year's dues of each member to the purchase of the Last Cabinet building. T his plan will secure the property with no additonal tax upon any member, at the same time securing for each Daughter an interest in "that sacred beach on which was stranded as gallant a ship of state as was ever given to the god of storms, the lightning and the gale."

The property, which is on the north side of the public square, can be made self-sustaining, through rents, until the best possible use is decided upon. A bill properly introduced before the legislature will no doubt exempt it from taxation. The Wilkes county courthouse now stands on the site of the Last Cabinet meeting. The member who proposed the preservation of the building was the late Mrs. T. M. Green, a faithful member until her death, of the Last Cabinet chapter, which she helped to organize.

The above article was submitted by Mrs. L. M. Hall, first vice president for 1898.

They were followed by the two bridesmaids, Miss Carrie Hunter, of Quitman, sister of the groom, and Miss Mary Key Dolvin, of Siloam, the bride's cousin, wearing green taffeta gowns, fashioned alike.

The maid of honor, Miss Mabel Copelan, sister of the bride, entered next, wearing pink chiffon.

The little ring bearer, Ray Copelan, nephew of the bride, wearing a smart white satin suit, came down the aisle bearing the two rings on a white satin pillow, followed by the dainty little flower girls, little Misses Josephine Rhodes and Elsie Crutchfield, wearing pink taffeta frocks.

The bride was given in marriage by her brother, John L. Copelan, of Washington, D. C., with whom she entered the church, meeting the groom and his best man, his brother, Russell Hunter, at the altar, where the ceremony was performed by the bride's uncle, Rev. J. J. Copelan, of LaGrange, Ga. The bride was lovely in her bridal gown of lustrous white satin, fashioned with a tight fitting bodice, trimmed with Duchess rose point lace. Her tulle veil was adjusted to her hair by a cap of princess lace held in place by a bandeau of orange blossoms. She carried a shower bouquet of roses and lillies of the valley.

Mr. and Mrs. Hunter left on a wedding journey to Philadelphia and Atlantic City. They will be at home after August 6 at 417 Ruth street, Orlando, Fla.

State University News of Interest.

Athens, Ga., August 4.—Completing the program of entertainments for the 1928 session of the University of Georgia Summer school, dance students, under the direction of Miss Lucile Marsh, dance critic of the New York World and co-director of the Marsh School of Dancing, New York city, who is head of the summer school dance department, presented a pageant based on Milton's "Comus," Tuesday evening. The pageant was staged in the Soule amphitheater and was witnessed by approximately 5,000 people.

With an enrollment of 2,645, which is ahead of last year's enrollment, the first six weeks' session of the university summer school closed Saturday. Another series of courses, lasting three weeks, begin Monday.

Preparatory to the introduction of courses in music this fall, under the direction of Hugh Hodgson, of Athens and Atlanta, an expensive pipe organ is being installed in the chapel this summer. Other changes being made in the chapel will adapt it for use as a Little theater.

With an enrollment of 162 the graduate class in the summer school shows an increase of 52 over the enrollment for 1927. The graduate students have petitioned the chancellor and faculty of the university to offer courses leading to the Ph. D. degree.

An aquatic display, under the direction of Miss Frances E. McNaught, instructor in swimming, was staged by swimming students in the pool of War Memorial hall Wednesday evening. Races, form swimming, diving and stunts were the principal numbers on the program.

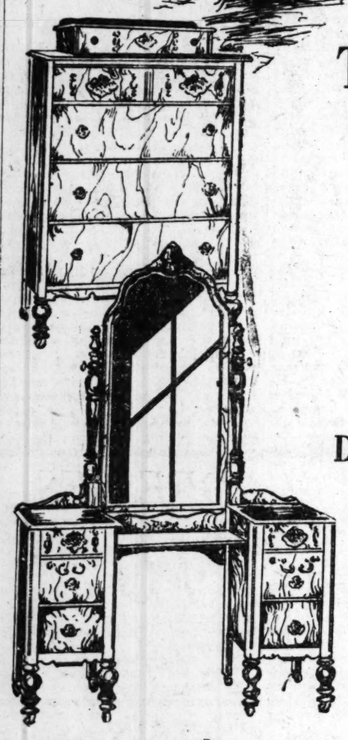

Eighty-one alumni and faculty members of Young Harris college held the first of a series of annual "get-together" banquets at a local hotel, Saturday evening. Approximately 70 of those in attendance were students of the University of Georgia Summer school. Representatives of 15 classes of the small institution were present. Mrs. G. W. Haley, of Elberton, a member of the class of 1894, the third class to graduate from Young Harris, was the oldest alumnae present. The class of 1926 had the largest representation.

Among those prominently affiliated with the Atlanta school system who are enrolled in the university summer school are H. Reid Hunter, assistant superintendent; Miss Maggie Soloman, principal of the Formwalt school; Miss Annie Chapman and Miss Opal Shaw, all of whom are teaching here; and Miss Hattie Rainwater, supervisor of elementary science; Miss Mary Holder, director of art, Atlanta Normal school, and Misses Minnie Bradberry and Leonora Walker, critic instructors at the normal school. About 35 other Atlanta teachers are here taking courses.

'Marriage' Is Ably Discussed By Mrs. Franklin of Tennille

(Editor's note. The short story written by Mrs. George Franklin, of Tennille, was read before the June meeting of Fine Arts club, of Tennille, when the program of original numbers was featured, and Mrs. Franklin was assigned to write a short story. The story is entitled "Marriage," and the question involves as to which will stand the test, the traditional or the companionate?)

BY MRS. GEORGE FRANKLIN, of Tennille.

In the majority of young people of today the very struggle for life has become transvalued into a pursuit of pleasure mainly. Some argue that environment, whether one revolts against it or gives ready adaptation to it, cannot be the cause of the perplexing problems of today. But in the story of the four lives told below environment play no small part.

"Celia! Celia! You wouldn't dare," cried little Mary Ross.

"Who, me? You bet your boots I will. I'd try anything once," was the answer.

"But Celia you are too big to slide off that roof, and you might break your neck, besides yonder's Jimmy Baxim, he'll see you."

"Well, well! That fine! I'm tickled pink that mama's darling will see the show."

A good-looking boy of 17 or 18 walking fast was coming in the yard as a voice hailed him from the housetop.

"Hello, old-timer! Want to take a joy ride? Oh, say, you done any chores for mama today?"

"Shut up and come down from there," the boy thundered, and then beseechingly pleaded, "Oh, honey, sit down, then crawl to the corner. I'll get a ladder and help you."

"Old 'fraid cat!" was her scathing retort.

Celia was a great tease and one day she had heard Jimmy's mother tell him to do something, and his reply was "I don't feel like it," so ever since then she never lost a chance to rag him.

Now that little imp of perversity on the top-most rim of the old Ross house roof teetered back and forth on her precarious perch like a tight-rope dancer as she chanted a little doggerel she had made up.

"Little Jimmy Baxim, when his mammy ax-im.
Ain't you gwinter bring in some wood?
Then Jimmy answered slowly, Oh, ma, I'm pooly, I'd bring it in if I could."

"Look out, mama's precious, stand back and see me do the Jack dive!" cried the undaunted one as she shot like a catapult down the steep roof and landed in a tumbled heap at the boy's feet. She lay there so still, with a face so deathly white; yet, Mary though she was shamming, for so often had she done other similar daring feats, then pretended she was dead. But Jimmy with a face no less pale gathered his little sweetheart in his arms and ran to the house crying, "Oh, Mrs. Ross! Phone the doctor quick. I'm afraid Celia is killed."

Seemed Disconcerted.

Presently the doctor's coupe dashed up, followed shortly by a limousine from which Mrs. Thorne descended, and for once in her life this dashing creature seemed disconcerted. "What's the matter doctor? Can't you do something? Are you going to stand there holding her wrist and let her die?" Dr. Boynton looked her calmly in the face and answered: "She has only fainted from a broken ankle. If you could arrange to be with her more yourself perhaps these things wouldn't happen." The proud beauty relieved of the mental strain, merely shrugged her shoulders. Her supercilious glance around the humble cottage seemed to say she wished her daughter removed from such unpretentious surroundings, and remarking to the doctor as she passed out, "I'll send Johnson back with the car, you phone for nurse and bring Cecelia over as soon as possible."

Mrs. Thorne and Mrs. Ross occupied entirely different niches in social life of the city. The former much younger than her millionaire husband, was the pride and joy of the aged banker. Nothing was too good, no riches too great for him to lay at her feet, and with the perversity of some natures she despised him and passed her time dancing, drinking and gambling with the fastest set in town. Still because of her husband's influence she was tolerated, even frowned upon by some. Mrs. Ross was a widow who had to struggle to make ends meet. Gentle and refined, she sought society's pleasures but devoted her life to the bringing up of her lovely young daughter. Mary was appropriately named—a replic of her mother, sweet, unassuming and unselfish. Now Celia was christened "CeCelia," a misnomer for she bore neither looks nor traits like that saint and she too was a duplicate of her own mother. These two girls, although their social status was so different, had been from earliest childhood inseparable friends. Many were the escapades of Celia's that Mary had prevented from becoming serious, always she and Jimmy stood by in any emergency.

After the above mentioned accident people said, "Well, maybe this will teach that hoydenish Celia Thorne a lesson!" It did, but not in the way it was expected. The ankle was a long time healing and as she lay in her rose and blue boudoir receiving her young friends she begun to realize that she was pretty and popular with the boys, and so at that early age she begun to apply her captivating arts. Time passed; everything money could buy was purchased for her pleasure and she lived for self-enjoyment solely; the only unselfish thing about her was her love for her devoted friend Mary.

The Baxim's were people of much means and James, the only son, was the idol of their hearts. Strange to say, in spite of the pampered life he had lived he was very ambitious and after leaving college he went into his father's business. He was an anomaly among rich men's sons—one who chose to carve his own name. He had always worshiped Celia, but Mary he looked upon as "just a good scout."

World War.

Then the world war called for every young, abled bodied man and he was among the first to go. After the struggle was over he emerged wounded but with a whole body. He was a hollow-eyed specimen of what had been a physical giant and his were the spectral eyes of quenched fires, but at 25 quenched fires have phoenix powers of hot rebirth. At the end of seeming eternities he at last stood on the deck of a transport bearing him home. What did home mean? Father, mother and Celia! For some reason while he had lain on his cot at the hospital she had seemed an elusive creature, more a phantom of a dream; while strange to say the piquant face of little Mary Ross stood out as clearly as a picture before his eyes. He purchased a home paper as soon as he landed and the first item that drew his attention was a lurid account of a dance Celia had given. War and its casualties never touched that butterfly. Now he realized why he had deliberately put her out of his mind during the years of horror—he knew she had not changed.

After a long talk with home folks his first thought was of her and making himself as presentable as his amatiated frame would allow, he went to the big mansion on the hill. The shiny palace, more ornate than ever, seemed so unlike a home, it struck a chill through his heart. Yet the sight of Celia made the old fascination grip him afresh. Why did the liveliness of this girl break over him, making everything unsteady before his eyes? All her charms were sweeping him from his feet as the tide-rip sweeps a weakened swimmer. Her cold, indifferent greeting was quite a contrast to that of Mary's, who had on instantly beholding him, grasped both his hands in hers and with her face beaming, had cried: "Oh, Jimmy! Thank God you are back safe and sound."

Still so perverse is the masculine mind, he allowed the charm of the selfish beauty to fasten its tentacles around his heart. Not being physically able to attend to business, he did nothing much but day-dream; and all his dreams were of her. So he planned and built a home, a beautiful nest that any girl should be proud to own. Mary watched the progress of the work with eager interest as she thought, "What a lucky girl Celia is!" But the fair Celia evasively dallied along with her infatuated lover. The role of home-making didn't appeal to her; she sought more glaring pleasure. So time went on and as her daring ventures with the fast set, in which petting parties, hip flasks, and road-house all night frolics were the chief diversions, James became morose and watched with ever-increasing uneasiness the blasting of his hopes. But it took a tragedy to bring him to himself. Mellowed by the glow of shaded lights that gleamed at tables half hidden by luxurious palms and ferns, the roof garden of the magnificent Hotel Cliff Crest presented a scene calculated to give pleasure and happiness to anyone. Perched upon the mountain, high above the city, was this ultra-modern hostelry, and from which the towers and buildings far below were transmuted by the moon's radiance into palaces of beauty, but that night clouds obscured the golden disk and the scene below looked like a jumbled black shadow; still the crowd of joy seekers was not lessened.

There were in that vast throng those who took no part in the pleasures; theirs were the menial tasks, to silently serve the wants of the patrons. Numbers of college girls in order to help with their school expenses had engaged as maids and waitresses to cater to the whims of the idle rich. Among these girls, who nightly as she served, had watched the actions of her friend, for Celia was always there the gayest of the gay. Many anxious frowns drew Mary's brows together over the others indiscretions. She knew that Celia was fast, was a man-hunter, a charmer of susceptible victims, yet in her heart she felt the girl had never "gone beyond the pale." In that paradise of shaded greenery and low lights as Mary passed a very dusky and etherial alcove she saw Celia reclining on a lounge, and between her fingers dangled a gold-tipped cigarette. Soft syllables fell now and then from her lips as she hung breathless on the words of a young married rake who had paid her assiduous attention for some time. A match flared up and by its light Mary saw the girl's eyes did not look right; those usually clear sapphire eyes had just the hard glitter they had held when she came home one morning after an all night party. Through the open palms snatches of their conversation floated out. The man was pleading, "Kiss me, Celie," she heard him beg. "You'll go, won't you, dearest? We'll have a glorious time. Allison and Marie are going and we will round out the night." A second match flared up and as the man held it to the girl's cigarette the watcher saw a shapely arm go up about his neck.

Mary was panic-stricken; here was a new and highly disturbing element—the erstwhile charming huntress who invariably hurled her darts at any loose male, had herself succumbed. The roue had applied his arts well. Flaming youth on such reckless pleasure bent seemed like Hollywood at work at Cliff Crest. The charmer was herself charmed. It never dawned on Mary that she was eaves-dropping. She saw and heard the whole ghastly affair. It was like a picture and now the actors were moving, were leaving the room, the girl unsteady, almost staggering, while the man walked jauntily, his mien triumphant over his success. Mary stood rooted to the spot, mentally and physically incapacitated to act. The sound of a door closing drove like a red hot iron into her brain, then the whir of a rapidly starting motor galvanized her into action. "O, Heavenly Father what shall I do? O, Lord save her. If there were someone to help me! Oh, if I could only find Jimmy." She dashed from group to group and at last found him with a party of friends. "O, Jimmy, where is your car? Take me to the Crow's Neck quick—just as quick as you can."

"Mary, are you crazy? Do you know what the Crow's Neck inn is?" "I don't care, I tell you I've got to go." Some inner consciousness warned him a crisis was at stake and he acquiesced. The little car shot out of the grounds at a terrific pace. "O, Jimmy, faster, faster! See the light of that car as it flashes around the curve, well, Celia is in that car and they are going to the Crow's Neck for the night and the whole party is 'lit.' O, Jimmy, we've got to save her." James sat silent, his brows drawn in a frown of despair and blazing anger. Ever higher up the mountain road raced the little car; then the red light of the big car ahead disappeared. As they rounded the treacherous turn at Knob Hill Mary's frantic fingers clutched the steering wheel. "Stop, for God sake stop! Something's happened!" James brought his car to a standstill just beyond where the big car lay overturned down a steep embankment.

Something moved in the road, wavered and tried to rise; they rushed over, it was the girl Marie frenzied with fright, shrieking "Oh, move the car! They're in it! Oh, God they are all killed but me!" James goaded into a fresh burst of anxiety, took one look at the ground ten feet below him, then swung himself into space landing with a tremendous thud. The moon did not afford much assistance, yet in it's uncertain light three objects showed up dully. The two men hopelessly crushed were dead, but in the other inert form there was a faint heartbeat, a fluttering breath. James tenderly lifted the crushed form in his arms and carried it to his car.

"The car! Oh, my God, the car is burning, shrieked Marie frantically." James knew the still forms of the men were beyond hope. Yet he could not leave them to be charred to cinders. He hesitated briefly while the terror of the girl threatened to rob him of sanity. Then he picked up the body of one who was heavier than he and begun the laborious climb. Laying it down he started for the doctor. "Quick! Quick! screamed the girl. He hurried desperately, but the weight became heavier every moment, threatening to drag him down. As he reached the middle of the ascent his breath was coming in short staccato gasps, still he kept on. Lurching like a drunken man he pulled himself over the ridge. Scarcely had he put his burden down ere a terrific explosion shattered the silence like the crack of doom, the night sky was lit up with gigantic tongues of flame and the air was filled with flying fragments as the tank exploded.

Made In Silence.

The drive back was made in silence. Each felt that this would be the last of the beautiful girl who had grasped so eagerly at every passing joy. After taking the bent and broken form home James carried Mary on to her mother. She felt she could not after the gruesome horrors of the last hour go back to the gay hostelry where the music and the laughter went on in spite of the tragedy so near. Where young girls and married women half intoxicated bent and swayed in the arms of men no less drunken. Where there was much flaunting of beauty in the eyes of every one with an abandon which filled the quivering air with new pulsations; it was all so inescapably suggestive.

In the days that followed James dropped in often to see Mary; at first he was distrait, the shock had seemed to stun him, but she whose own troubles were legion never failed to comfort and cheer him. One day quite suddenly he asked, "Mary, have I been blind? Did it take that horrible tragedy to lift the scales from my eyes?"

"Why, what do you mean, Jimmy?" The words were spoken so low that he hardly heard them and her face was turned away.

"Oh, you are the truest, most loyal friend anyone ever had, who but you would have been willing to venture into a den in iniquity to save another girl? For the first time that night I seemed to see your true worth. I oughn't to tell you this while that poor girl lies no near to death but Mary it's you that I love. Can't you see I at last know."

"Oh, but Jimmy you have always loved Celia, it's just because you are grieved and feel the need of love and sympathy," the brave lips trembled. His kindly face smiled at her affectionately, "No, dear, it was just a fascination, she charmed me just as she charmed others, but thank God the spell is broken. Now little girl think about yourself some."

Mary's face was transfigured. The shadow in her eyes was replaced by the light of joyousness and the boy could see that the light which looked out at him from her honest eyes was the light which would shine forever. Two marriages are the outcome of the intricacies of these tangled lives. While we cannot get away from the immutable and inexorable laws of nature, still so subtle are the forces that knit human relationship that no matter of vital importance could affect either of the participants in this strange partnership without bearing upon the destiny of the other. Will either or both stand the test? Only the exigencies of the years will bring the revelation. Miss Celia Thorne miraculously recovered, and like the incident of the slide down the roof, so the tragic auto accident made very little change in her life. She is still the giddy seeker of pleasure, but being the gilded heiress some are ready to gloss over her escapades. In her sumptuous palace of splendor she has taken up another fad. With her cynicism as to morality and with an intention to "change marriage from the sacramental to a more elastic form" she has united with a dissolute young fop and is giving the companionate marriage a trial. Will the experiment prove itself?

The new house on the hill is now a happy home and the cards of its little mistress, Mary Ross, bear the name of Mrs. James Peyton Baxim. So in the traditional marriage this couple gave themselves to each other "for better or for worse, 'till death do us part." Hand in hand they go forth into the future for theirs is the complete and perfect understanding of a faith and love that will endure,

"Till the world grows old,
And the stars grow cold.
And the leaves of the Judgment
Book unfold."

Fourth District President Gives Report on Page

Mrs. W. R. Jones, president of the fourth district of the state federation, gives a report on the official club page today of her district, which is composed of Carroll, Coweta, Chattahoochee, Harris, Heard, Marion, Meriwether, Muscogee, Talbot and Troup counties. She reports:

"There are 23 clubs and one city federation in the district. The annual meeting was held in Greenville, October 28, 1928, and was a most enjoyable and instructive meeting. Mrs. A. P. Brantley, Mrs. Alonzo Richardson and Mrs. A. H. Brenner were honor guests and gave inspirational addresses. The clubs of the district felt and expressed keen regret that Mrs. Bird's term of office expired at this meeting, as she had served so faithfully and had an organization in splendid working order.

"The first meeting of the executive board was held April 14 at Greenville—the guest of the Greenville Woman's club. The members present were full of enthusiasm. Reports were given and plans discussed to further the work of the federation along all lines in the district. There are five clubhouses in the district. Eight clubs are raising funds to build and the Talbotton Woman's club will soon complete a beautiful community house. The old Levert college was bought through the kindness of the Straus brothers of New York, whose father, Oscar Straus, was born and reared in Talbotton. In a few months this old college will develop into a beautiful community house through the efforts of the Talbotton Woman's club. Manchester Woman's club is also busy raising funds to build, having an unique plan whereby the members are buying stock in the building.

"Civic work is reported from nearly every club in the district—the clubs observing "clean-up" week, planting trees, shrubs and flowers to beautify club grounds, highways, etc., and making parks where there were ugly, unsightly places. Chipley's Woman's club planted 10 pecan trees on the clubhouse lot as a memorial to the boys of the community who served in the world war. Four clubs sponsored cooking schools. A majority of the clubs report federation days observed.

Citizenship Studied.

"Citizenship is being studied and practically nearly all members are registered. Legislation is stressed and clubs are urged to be on the alert for bills pertaining to public welfare. Many telegrams and letters have gone to legislators in regard to bills sponsored by the Federation. Reports from practically all clubs in the district show active work for schools, especially Union Improvement club, Gay Woman's club, Newnan's Woman's club, Talbotton Woman's club, Greenville New Era club, Greenville Woman's club, and Chipley Woman's club. Chipley Woman's club has just sponsored the district school meet. Five gift scholarships have been reported.

"The greatest—the most universal work of the fourth district comes under the head of public health and child welfare, every club in the district reporting great interest in the work of this department. The Newnan Woman's club maintains entirely the charity ward of the Newnan hospital. Other clubs report boxes sent to state sanitarium. Health clinics were held in Columbus and LaGrange clubs. Nurses were hired to give instructions to mothers on diet, personal hygiene and sanitation in the home. Tag day was sponsored by Columbus club to secure funds for the betterment of health conditions and $682.39 was realized from this. Three Columbus clubs sponsored milk stations, one club furnishing 200 bottles of milk daily to undernourished children.

"Through the splendid work of Mrs. S. A. Keefer, district chairman of state sanitarium, a victrola was sent to the children's ward of the sanitarium. Columbus reports a chairman of the juvenile court department, and help in various to aid the children who comes under the jurisdiction of this court. Thanksgiving and Christmas dinners were given them by the Federation women, clothing was furnished and often times homes secured. Warm Springs Woman's club, besides work in other departments, is supporting a little girl in one of the homes for friendless children, and every year sponsor the county memorial exercises.

"In the department of fine arts much is being accomplished. Programs of music and literature is being used by every club. Art exhibits have been held. The Three Arts league, formed in Columbus, sponsored several wonderful artists in entertainments given. Columbus clubs are leading in this work, sponsoring also the centennial which was celebrated in that city last week. Tag day for this again netted them a nice sum—$1,000. LaGrange Woman's club also did wonderful work along this line as well as in other departments, sponsoring musicals, lectures, etc. The club room has been made a social center for young people, American Legion, disabled veterans, Mother clubs, etc. LaGrange was presented the banner at the district meeting for the best report given. The West Point Woman's club reports fine work in every department sponsored a cooking school and pure food show which added quite a nice sum to the building fund. The Carrollton Business and Professional Woman's club, the Carrollton Home Demonstration council, the Bowden Community club are very active in all departments, the Bowden Community club owning a beautiful clubhouse. The fourth district has the distinction of having the oldest chartered club in the state, which is the Woman's Reading club of Columbus."

Mrs. Rambo Addresses Club Institute on Appropriate Topic

This is the second installment of the speech made by Mrs. Robert K. Rambo, second vice president of Georgia federation, at the club institute held in July at the University of Georgia, entitled "National Consciousness Leading to International Interest and Understanding." She said:

The American Community.

"The major project to be fostered by the General Federation during the new administration is the American community. It is most timely. During Mrs. Sherman's regime we had the American home, and the relation of the home and community was never been closer than it is today. A German lecturer recently in this country, insists that the United States is ruled by more petticoat government than ever before. I would like to know 'how he got that way.' Nobody is wearing petticoats any more. Yet we have to acknowledge that women are 'stepping out.' A small club in Georgia was recently given honorable mention by the General Federation for an outstanding accomplishment, and it was that this club, composed of 17 members, built a club house by their own labors, yes with their own hands. The most remarkable thing about it to me was that it was possible to find in one town 17 women who could drive nails with a hammer. Ouch! Don't you know there were a lot of sore thumbs. We are proud of them. It was the Woman's club of Round Oak, Ga. I hope some of them are here at the institute.

"It has been said, 'The most extravagant luxury of civilization is bad government.' Then we are indeed the most extravagant nation on earth. Let me give you an example. Do you know that in a little over fifteen years over $76,000,000 has been spent on highways in Georgia, and yet we have the worst roads of any state in the union? You do not have to take my word for that statement. The automobile tax for the first six months of this year, 1928, I mean for all motor vehicles, was $3,773,559.02—more than the total revenue for all of 1927. More than enough to retire road bonds without a cent of extra taxation. Yet, as you know, everybody knows, I am sorry to say, Georgia is notorious for bad roads. How long are you going to stand for this? Women want protection for their children, both educationally and morally. With the ballot in your hands, you can dictate the best schools and police protection and good roads. There has been handed to you the most powerful weapon of the day—the ballot. What are you doing with it? You are slackers if you do not use it.

"Why should intelligent, home-loving, child-bearing women allow a handful of pot-boiling politicians to conspire and put into your city government or boards or education, or in your lawmaking bodies, state and national, men of scant education and no knowledge of the principles and methods of government or education?

"We are under a minority government. Whose fault is it? What have you done with your ballot? Someone may say this is not club work. I say it is. Let me remind you, a few years ago a well-known woman's magazine offered a monetary prize to the federated club that had rendered the greatest service to its community during the year. A club in Rockhill, Ill., won the prize, and their supreme service to their community was that they had rid their city of a corrupt gang of politicians, who had been running the town for years, defying every effort to unseat them. The clubwomen cleaned up the town and installed in office men and women of intelligence and honor. It seems that this is woman's work, if the men can't do it. Women, think for yourselves! Do not let someone lead you around by the nose. 'Ware the demagogue, man or woman.

"'Ideals are moral dynamite,' someone has said. Let me beg you, do not be afraid to have ideals. 'He enslaves his children's children, who compromises with evil.' Remember that the times call for thoughtful, unselfish men and women to serve in high places. The south, our country, thank God, is coming into her own. The eyes of the nation are turned to us. The south is self-contained, it raises its own raw products. The Manufacturers Record, again I quote it, says there has been an increase of six hundred and thirty-five million dollars in the wealth of the south. More than half of this was derived from the south's raw product, cotton. The future of the south is beyond the dreams of avarice, and we citizens of Georgia must prepare to meet the changing conditions. I read somewhere that 'Statesmanship is seeing where God is going, and then getting things out of His way.'

"Manufactories of all kind are being brought here; we hear of new ones almost every day, and with them will come an increase in population. This is the growing end of the country. Georgia has gained 500,000 citizens since 1900—a 20 per cent increase in one generation. With the mills will come the foreign laborer, the immigrant. The south has practically been free of the immigrant problem. We must be prepared for them, or it will be the worse for us. We must be prepared to give them the opportunity to become good citizens. We must make good citizens of them. The conferring of citizenship on the aliens who come to this country is made too easy, it is too perfunctory. The foreigner should be carefully taught what it means to be an American citizen, and he should be required to earn the honor. In the way it is done now the foreigner does not know what it is all about, half the time, and as a consequence we have a good many undesirable citizens in this country. We are citizens of the greatest nation in the world, and yet we hand out the precious gift of citizenship almost as we would give candy to a child who has promised to be good.

When Rome governed the then known world, at the beginning of the Christian era, to be a Roman citizen was the highest honor a man could attain because for one thing, the rights and privileges conferred by Roman citizenship, and it could only be obtained at a great price. You remember when the Roman soldier asked Paul if he really was a Roman citizen, and Paul answered "Yes," then the soldier said, "I bought my citizenship at a great price, and Paul replied, "But I was born a Roman citizen." Do we appreciate our citizenship?

International.

There is a word we hear quite often now, interdependence. By reason of the many inventions that annihilate time and space, the world has grown smaller. No nation is isolated; what happens to a people across the world today is told us at our breakfast tables tomorrow morning. The cry of the newsboy is heard in nearly every port in the world. The Rev. Stanley Jones, missionary to India, says the world is a vast whispering gallery, and all the nations are listening in on each other. This is true. The world has gone traveling, for one thing. Thousands are going to Europe, the Orient and around the world every year. There are students in the colleges of the United States from all over the globe. Seventy-one nationalities are represented in these students. In 1925 there were 7,500 students in the colleges of this country from Asia, Africa, Latin America, etc. At present there are 10 Chinese girl students at Wesleyan college, Macon. The widow of General Sun Yat Sen, of China, is an alumna of Wesleyan, and there are others I could recall. A young man from Jerusalem is a member of the Emory Glee club. We are beginning to realize the "spiritual solidarity of the human race." In 1927 there were 60 clubs outside of the United States federated with the general federation.

Some of you have read the book, Mother India, which tells of the tragedy of child marriage and child widows in India. It is horrible, but can we afford to criticise our sister nation? Listen, 750,000 persons now living in America have been child brides or have married child brides. By child bride is meant one who is less than 16 years old. In 14 states the legal minimum age at which a child can marry, with the parents consent, is 12 years for the girls and 14 for the boys. In many states the legal marriageable age is lower than the age at which these children are allowed to become wage earners. Nine states recognize 14 as the legal age for girls and 17 for boys, while only one state, New Hampshire, requires a girl to be 18 before she can legally marry. All honor to the enlightened state of New Hampshire. The census of 1920 shows 5,554 females who were married under 15 years of age, many of them having married at the age of 11. The same census lists 825 girls under 15 as widows or divorced. That was eight years ago. I shudder to think what the next census will disclose. Here is tragedy at our very door. Yet this is a Christian country, sending missionaries to India. They can well say to us, "Physician, heal thyself!"

Moving pictures are being shown all over the world today, and these pictures, most of them made in America, are supposed to portray American life. How would you like to be judged by the average motion picture? And when you remember that the picture shown in these foreign countries are not the best pictures, then we need to feel ashamed. Next time you go to see a picture portraying crime, sex, etc., just imagine yourself a Chinese, Japanese, East Indian or any Oriental person, or Occidental for that matter, sitting in your home theater, viewing the life in America as set forth by the camera. What would you think? I am surprised that any nation has much respect for us.

What are you doing about motion pictures?

We are living in a great age, the greatest the world has ever known; the greater our privilege, the greater our responsibilities. Are we women, living up to our heritage? Let me in all reverence remind you that the answer to all our problems today, even the cause and cure of war, and there is no other answer, is the commandment our Savior gave: "Thou shalt love the Lord, thy God, with all thy heart, with all thy soul and with all thy strength; and thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself."

Seventh District Clubs Engage In Summer Activities

Mrs. Herbert E. Hague, president of the seventh district, was the guest of Mrs. S. V. Sanford, vice president of the state federation, during the club institute held in Athens during June.

The Dalton Woman's club has continued its series of bridge parties during the summer months, with increasing attendance.

The play given by members of the History club, Kingston, at its June meeting, was so well received that it is planned to give it as part of an evening entertainment at the school auditorium in September to raise funds to complete furnishing the library.

The entertainment committee of the Chatsworth Woman's club, composed of Mrs. Fred I. Davidson, Mrs. Jesse M. Sellers and Mrs. J. Roy McGinty, sponsored a benefit bridge party at the home of Mrs. McGinty. Top score was made by Miss Sara Davis, who received a handpainted bonbon dish. Mrs. Morgan Quarles was presented with a novelty powder puff as consolation.

Those playing were Mrs. Sellers, Mrs. M. D. Jefferson, Mrs. John Hemphill, Mrs. W. A. West, Mrs. Quarles, Mrs. M. P. Hammond, Mrs George Colvard, Mrs. W. B. Farrar, Mrs. Davidson, Mrs. Leslie McCollum, of Cedartown, Mrs. E. H. Dickie, Mrs. H. P. Kitchen, Mrs. W. J. Long, of St. Petersburg, Fla., and Misses Mattie Bagley, Frances and Mary Heartsell, Jennie Evelyn West, Gwendolyn Brooks, Sara Davis, Evelyn Swann, Allene Anderson, Kate Lynn Jefferson, Thelma Treadwell and Frankie Anderson.

Mrs. L. C. Waldrop, vice president of seventh district of Georgia federation, made an address at the club institute held in July in Athens at the University of Georgia, her subject being "The Scope of the Federation, Why Clubs Should Belong." She says:

"The federation holds the heart strings of the nation's womanhood with a firm though gentle hand, which is the guide of progress. Born in the heart of motherhood, fostered by its needs of better homes, better health, better education, better child care, better laws, this federation is using and developing the best that is in us to make of this great nation one family, to keep American ideals in the home, in school, in government, in human relations. Through its cultural influences the rural woman of today does not so widely differ from her city sister since better music, wider and better reading, an appreciation of art, all the finer things of life are hers for the taking. The dreams of beauty latent in every woman are being realized.

"The clubwoman of every environment has learned to administer the affairs of her household with a practical sense of values, to be instructed and to instruct others in the intelligent care of the health and well being of those about them; she thus gains inspiration to extend her knowledge and influence to less fortunate ones. The child of today needs not to go groping for knowledge of things that make life worth while; the federation has made it possible for him to be taught as he grows. The laws that protect his rights and safeguard his privileges it has valiantly sponsored and upheld. Truly ours is a large program, practical, instructional, inspirational. But why not think of club work as a flower garden? When planting seeds and shrubs we choose those best suited to soil and climate; just so we select and adapt club work to the needs of the community. And as flowers will not thrive without attention we must work to get results.

"The scope of the federation? Who can measure it? As broad as human understanding. As long as life. Why join it? 'We can't afford to pay our money to the federation,' says Mrs. Doubtful. 'We need it all in our community.' 'Penny-wise and pound foolish,' responded Mrs. Worldlywise. 'Can we buy with our 30 cents per capita the fellowship of the world's best womanhood and the consciousness of well directed service that is ours in the federation? Our contributions to all causes are interest bearing bonds of fabulous values. And besides,' she added, dryly, 'We get a lot of good advertising. Nobody knew there was such a town as ours until we got on the club page. And we do have such a good time going to conventions!'"

Norcross Club Holds Patriotic Meeting.

The Norcross Woman's club met at the residence of Mrs. D. K. Webster and the president, Mrs. H. V. Jones, presided at the July meeting. The history of the American flag ws told and Mrs. W. M. Heady displayed miniature flags, showing the changes that had been made in the flag as the years have gone by.

The club sang "The Star-Spnglaed Banner," Mrs. Ben Summerour playing the piano accompaniment. Mrs. A. J. Johnson spoke of the inspiration which came to Francis Scott Key, thus leading him to write the national anthem. Miss Ludie Simpson, an M. A. graduate of Columbia university, told of her study there, and the wonderful opportunities for ambitious students.

Early Reopening of the Potter-Spiker School of Dancing and Dramatic Art

Because of numerous requests for instruction during the summer months, the Potter-Spiker School will reopen August 1. New pupils and former pupils may register and start work any time after August 1.

All lessons under the personal supervision of Mrs. Potter-Spiker. Instruction will be given in Physical Culture for health, poise and grace; body correction and development; dancing of all kinds and nations expression; voice culture and dramatic art. 1406 W. Mrs. Gholston Read Article On 'Community Recreation'

BY MRS. J. W. GHOLSTON, Of Comer, Chairman of Library Extension.

Editor's Note—Mrs. Gholston read the paper on "Community Recreation" before the club institute of Georgia federation held in July at the University of Georgia.

In my 14 years of club experience I have been more intimately associated with club work than with club play. And I shouldn't wonder if many of you have developed the ability to work to the neglect of the duty to play. A recent writer of note, with an international reputation at a neurotic and medical specialist, has classed the four greatest things in the world which everyone must have to lead a balanced life as work, recreation, love and worship. If any one of these is missing life is cast out of symmetry and correspondingly warped.

We all recognize the psychological truth that a virtue carried to excess becomes a vice, but be giving all four of these great interests proportionate attention in our program of living a well rounded life and character will be developed. The play movement in this country owes its beginning to inspiration from Germany, whose chief aim was a physical development looking toward the strengthening of the race; whereas America's has been primarily social and the chief aim to keep our children away from temptation and give them right motives and habits.

Need and Value.

There are three very evident reasons for the necessary and rightful place into which organized recreation has come, and every community must embrace it or be classed as backward or decadent—

1. The increasing congestion in our cities.

2. The new psychology, showing that play is the fundamental attitude of the child's mind toward the world, that out of his play comes most of his early training.

3. The new sense of social responsibility of the strong for the weak.

We point with pride to the city of Gary, Ind., as a model city in play activity, which has provided in its school curriculum play for all its children, with two hours per day in the first six grades and one hour for high school. Our motto in the division of community service is "To Put Unity Into Community." In no better way can this be done than through our recreation. Every effort should be made to make our playgrounds community affairs, in which all may take an interest and these become common centers of social life. To this end our clubs could find active service and in securing a more wholesome supervision, with some of its members there, at least in late afternoons and evenings.

There are too many forces at the present time tending to disrupt the home and the family. Recreational centers should tend to unite rather than separate its members if they are made attractive and interesting. If parents came oftener to the playgrounds they would have a far better understanding of what their children are doing and may do in later years. Through this play with others we may distinguish traits in our children which should be uprooted or developed as the case may be. It has been said that it is not the playing of boys and girls together that is dangerous, but their loafing together.

Direction and Play.

Some think that direction and play are irreconcilable, that the fact of an activity being directed must prevent it from being play; whereas the personality of a director or leader is largely responsible for the attendance and he or she may do more than any other person in a community to determine the social spirit and morals of the next generation. The spirit of play is the spirit of childhood and through play is the easiest way of initiating the child into moral conduct. Credit must be given the women's clubs of our country for taking the initintive in sponsoring the recreational movement of the past 20 years, also in gaining the interest of others. Public opinion, in this as in everything else, must be educated to secure success and more and more its value is recognized, whether for old or young, that to keep our mental poise and sanity we need to play. The lack of permanent and adequate equipment is often thought to be a hindrance to successful playgrounds, but it need not be. A community house is a great asset as a social center, but the school building or some other can always be secured. A library is often used to serve for many purposes.

Forms of Recreation.

Games, like vegetables, have their seasons. Basketball, perhaps, is more generally played than any of the more vigorous games, though volleyball, baseball, tennis and golf are great favorites. Music, choral clubs, orchestras are to be stressed. Folk dancing is excellent physical exercise and, danced in costume, very effective. Pageantry is growing more and more in favor, often local history is enacted and thus civic pride awakened. The celebration of national holidays in befitting manner is to be urged. Dramatic entertainments often develop real talent among those taking part. A May-pole dance is attractive. Civic dancing, lectures and story telling. Play festival or tournament is splendid for an annual event, with an occasional picnic, barbecue or homecoming day thrown in. Moving pictures, when well chosen.

Thus community recreation tends to develop a democratic spirit and fellowship, in that people of different classes and conditions are not so different after all; that they have more in common than points of difference. The kevnote of the new age is that we shall see the good side of others and show respect for it, and so through recreation and play can be developed the physical, intellectual, spiritual and social side of life. Henry Van Dyke has said:

"There is a loftier ambition than merely to stand high in the world. It is to stoop down and lift mankind a little higher."

Some Impressions of Finland

BY DR. DUNBAR ROY.

(Editor's Note—This is the sixth of a series of interesting letters written for The Constitution by Dr. Dunbar Roy, prominent Atlantan, who with Mrs. Roy is spending the summer in Europe. Dr. Roy's screed touches upon phases of life in Finland and carries the reader through the city of Helsingfors. The latter part of the letter relates the experiences of the writer in Stockholm and gives some more Scandanavian impressions to the reader.)

HELSINGFORS. If one has never been to Finland, he has a wonderful surprise in store. We most frequently think of this country as some far away, sparsely inhabitated, uneducated and backward nation. A place which is inaccessible and which we never anticipate visiting on a summer's vacation because we know of no one who has ever visited the place and all our knowledge comes from information obtained from historical reading. If one should ever be in Stockholm and have a few days to spare, a trip to Helsingfors and its surrounding territory will be well worth the visit. Finland, since the war is a republic. For a hundred years before this time it was under Russian control and was known as Russian Finland. Before then it was under Swedish regime, the latter country having obtained control through continuous wars. For this reason its people are Finnish (the original natives) Swedish and Russian. If one will consult his map he will see that the northermost part of this country merges into Sweden through the country known as Finnish Swedish and Norwegian Lapland. Its own people are said to be very proud of everything connected with Finland although the whole country does not number more than three and a half million people. Ethnologically the natives are neither Swedish nor Russian but have all the characteristics of an oriental type. Many of the Finnish names remind one of Japanese names and the high cheek bones, rather sallow complexion and in some cases the slanting eye-fissues, would stamp them as belonging to the Mongolian type. In fact they tell you that the original home of the Finns is unknown.

They hate the Russians who so long kept them under subjection and there seems to be no probability of the bolsheyistic ideas ever permeating this country. They are friendly with the Swedes who form one-third of their population. Of course these comments apply more particularly to those of the peasant class. You can reach Finland from Stockholm by steamships which run between Abo and Helsingfors. To the first named it is the shortest route, while it takes but a few more hours to reach the latter which is the capital city. The time is about one night and half a day. When you reach Helsingfors you see a perfectly modern city with splendid architecture. The buildings remind one of those seen in Paris and Berlin. The railway station is one of the largest and certainly one of the most attractive of those seen in Europe. One sees more automobiles than he does in any of the Scandinavian cities. Practically all come from the United States and each has its own showroom.

FINLAND IS CALLED the "land of a thousand lakes." In fact, there are probably far more than this number. Next to Niagara, it has the largest water falls in the world and is now preparing to use them for the electrification of the whole country. Great developments are taking place. It is one of the largest producers in the world of wood pulp for the manufacture of paper. Its lakes and streams are gutted with wooden logs. This latter is practically used entirely as fuel for heating purposes and is even used on railway engines and in large manufactories. It is so much cheaper than coal and there is an abundant supply. In 24 hours you can reach Leningrad, Russia, from Helsingfors and across the Gulf of Finland steamers ply daily between the latter city and Reval and Riga. It is said that Finland is the only country ever governed by Russia which has itself developed a strong financial basis. In coming to Finland we took the steamer to Abo (pronounced Ohbo) because it was impossible to obtain accomodations on the boat for Helsingfors due to the crowded condition of the traffic. It was a small ship and one missed the comforts usually present on those of larger caliber. From Stockholm you pass through the fjord into the Baltic sea, around the various islands upon which the wealthy people have their summer homes and which affords a view of surpassing loveliness.

We left at 7:30 in the evening and arrived at Abo at 11:30 the next morning, thence by train to Helsingfors, arriving at 6 o'clock. The Finnish time is one hour later than that in Stockholm. The city of Abo has about 150,000 inhabitants and is even older than Helsingfors. It is noted for two things: First, as having both a Finnish and Swedish university and secondly, as being the home of Nurmi, the great runner.

The trip had some interesting features. In the first place more spoken English was heard than any one would expect in this part of the world. This language is becoming more frequently spoken everywhere and one is lead to believe that it is only a question of time when the language will be spoken in every part of the world.

We had the pleasure on the ship of meeting Mr. R. C. James, of Wilmington, N. C. He lives in Rotterdam and represents the cotton firm of Alexander Sprunt and company. He was on a business trip to Finland in order to sell cotton to the six large mills in that country. He asked to be remembered to Frank Inman and Chess Howard. In the compartment coming to Helsingfors there was a party of Englishmen who were making a tour of the Finnish textile mills. They told me that these latter were a revelation to them in that they were as perfect and as good as the mills in their own country. This was saying a great deal for an Englishman. All the business men tell you that the United States is doing the bulk of business with this country and everywhere you see nothing but American automobiles, Otis elevators, Singer sewing machines and Kellogg's corn flakes.

ON BOARD THE SHIP coming from Stockholm the customs of this country seemed to prevail. In all the cafes of that city, hors d' ouevres are the principle part of one's luncheon and you serve yourself, cafeteria fashion, from a large table in the center of the room. On this trip we had them served for breakfast, which was indeed a novelty. All nationalities were represented on the ship. You can tell the English woman everywhere by the long pendant ear rings which she wears. This is absolutely characteristic and will make any woman look conspicuous. Finland is the only country except the United States which is supposed to have strict prohibition. Like our own country, they consider it a joke. Bootleggers thrive and you can, of course, procure all kinds of liquors most readily, due to the proximity of the free liquor countries across the bay of Finland. They tell us they have the same trouble with flask drinking among the old and young that is seen with us. They get all kinds of strong mixed alcoholic concoctions from Reval and this has produced a great deal of alcoholic poison. Tram cars are seen everywhere as well as busses. The former, like all those seen in Europe, are small in size but carry a trailer. Policemen are on all corners directing traffic and you feel much at home dodging the Buicks, Studebakers, Hudsons, Chevrolets and Packards. Everywhere you turn you see signs in both the Finnish and Swedish language. They are entirely different both in writing and speaking. Few people except natives ever learn to speak the Finnish language. We are the first Americans this season, most visitors arrive between the middle of July and the middle of August. Fruit does not ripen until the first of September. In August the days rapidly become shorter. The sun now sets at 9 o'clock although it is twilight all night. From the middle of December to the first of March the country is practically shut in by snow and ice. No visitors ever arrive in winter and those with money go to the south in Italy. The days are very short, three to five hours and the nights correspondingly long. Further north in Lapland there are 53 days of continuous night. There are no tides in this part of the country and very slight even on the coast of Norway. This is quite different from Nova Scotia where the tide varies from 40 to 50 feet. Helsingfors is in the same latitude as Spitzbergen. On account of the gulf stream, Norway is not so cold as Sweden and Finland.

Considerable new building is being constructed in Helsingfors. A new parliament building of magnificent architecture is now being erected. Most everyone lives in apartment houses which are much warmer in winter and where central heating is supplied. All quick traveling is accomplished by hydro-planes because landing on water in these parts is much more feasible. Trips are made twice daily to Reval and once daily to Stockholm. Our guide was a most charming and cultured young woman who is at the head of her own "tourist bureau." She speaks nine different languages and gives a service which cannot be excelled. Women fill most of the clerical positions in business houses and banks; besides being waitresses in all cafes and conductors on street cars. Returning to the hotel at night we found policemen directing traffic at 11 o'clock and no electric lights were on the streets. Here they also have first and second class taxis, the rates being according to class. Today is the Fourth of July, but the only American flag to be seen is that in front of the American minister's home.

STOCKHOLM. Home again! At least it seems like home after spending a week in Finland. This is the first summer day they have had in this city and the parks are crowded with people. The boats are carrying hundreds of persons to the various island resorts. The annual yacht races occur far out on the waters of the inlet and special steamers are leaving early in the morning to return at 10 o'clock at night. (Two days later the American yacht won the race from the Dutch by five seconds). To almost every visitor this is one of the most beautiful cities in the world and the Grand hotel looking out upon the water is certainly one of the best in all of Europe. A great many tourists are now here, mostly English and German, but one also sees quite a number of Americans. These latter most usually come later in the season. The call for room service in this hotel is unique. It is done by the sign language. By your bed are three push buttons and by each of these is a charactur of the attendant you wish to call. One shows a maid with cap and dusting brush; one a waiter with a tray of dishes, while the last one shows a man with an apron and luggage. For one who does not speak the Swedish language, this arrangement is most acceptable as few of the hotel servants speak English.

THE ONLY THINGS which have a similarity in looks to those of your own country are the dogs. They are just as friendly and just as mongrel as they are in Atlanta. A Fox and Scotch terrier over here are twin brothers to those in America. Going to the cathedrel church Sunday morning, the visit proved most interesting, although we did not understand one word of the sermon. But had I not known that we were in Stockholm, I would certainly have thought that we were listening to Dr. Theo Toepel, of Atlanta. The physical resemblance was striking—not the sermon. The church building itself is strictly Scandanavian architecture. Simplicity and elegance. There were no stained glass windows and the finish inside was of plain granite and concrete, with the most beautiful frescoeing over the altar. Now we know where Mr. G. L. Norman whom many Atlanta people remember as being one of our best architects, obtained his ideas for the architecture of the First Baptist church in Atlanta. It is strictly Scandanavian both in its interior and exterior.

SPEAKING OF HOUSES reminds one of the fact that practically all the frame houses seen in the country are body red trimmed with white. This color is universal in the Scandanavian countries. The color is not paint but a stain which is made from a red mineral substance mined in Sweden and to which water and dilute sulphuric acid are added together with a substance like flour to give it consistency. The stain eats into the wood and remains indefinitely without renewal. It is a great saving device. Evidently on account of the very cold weather in winter, all windows are double and of the French type. We have never seen a double sash window which raises and lowers just as we have in the states. Customs vary in all countries and it is interesting to observe these variations. Tivoli, the great out-door amusement park, is nothing more than a county fair as we know it in America. There seems to be one of this type in all the large Scandanavian cities. Every device for trying your luck is in evidence and there seems to be no lack of people to crowd every inch of space. People from America who have never visited Europe will always be ignorant of the out-door cafe life which exists all over this country. When you see a man at a table waste one or two hours over a glass of beer or a cup of coffee, one wonders how these people ever accomplish any work and why it is that the possession of wealth is a secondary consideration. Physical and mental enjoyment seem to be the keynote to their life.

HENCE IT IS that so many of these people who migrate to America, return again to enjoy the proceeds of their active labors. Names in this city have their counterpart in the expressions of some of the Americans seen in this country. The following sign was seen today over a store: "I. M. Bored." A most delightful trip was enjoyed one afternoon to Saltsjobaden (pronounced like it is spelled), where the summer homes of the wealthy are situated. We were the guests of Mr. and Mrs. Kinnander, personal friends of Mr. and Mrs. Milton Dorgan, of Atlanta, and through whom we were permitted to meet these delightful people.

Bigger and Better Airports Are the Need of Cities That Look Toward the Future

Airports of the Future

By William P. MacCracken Jr.

Assistant Secretary of Commerce for Aeronautics

IN THE story of airport construction in the city of today we see history repeating itself.

Seventy-five years ago the steel rail began to fling out toward the new, scattered communities of the west. Some of those communities had imagination. They foresaw the chance of future development. They welcomed the railroad. Rapidly they became growing communities. From growing communities they frequently became great cities.

Some of them, already thriving villages at a river forks or at a crossroads, scoffed at the intruder. They looked at their own prosperous present. They did not allow themselves to dream of the future. They are still villages today, while the iron horse passed on to a Chicago, a Kansas City, an Indianapolis, a Toledo, a St. Louis or an Omaha.

The railroad came first. Then came expansion and prosperity.

In the building of airports the city of today is confronted by a similar question.

In this connection St. Joseph, Mo., tells a significant story.

"Saint Jo" was a prosperous town, more prominent than Kansas City. For, before the days of rail, it was the western terminus of the Pony Express.

Then came the railroad. Kansas City welcomed it. But St. Joseph regarded railroading with a suspicion which it now regrets. And Kansas City far outran its neighbor.

Now, suddenly, air lines. Kansas City welcomed them, too. She converted the mudflats conveniently lying five minutes distant from her postoffice into a municipal airport.

This time St. Joseph was not asleep. She bought a 160-acre plot of ground and opened her airport. She became a stop on the Chicago-Dallas route. It is a run of only forty miles between there and Kansas City. But St. Joseph got that stop because of the foresightedness of her citizens.

It is not merely a question as to whether an airport shall be built at all. Already that answer is pretty well written. It is Yes.

Well over a thousand airports are in existence, and the manufacturing industry is behind on its orders. There are 352 publicly owned airports and 325 commercially owned, in addition to the military fields of the United States government. There are 665 ports proposed for construction and operation in the near future.

Public demand is bringing the usual answer. And the public is demanding commercial air service. We have received 10,635 original applications in the department of commerce for pilots' licenses, many of them from women.

Five men in the department spend their entire time studying projected airports. Each one spends a day going over a single city, and every one of them has been scheduled ten days ahead since they started. Numbers are increasing from day to day.

The real problem is where these airports shall be located, how they shall be owned and how they shall be developed and operated.

The citizens of today are to ask themselves: Will it pay to put the projected airport into the relatively more expensive land near the industrial center and convenient to points of redistribution? Or will the relatively lower original investment for the purchase of land in outlying sections develop a port of call for air nevigation which will be "good enough"?

So brilliant is the story of the modern expansion of commercial air navigation that progressive cities are rapidly awakening to the fact that a fairly central location is a good investment.

There are lines carrying only passengers—for example, between Los Angeles and Tucson and Detroit and Cleveland. Plans are under way whereby the public may buy an all-the-way-by-air ticket or a part-way-by-air and part-way-by-rail ticket at the regular railroad offices.

This swiftly growing demand for air transportation means that the passengers will not long be satisfied to be put down an hour's ride from their point of destination. Airports must answer the cry of necessity.

Today, for example, the air mail port for New York city is Hadley field, at New Brunswick, N. J., an hour and a half from Manhattan. With luck, the passenger may arrive at the central part of Omaha from its present air mail field in fifty minutes. Chicago's present airport is an hour from the Loop under ordinary traffic conditions. Cleveland's is nearly that. It is too long.

Newark is at work upon a port which will bring mail planes an hour nearer to New York than at present. Chicago's proposed $,5,000,000 port, to be made on filled land on the edge of Lake Michigan, will be in line with the terminals of a dozen railroads.

Cities with a waterfront, like Chicago, are often quick to recognize the advantage of placing the port where it will be available for both land and water planes. There is, for example, Maitland field at Milwaukee, at the mouth of the river. This field, long enough but not wide enough. soon will be enlarged.

Oakland has built hers upon the water's edge. Duluth is at work upon one. Buffalo, which has established an excellent airport, is looking for another closer in. St. Paul's which is both close and on the Mississippi river, is now being improved. Baltimore's proposed airport is to be on her waterfront, close to steam and electric transportation. It contemplates a thousand-acre development at a cost of nearly $4,000,000. Newark's new port is being made by dredging the channel.

Kansas City was fortunate. There, land unavailable for other purposes, yet close to the heart of things, had been left to be acquired for an airport. The airport is a reality, though the city has yet to complete the purchase of the land.

New York presents one of the most difficult airport problems. The Fact Finding committee on suitable airports for New York advised a series of possibilities. After a thorough study and mapping of the entire country about Manhattan Island, after an exhaustive research of local weather history and of existing railroad terminals, that committee suggested certain possible fields. These would enable a passenger arriving from the north or northeast to disembark somewhere near Flushing Bay in Queens or at the edge of the Eastchester river in the Bronx.

In the first case, he would find himself only a half-mile from a proposed station on the Long Island railroad and thirteen minutes from Thirty-third street and Seventh avenue, Manhattan. In the second case, he would be close to the Harlem branch of the New Haven railroad and could get to Forty-second street and Park avenue in a quarter of an hour by train. Or he might arrive and leave from a port to be developed from city-owned marshland in the Jamaica bay region.

Under the terms of that same recommendation, passengers from the west and south might find a convenient landing place either where the stretches of the Hackensack Meadows now are or by the side of the canal leading in from Newark bay.

Subsidiary ports became a part of the plan. Bases for sea planes and amphibian planes were recommended. But the forst port to be put into construction and operation was to be, in the judgment of that committee, the 160 acres in Queens—with the chance of its being expanded as soon as possible. The cost was estimated at about $5,000,000. The city government of New York so far has undertaken the development at Barren Island, at an initial cost of $500,000.

Next in importance after the location of a permanent site, comes the matter of ownership. For ownership inevitably will largely determine operation. There will always be private, commercially owned ports, but every city of fifty thousand or more ought to have one of its own. For a real airport is more than a large flat surface smoothed out to make a good landing place and a good taking-off place. A first class airport has to have facilities of many kinds.

In the first place, it must be marked with the great white circle which pilots look for, with the name of the port in big letters on the ground beside the circle. Then it must be properly lighted with beacons to be seen from the air, with flood lights to show up the ground and with boundary lights.

While the department of commerce is prohibited from establishing ports, we do maintain intermediate fields. It is our policy to locate them as near as possible to a municipality in the hope that the city will take them over as soon as practicable.

The parallel of the situation to that along the waterfront is apparent. Wealthy men may belong to yacht clubs, where their craft find harbor facilities. Others must look to publicly owned dockage at a minimum fee.

The incredible growth of commercial aviation in the last two years sends men's thoughts running along these lines. Private ownership of planes is just beginning, yet its future is undoubtedly brilliant. It is safe to say we are going to have many more owners of private planes than of private boats or ships, though it will probably be a long time before we have as many private planes as we have private motor cars.

As private planes develop we shall probably begin to see the use of roofs for landing places. But roofs will be suitable only for taxi-planes.

The commercial plane of the future will be larger than ever. As the plane of the future increases its load capacity, it is bound to need larger and larger fields.

For this reason, among others, the port should be established without waiting for the full demand for its services. And the ports should be picked up in as central locations as possible. Even now, such sites are difficult to find.

As time goes on and air navigation widens its appeal to the people and increases its investments more and more rapidly, every one who owns a vacant lot from Main street to the next cow pasture will be perfectly sure he is going to make a fortune out of it. The city which hesitates will be lost—or it will pay through its municipal nose.

Airports will be necessary even for cities not on the routes of the regular airways. Miscellaneous services, such as aerial photography, cotton dusting, forest patrols, taxi service and privately owned pleasure flying, are luring thousands into the air—thousands who will look for the great white arrow to guide them toward a hospitable port.

The ship comes in hungry for gas and oil and the pilot comes in hungry for food. All three ought to be handy. Almost always the ship will need some kind of repairs, so there must be mechanics and supplies at hand. And the pilot himself may need some sort of repairing, so a first aid station is excellent, if not essential.

The pilot may have to put his ship to bed for a while, and is very likely to want to nap himself. He will wish to put his ship into more or less temporary storage. Coming in tired, if the port is not convenient to a hotel, he may be glad to find sleeping quarters right at hand.

When you consider details of this kind it is not surprising if the pilot of one particular make of commercial plane or of some particular service would hesitate to avail himself of the privately owned equipment of a rival firm.

In order to insure the individual a place in which to land, we must have, in addition to private ports, municipal fields—else we shall find ourselves in the hands of the distributors of certain lines of planes owning fields were only those who use their own type of product will be welcome.

Even the payment of the customary fees would not always be enough to make the stranger pilot feel comfortable about it. Municipally owned ports bid welcome to all alike—or at least ports financed by such quasi-public agencies as committees of chambers of commerce or service clubs.

Every town will have its private owners of aircraft and its own commercial aircraft, which will have to be serviced, just as the automobile is serviced today. The first plane in town is the first call for a port.

Before we know it we shall see not only the great through-service planes winging from one completely equipped port to another but thousands of smaller ports whence taxi-services speed from town to town, and come home to sleep.

Nor should we forget that the airport is more than a great distributing agency in the world of commerce and industry. Europe has already recognized it as a recreation field for the people, like any park or bathing beach. Over there you will find the fields often surrounded by balconies, with people ready to hand out binoculars with which you may view air maneuvers. You will find these fields equipped with public cafes and restaurants and other diversions.

No city is too small to begin to acquire its airport. Once a piece of land is owned or leased, equipment and development can wait until the traffic warrants them. Such a purchase in the present is nothing but a decent insurance for the future.

This is a fact already so well recognized that only a few municipalities of any importance are without at least the first requisite for an airport—a landing place.

MASTERPIECES OF MYSTERY

Condensed by Arthur B. Reeve

No. 9---"THE STORIES OF THREE BURGLARS"---By Frank R. Stocktor

—The third burglar, a young man, confessed that he was a journalist. . . . "I fell in love with a young lady named Marie Dorfler. She was affianced to Colonel Kaldhein. . . . Looking up I saw a man in military uniform. . . . "It is Colonel Kaldhein," cried Marie. . . . Sitting in my room, I felt the head of a dog laid in my lap. When I turned to look for him, he was gone." . . . When Kaldhein would have shot me, he was attracted by my protector, the invisible dog. The storm was over—my servitor had dug around the ruins of the kitchen and was bringing me food. I followed him across the courtyard and found he had also brought Marie to the spot." So convincing had been his story, the captors were moved to free him when he sneakingly kissed the maid. He with the other two burglars, was turned over to the constable who at that moment arrived.

THREE burglars, securely bound, rested comfortably on the floor of my library waiting for the dawn. Following the usual custom of burglars and tramps, two of the men had told me the stories of downfall and degradation expected of them. The third and youngest man, however, had remained silent. The audience, my wife, myself, my wife's maid Alice, and my man David, turned to him expectantly.

The young man confessed that he was a journalist. He had devoted himself to realism, and, in order to be a conscientious student, studied it in all its branches. So that, when opportunity came to accompany two working burglars to their tasks, he accepted, purposing an earnest and thorough investigation.

Because of his good choice of words, his refined aspect, and well modulated voice, we were ready to accept, in part at least, his explanation. We asked, however, that, in order to make the entire situation a little more clear, he give some details of his early life. The young man nodded and began:

"I am American born but have spent much of my life in Austria. My tastes were studious, my disposition contemplative, and I was a lover of rural life.

"I lived alone for a time in an old castle in Carinthia, not far from the mountains. During my stay there I met, and I must confess, fell in love with a young lady named Marie Dorfler, a neighbor of mine. Though she returned my affection to a quite considerable degree she was, unfortunately, affianced to another and older man, Colonel Kaldhein, of the army. As the marriage was to take place in a very few weeks, we determined to make the best of matters by spending as much time as we could together while she was still free.

"One morning I was sitting by Marie in, perhaps, a vaguely compromising posture, when we heard some one rapidly approaching. Looking up, I saw a tall man in military uniform. 'Heavens!' cried Marie, 'it is Colonel Kaldhein.'

"I rose to my feet. Colonel Kaldhein came forward almost at a run. His eyes blazed through his gold spectacles, and his close-cut reddish beard seemed to be singeing with the fires of rage.

"I had only time to observe that he was a much stronger man than I was when he came directly up to me and, with a tremendous objurgation, he struck me full in the face with such force that the blow stretched me upon the ground.

"The tone of his voice and a scream from Marie made me sure that he intended further injury. With a sudden instinct of self-preservation, I rolled down a little declivity on the edge of which I had fallen and, staggering to my feet, plunged into a thicket and fled. I knew that, had I remained on the scene, I would have been of no benefit to Marie. The last thing I heard was a shout from Kaldhein, in which he declared that he would kill me yet. I returned to the castle and did not leave it for three days.

"It was at this time that the strangest events of my life occurred. Sitting in an upper room, gazing out of the window over the fields through which I had walked so happily, but two days before, to meet the lady whom I had begun to think of as my Marie, I felt the head of a dog laid gently in my lap. I carressed the animal and stroked the long hair on his neck, but, when I turned to look at him, he was gone!

"I drew my hand toward me. I felt the cold nose, the warm ears, of the animal. But I could not see him.

"I was not blind. I could plainly see everything in the room. The scene outside was as distinct as it had ever been. But the dog was invisible.

He struck me in the face with such force the blow stretched me on the ground.

"But, visible or not, he had every attribute of a real dog. By day or night, this invisible dog never left me. His constant companionship seemed to indicate that this strange animal had come to guard me, and that he was determined to do it thoroughly. I felt so much confidence in his protection that, one morning, I decided to go with him on a walk.

"I had walked about a mile, and was approaching a group of large trees, when suddenly, from behind one of them, the tall figure of a man appeared. In an instant I knew it to be Colonel Kaldhein. Without a word he raised a pistol which he held in his hand and fired at me. The ball whistled over my head.

"I stopped short, startled, and frightened almost out of my senses. I was unarmed and had no place of refuge. It was plain that the man was determined to kill me.

"Quickly recocking his pistol, Kaldhein raised it again. I involuntarily shrank back, expecting death. But, before he could fire, his arm suddenly dropped and the pistol was discharged into the ground. Then began a strange scene. The man shouted, kicked, and beat up and down with his arms. His pistol fell from his hand, he sprang from side to side, he turned around, he struggled and he yelled.

"Kaldhein had been attacked by my protector, the invisible dog!

"Horrified by this conviction, my first impulse was to save the man and, without knowing what I was going to do, I stepped quickly toward him, but, stumbling over something I did not see, I fell sprawling. Before I could regain my feet I saw Kaldhein fall backward to the ground, where a scene took place, so terrible that I shall not attempt to describe it. When, with trembling steps, I approached, the man was dead. The invisible dog had almost torn him to pieces.

"I did not remain on the spot another minute, but hurried home to the castle. As I rapidly walked on, I felt the dog beside me, and, putting my hand upon him, I felt that he was panting terribly. For three days I did not leave the house.

"About the end of this time it occurred to me that the dog must be of exceedingly powerful build to have so bested a strong man. I had never touched any portion of his body back of his shoulders but now passed my hand along his back. I was amazed at his length, and when I had moved my hand at least seven feet from his head it still rested upon his body.

"And then the form of this body began to change. The form beneath my hand was cylindrical, apparently about a foot in diameter. The skin of the creature became cold and clammy. I was feeling the body of a snake!

"Suddenly the body jerked away, and I knew that the front of the dog was moving toward me. I now became possessed of a wild terror. The creature must be furious at my discovery. I would be torn to pieces like Kaldhein.

"I rushed through the castle courtyard to an old tower, climbed the stairs at top speed, and slammed behind me an iron door. The creature could not enter here. It was a dungeon keep, strongly built, and, though he was invisible, he could only move through walls. I made sure that the door was locked and fell gasping to the floor.

"I heard the rattle of something pushing at the door and knew it to be the invisible animal.

"Night came on and with it a most dreadful storm. Lightning flashed, thunder roared. And then I heard a crash of falling walls, another and another. And now I felt the wind blowing into my dungeon.

"When daylight came I saw that the castle had been almost entirely ruined. Only the old tower where I lay still stood. And there was a great hole in the wall of that at about a yard above the floor of the dungeon chamber.

"As I crouched at this opening, looking down, I felt the head of the dog pushed against me. A new spasm of terror came over me. It stopped when he licked my hands.

"His forefeet were braced against the rim of the opening and I realized that he was supported by the snake part of him which reached all the way to the ground.

"The wind rose again and the tower shook beneath me. There was no time to lose. I seized the good dog about the shoulders and slowly descended down his length. I had just reached the bottom when the tower fell.

"Fortunately, I was on the windward side and, stumbling over the ruins as fast as I could, escaped the falling stones.

"My mind was at once concerned with the creature who twice had saved my life. But physical fatigue made it impossible for me to return to the ruins once I was away. I rested back on the ground.

"While I lay thus I saw approaching a light-colored object that seemed to be floating at about a foot from the ground. As it came nearer I saw that it was a basket. My faithful servitor had dug round in the ruins of the kitchen and was bringing me food.

"But he did more than that. When I had finished eating he pulled at the skirt of my coat. Knowing that he desired me to follow him I went with him across a courtyard and out into the open country. There I found Marie. She, too, had been brought to the spot by the invisible dog, though she attributed it to the workings of a supernatural intuition and I never explained it."

As the young man was ending his tale with a description of his wedding

Blue Ribbon

The Life of Mary Martin Was Painted In Soft Colors and Shadows; Devotion Was Its Keynote; the Spotlight of Appreciation Never Illumined the Canvas

MRS. JOHN HENRY MARTIN, large, fresh faced, admirably dressed, radiating energy and efficiency, and carrying her forty years as if they were a banner, breezed into her husband's office and settled into the chair facing his desk with a swish of silken draperies. John Henry regarded her with the look of tolerance which was his most human expression.

"I'm sorry to disturb you, dear," she began. "But you know how impossible it seems to get in a quiet chat at home, and I want to talk to you about Mary."

Her husband opened his lips and closed them again. Aside from his wife and children, Mary Martin was his only kin—his spinster sister. He didn't see much of her. He was usually away from home when she came to the house. But he knew in a general way that she came often; and, also in a general way, he was glad she got on so well with his family.

"Mary dropped in to see me yesterday afternoon," Mrs. Martin was now saying. "I was frightfully busy and couldn't give her much attention; but I could see that she had something on her mind, and at last she got it off. It seems that the boarding house where she has lived so long is closing this month. The woman who ran it is going out of business. Of course that rather upsets Mary."

John Henry made his first contribution to the "quiet chat."

"Well," he said slowly, "I guess you could give her some points, couldn't you?"

His wife shook her handsome head, in which the dark hair was slightly graying at the temples.

"No, I couldn't," she surprisingly admitted. "If she had been a working girl looking for a cheap lodging house, or one of our bright young professional women with a good income, I could have told her just where to go. But a middle-aged spinster with an annuity of only seven hundred a year is a difficult proposition."

"Marion, if what you're aiming at is that Mary needs more money," said Mary Martin's brother, "I'll give it to her. How much does she want?"

"Don't be silly, John. You know perfectly well she wouldn't take it." A sudden reflection struck the speaker and she stopped. "But I suppose you don't know," she went on, more slowly. "You've seen much less of Mary these last years than any of us. Come to think of it, I don't suppose you've had a real talk with her half a dozen times since we were married. Yet how she adores you! I never saw anything like it. She spends all the time we're together telling me about your childhood; and she's got the most amazing collection of souvenirs of you—little mittens and shoes and toys——"

Observing a gathering look of impatience on her husband's face, she broke off.

"However, what I started out to say," she went on briskly, "is that, though she seems so quiet and shy, Mary is extremely proud. She would not take a penny from you. I know her well enough to know that. She told me once that her greatest comfort in life was the little income her old Aunt Jane left her. It's only an annuity, you know, and of course she has to practice the greatest economy——"

John Henry's look of impatience deepened into a frown.

"Marion," he demanded, "what did you come here to say?"

Even then the woman actually tried to sidestep the question.

"Mary has been helping us a lot the last few years," she resumed. "I don't suppose you realize that, though I've often mentioned it to you. Since the children have been going out so much and we've given so many parties Mary has been the greatest comfort to me. You would not think it, because she dresses so plainly herself, but she has an extraordinary love of pretty clothes and a marvelous knack at making them. She makes most of Carrie's house dresses and my over-blouses, and even trims some of our hats. And the way she decorates the table is wonderful. She has a gift for arranging flowers. So every time we have given any sort of entertainment Mary has come to help us to get ready for it. She has loved doing it. The truth is, she seems to be working for us all the time in one way or another, so I thought—I thought——"

John Henry knew now what his wife had come for. She had come to ask him to give his homeless sister a home—and she knew him so little, after all these years of marriage, that she who never seemed in awe of him was actually afraid to put the request into words. The moment was one of the bitterest in the man's life.

"Does she want to come?" he asked abruptly, bridging with the question all his wife had not said.

Marion's high colored face took on a deeper hue.

"I didn't ask her," she said reproachfully. "Naturally, I wouldn't before consulting you. Besides, the idea didn't come to me till after she had gone. As I've said, I was busy at the time, and I couldn't put my mind on her problem. But she's coming back today to bring a new blazer she had finished for Jack. Suppose I suggest her coming to us for a while, anyway. That won't commit us to a permanent arrangement till we see how she fits in—though I'm sure it will be a success, for Mary is the gentlest, most unselfish creature I know. I've really become very fond of her."

On a sudden impulse John Henry leaned over and patted the back of his wife's gloved hand. In that instant he forgave and forgot the pang of the moment before.

"I thought I'd put her in the little blue room on the third floor," she went on in a more assured tone. "Of course we can't spare either of the guest rooms on the second floor, for Jack and Carrie are always bringing home their friends. But she likes the blue room.

"It occurred to me that it would be awfully nice to give her a home and let her use her income hereafter for the pretty things she loves. She has a perfect passion for beauty, but she never seems to have anything pretty herself, though she has given the children such lovely presents."

"How about your presents?" Martin abruptly demanded. "Haven't you and the children given Mary anything at Christmas and on birthdays?"

His wife looked amused and repentant.

"That's another story," she admitted. "Of course we've given her things, but you know how it is at Christmas. One has so many demands. So they've just been trifles. And on her birthdays I've usually given her something practical—something I could see she really needed. Last year it was a sweater. She has made two for each of the children and one for me, but none for herself. That's just like her."

Again John Henry dropped his glance to his desk that his wife might not see his expression, but, as always, he was inarticulate.

"Better have her come," was all he said.

"You see, she'll really work it out," Mrs. Martin went on thoughtfully, smoothing her velvet hand bag with an absent touch. "Looking at it in one way, we are hundreds of dollars in Mary's debt. I'd have to pay a decorator and seamstress a small fortune for what she has done for nothing. And of course she'll keep right on doing it," she added comfortably. "She'll want to. She'll want to pay her board, too, for she's always talking about how she enjoys her 'labors of love.' But I think I can talk her out of the board paying."

"All right."

John Henry straightened in his chair as an intimation that the interview was over, and his wife obediently picked up the hand bag and rose.

"I'll ask her to stay to dinner tonight," she suggested. "We're not having any guests, for once. Then you can talk it over with her."

John Henry was late for dinner that night and, following another unwritten law, his family did not wait for him.

Now, entering the dining room while the soup was being served, his keen eyes sought and found his sister in the little ring around the table.

He had never considered Mary pretty. No one did. And now she was almost 50, and her hair was an unbecoming mixture of brown and white. But she had what is called a "nice" face. Privately, John Henry rather admired it, and every one, of course, admired Mary's eyes without qualification. They were unusual eyes—large, clear, deep, like brown pools—and they had a trick of shining when Mary was happy, like the eyes of an ecstatic child.

For just one instant, when he came in and their eyes had met, he had been swept back forty years to the memory of a little figure in a sunbonnet and a gingham frock, blissfully trudging by his side on some childish excursion.

Later, when the son and daughter had departed together to see a new picture play, John Henry settled beside the reading table with his evening newspaper, while his wife and sister consulted over the new blazer. It was a beautifully made garment and Jack had liked it very much—so much, indeed, that he had asked for another of the same pattern, but in different colors, for a sport suit purchased that day. Aunt Mary joyfully promised to begin the new garment th next morning.

She went home at 9 o'clock, that she might be up early and start out for the materials right after breakfast. Again, as she was leaving, her brother met for a moment that shy but shining glance. It gave him an odd sensation—almost made him feel as if he were a small boy again, going manfully about his various affairs with his adoring little sister invariably at his heels. Occasionally, of course, he had run away from her. That had been the one thing Mary could not endure. It had always sent her into a sort of panic.

Odd how the two had drifted apart in later years. The break had begun, of course, when he went to college—there hadn't been enough money to send Mary to college—and after his graduation he had gone to another city to begin his life work.

From that time he hadn't seen much of Mary. She was teaching school in her native town, and boarding with one of their old neighbors. She had come to his wedding—he remembered that; and after Aunt Jane's little legacy fell to her she had suddenly given up her teaching and come to John Henry's city to live.

Sitting now with unseeing eyes on the open page of his newspaper, John Henry wondered why he was thinking so much about Mary tonight. Probably because of the revelations in that talk with his wife, and because of Mary's shining eyes and the soft little breathless rush with which her parting words had come out when she was leaving.

"It's so very, very kind of you and Marion to let me come to you for a while, John Henry. I can't tell you how happy it makes me and how grateful——"

Then John Henry had nodded again and raised his hand in the old, abrupt gesture that checked speech, and Mary had checked her speech and hurried away. Odd how like the little Mary she had seemed—the little Mary of more than forty years ago. Mary was two years younger than he was. That meant she was 47 now.

After that his interest in Mary dropped like a pebble going to the bottom of a clear well. It was there, in view, if he took the trouble to look for it, but he didn't. His thoughts touched his sister only when she crossed his line of vision or when, at intervals, after Mary was settled in the blue room, his wife gave him a few bulletins concerning the newcomer's place in the household. On one of these occasions, just after Mary's arrival, Mrs. John Henry brought out her bulletin with a perturbed air.

"Mary simply insists on paying board," she announced in the solitude of the conjugal chamber. "I wish she wouldn't, for since she has come I realize more than ever how close to the wind she has been sailing financially. Her clothes are actually shabby. She hasn't a thing to wear."

John Henry did not attach much importance to this announcement. He would have preferred to give his sister a home, but he admired the self-respect which made her inisst on paying for it. As to the matter of her wardrobe, he took the easy masculine view of that.

Within three months he learned that Mary had changed her decision to pay her board. Mrs. Martin announced this with a satisfaction her husband shared.

"She seemed rather upset about it, though," Marion added thoughtfully. "I could see that she didn't want to do it. It was as if she were in a tight place and simply didn't have the money. Her poor little face blazed as she spoke of the matter. But I'm glad it's all settled. Now she can have her income to buy comforts and pretty clothes. The poor creature is almost in rags."

John Henry had winced a bit under those closing words. They lingered in his mind, and that night at the dinner table he looked at his sister more closely than usual. He saw nothing wrong with her appearance. She was very plainly dressed, but she had always dressed plainly. Evidently she liked to dress plainly.

Marion, however, proceeded to take a friendly interest in her sister-in-law's wardrobe.

"Mary," she began one morning, with brisk kindliness, "you need some new clothes. Suppose we go on a shopping expedition and get some for you."

The effect on Mary Martin was surprising. She shrank back as if from a physical assault.

"O, no," she said hurriedly. "Thank you, very much, but I don't need anything—really I don't."

"Nonsense!" Marion's tone was good-humored but firm. "Of course you need things—you need lots of things." She ended with an argument she felt would prevail. "If you don't care for them yourself, get them for our sake. You see, your position now is different from what it was. You're here among us, meeting our friends. Naturally, we want you to look your best."

The next moment she bit her firm lower lip, wishing she could recall the words. She had hurt Mary horribly—had hurt her and humiliated her. That fact was tragically clear. The shining eyes clouded. The blood rushed to the thin face. Mrs. Martin cried out in compunction.

"My dear, I'm sorry! You know I didn't mean anything unkind! It was just affectionate interest——"

"I know—I know." Mary Martin was not inarticulate when some one else needed words of comfort. "I know just how kindly you meant it. You're always considerate. But the—the truth is I—I'm rather short just at present. I—I simply can't buy anything."

"Then forget all about it," Marion said with a friendly tap on the thin shoulder. "You always look nice. Some day when you get around to it we'll get the new wardrobe and make a picture of you!"

The subject never came up between them, but the radiance of Mary's shining eyes was dimmed a little from that hour. She grew self-conscious, slipped away when callers came, had "headaches" which kept her from the table when friends dined with the family. Marion saw and understood.

"I wish I had kept my mouth shut," she told herself, reproachfully. "But what, in heaven's name, is she doing with her income?"

She would have had the answer to the question if she had overheard almost any of the conversations between her children and her sister-in-law.

There had developed an increasing intimacy between Jack and Carrie and their Aunt Mary. In the beginning the young things were lured into the sewing room, where Mary spent most of her time, by the discovery that she was always ready to sew on buttons, or tack ripped linings, or come to their rescue in small domestic crises. Then, one morning, young Jack, standing at the window with hands thrust deep in his trousers pockets and gloomy eyes gazing unseeingly out upon the world, swung around to face Mary Martin under the impulse of a sudden inspiration.

"Say, Aunt Mary," he blurted out, "I don't suppose you have $10 you can spare for a few days, have you?"

"Why, Jackie, of course I have!"

She fluttered up to the little blue room, and joyfully pressed the bill into the boy's willing hand, inwardly thinking her gods that she happened to have the money in her purse.

"You're an old peach, Aunt Mary," he emphatically assured her. "You're the real thing. You've helped me out of an awful hole."

He swung out of the room, turned on the threshold for a final affectionate grin at her, and added an afterthought.

"I'll pay this back next Saturday," he promised, "when dad gives me my allowance."

Mary nodded speechlessly. The boy actually liked her—was grateful to her—John Henry's son! She was so grateful to him that in that hour she would have died for him.

"Where did you get so much money all of a sudden?" she demanded.

The affluence revealed by young John Henry in the next few days attracted the attention of his sister Carrie—a young person who combined powers of keen observation with a suspicious nature.

"Where did you get so much money all of a sudden?" she demanded. "You were trying to borrow a dollar from me last Tuesday."

Young Jack tried to sidestep the investigation, but his sister got the truth out of him. The revelation, when she obtained it, made Carrie look thoughtful. She, too, was frequently short of money, for John Henry, Sr. never paid allowances in advance, and one of the domestic rules which his wife was required to follow implicitly was that she must not lend her children money.

Aunt Mary knew nothing of all this. The ten dollar loan to Jack was followed in a day or two by a five dollar loan to Carrie, neither of which was returned, and by innumerable loans from that time on. To do them justice, the young folks intended to return the money promptly, but both were heavily in debt to friends of their own age, both had expensive tastes, and both were members of affluent sets! It seemed clear to them that Aunt Mary had plenty of money.

She paid over her income to the children, and she expended her strength, which was almost as limited, on work for the household. Little by little, its management was turned over to her by a mistress increasingly absorbed in outside affairs. The machinery ran with beautiful smoothness. Mary Martin was a born homemaker, and the servants respected the little gentlewoman who could do their work better than they did it and whose rule was so invariably considerate.

So it is not surprising that after eighteen months of this Miss Mary "came down" in earnest with a heavy cold that developed into pneumonia. At first—indeed, for two days—no one but herself realized that she was really ill. Mary realized it because she discovered, to her horror, that she could not lift her head from the pillow. It was simply dreadful, she felt, to be helpless and to cause others so much trouble.

Every one was so wonderfully kind to her! That is what it meant to have a home and a family. Mary had always known that it could be like that, but she had not dreamed she herself would ever experience such joy. "The children" rushed upstairs to see her and sat on the side of her bed, which made her rather uncomfortable, and talked in loud, cheerful voices. She had not noticed before that their voices were so loud. She was actually almost glad when they left her, and reproached herself for the feeling. But immediately afterwards Marion came up and insisted on calling a doctor.

Mary protested vigorously. She knew them—rest and hot baths and no food, knew exactly the right treatment for what was the matter with her. It was only a cold.

She had her way for forty-eight hours, and lay quietly in the little blue room thinking how wonderful it was to be ill at "home" and not in a boarding house. Then Mrs. Martin climbed up to her on the evening of the second day and resolutely summoned the family physician, who shook his head over Mary's temperature.

After that surprising things happened. A trained nurse was engaged, then a second nurse for night duty, and cots were installed for them in the third floor hall. The two nurses worried Mary very much — not personally, for they were agreeable and highly skilled women. But they would have to be paid, and who would pay them? Mary mentioned this to Marion when the latter sat beside her on the third evening. She explained that her next quarter's income was not due for another month, and that she was rather short, and that she had always understood that nurses expected to be paid every week.

Marion quieted her with gentle firmness. It was all right about the nurses. They were to be paid by John Henry. John Henry had given orders that everything was to be done for his sister. He had even sent for a big specialist, so he could be sure that the family doctor and the nurses were doing all that was necessary. Mary's eyes filled with tears. Such a wonderful sister-in-law and nephew and niece! But she could not get over all the trouble she was making. That was terrible. And she must, she really must, repay her brother for the nurses' services when she got well and her allowance came.

Marion Martin soothed her gently. Everything should be exactly as Mary wished. But the episode made her wonder anew what Mary Martin was doing with her income. Marion's mind was so full of the problem that she mentioned it to her daughter and thus learned the truth.

Carrie, wide eyed and frightened by the shadow that lay over the house, suddenly burst into tears.

"Is she going to die?" she wailed. "O, I hope she isn't going to die. Don't let her die! Mother, mother, I want to tell you something. Jack and I have been awfully selfish. We've borrowed a lot of money from Aunt Mary—a whole lot—and—and—we haven't paid much of it back."

The details came out and Mrs. Martin listened to them with set lips.

"If your father knew this he'd never forgive you," she said at the end. "I don't know whether I can forgive you myself. But we'll make

THE PEACE STONE

A Blue

INSTALLMENT VI.

JACQUES and Devlin reached the big gates and passed between the huge square columns that were weathered with age and bore on their pediments the De Marsac arms, on which, eroded as they were, Devlin perceived the stoat or ermine of feudal Brittany. Then, looking around, he saw, approaching close under the wall, a man of middle age in the long blouse, the beret, and sabots of the Breton fisherman.

He was the most frequent type, a stolid fellow, florid of coloring, with features that would have been handsome if more fine, china blue eyes a little bloodshot, and a general expression of which the blankness can frequently mask a great deal of cunning. Devlin was familiar with the breed, had also heard it ably described during the war by an American secret agent of naval intelligence who was working under the smoke screen of war correspondent for an American publication.

Convinced that this must be the messenger, Devlin stepped up to the man and said, briefly, "You have a letter for Monsieur Carter? I am he?"

The man gave him a pale look of scrutiny, then glanced at Jacqueline.

"C'est bien lui, Madame?"

Jacqueline had no choice but to answer in the affirmative. She added then: "But you had better deliver the letter to Monsieur le Comte."

It did not avail her. Assured of Devlin's identity, the man took from his blouse an envelope which Devlin did not wait to have handed him.

Jacqueline's lids narrowed. She said to Devlin, this time with a peremptory note:

"My father urgently requests, Monsieur, that all communications be shown him immediately. Will you please open it in his presence?"

Devlin stared at her in affected surprise. "But since it is addressed to me, why should I not open it at once? You seem to forget that Miss Mordecay is like my sister. Perhaps it is from her."

Jacqueline stamped her foot. "My father insists upon the management of this affair, Monsieur, and it is for him to see all communications first, no matter to whom addressed."

"That," said Devlin, shortly, "is carrying authority too far." He glanced down at the envelope. They had come out of the grounds by the small door at one side of the main gates, which were, as is usual en province, closed and secured by heavy bolts inside. Both door and gates were of boiler iron painted a dark green, grilled at the top with iron scroll work. A caller, whether on foot or vehicled, was required to ring the great bronze bell by a tug on the bronze chain.

The small door had been left ajar. Devlin was holding the envelope on which was written in the small, square British hand of the public schools and universities:

"Mr. Carter," and underneath, "pere ou file." Glancing at this before ripping open the envelope, Devlin failed to see the sudden flame in Jacqueline's eyes.

He was, therefore, caught off his guard, entirely unprepared for an act that may have been partly inspired by directions from Jacqueline's father, partly the determination to protect, if possible, the man with whom she was in love.

The letter was snatched from Devlin's hands. At the same moment a push against his shoulder set him a little off his balance. Before he could recover himself Jacqueline had whisked through the small [illegible] and closed it behind her with a clang. Devlin heard her flying footsteps going up the graveled drive.

He sprang to the door, but found it locked. He might have leaped up and climbed over the wall, but could scarcely have hoped to overtake the girl. Even then he might have tried had not the peasant turned instantly and started away with the shambling gait.

"Stop!" Devlin called sharply, in French.

The Breton paid no attention. Devlin leaped after him, gripped his shoulder, and flung him against the wall with a force that seemed to bewilder the fellow. He grasped instinctively at the bosom of his blouse. Devlin's keen eyes did not miss the gesture.

"You have another letter? For Monsieur le Comte?"

"Mais non, Monsieur."

"Give it to me."

The man shrank back, still clutching at his blouse. Devlin stepped in closer, then, as the man cringed away, blinking a little like a bullock with the lash across his face, Devlin's arm shot up and the ball of his hand caught the fellow slightly under the angle of his jaw. It would have been for most men a knockout blow, but this type is heavily boned, no doubt accustomed to concussions from pitching drunk with cidre or eau de vie headfirst into fishing boats. The heavy blow seemed merely to daze the man.

Before he could recover Devlin's grip fastened on his big wrist, jerked it out of the aperture of his blouse. Another letter was held in the man's hand. Devlin snatched it from him.

"A fair exchange," he said, in the proverb which is also French, "is not a theft. Since Madame has seen fit to run off with my letter then I shall take that of the Comte. Stay where you are, you, if you don't want another and a harder wallop.

The letter read as follows:

"Mon Pere:

"With deep regret for what necessity has compelled me to do, I beg to assure you that if the directions indicated in my letter to Mr. Carter are complied with this unfortunate affair may be promptly terminated.

"I am obliged to warn you that any effort at my seizure must ruin the situation for us all. I shall then be obliged to retain custody of Mademoiselle until my safety seems assured. Thereafter I shall dispose of the jewel as best I may. On the other hand, if my terms are met with, the jewel shall be restored and Mademoiselle shall be at liberty to return immediately.

"It is inconvenient at this moment to explain to you the unfortunate situation that has made it necessary for me to resort to so infamous a measure. I can say only that I have done so through finding myself in an impasse. Of the two dishonors, I have chosen that which would seem to be the lesser.

"With profound remorse.

"Your unhappy son,

"ARMAND."

The design of this forgery, no doubt a very clever one and the result of long practice, was immediately clear to Devlin. Raoul trusted that his impersonation of Armand might not yet have been discovered. Indeed, Devlin reflected that it had actually been discovered only by merest accident, his casual reference to Armand's facial features when Annik had spoken of her brother as being so slow and ceremonious that his navy friends had given him jokingly the soubriquet of Sea-turtle. Then, on Devlin's surprise at this inept petit nom, Jacqueline had partly explained [illegible] mention of her brother's nose, the hooked Norman nose of her mother's family. Following this Devlin had made his sketch.

He now reflected that only for this chance reference Raoul's true identity might have rested undiscovered. But now all were aware that Raoul was the villain of the piece, and no telling what he might have done to or with Armand.

Herein lay the present rub. This letter to the Comte could avail nothing because it told him nothing to relieve his overwhelming anxiety. Also, since this letter pretended to be from Armand, so likewise must be that addressed to the Carters.

Devlin wondered if the Comte would dare withhold that communication, and something told him that he would. In the frantic anxiety that obsessed him the Comte was not apt to consider Easter at all. Resting on his droit de seigneur, the Comte, Devlin believed, would be certain to take measures of his own in which Easter's welfare would be entirely secondary.

Devlin looked thoughtfully at the peasant who stood slumped with his sagging shoulders against the wall. It was impossible to say how this stolid fellow knew, and he seemed at best an unpromising individual with whom to deal.

Devlin was quite right in presuming that one might about as well try to treat or reason with a bob-tailed sheep dog that had come to the gate with the note tied to its collar.

"Listen, bonhomme," Devlin said. "We have been tricked by Madame. When the Comte reads that letter he will refuse to deal with your master at all."

The man did not answer. His blue eyes, reddened by sea and cider, goggled vacantly at Devlin.

"But I," said Devlin, "am American, and therefore very rich. I will pay your master whatever he demands. That for me is nothing. A bagatelle. But you will have to take me to him immediately.

The fellow shook his head stupidly. "He is far away, Monsieur."

"How far?"

"I do not know."

"When did you see him?"

"I have not seen him at all."

"How did you get these letters?"

"By the poste. The courier brought them."

"Why did you bring them here?"

"My daughter told me to. Me, I know nothing. I cannot read. I thought I might get a grosse piece, and instead I get a blow on the jaw."

"That can be healed." Devlin reached in his pocket, then gave him a billet of twenty francs."

"Merci, Monsieur."

"Are you a fisherman?"

"H'oui, monsieur"—Bretons are apt to aspirate their vowels.

"Where do you live?"

"By Mousterlin, monsieur."

"What is your name?"

"They call me Per' Kerodec."

"Come with me," Devlin said. He stepped to the gate and rang the bell. There was a short delay. Then steps came on the gravel inside and the door was opened by Jcaqueline herself. Her face was very flushed and her violet eyes met Devlin's defiantly. It was evident that she had rushed up to the house, given the letter to the Comte, and had run back immediately to detain the messenger and to keep Devlin from questioning him to any length or under any pressure.

"It seems to me, Madame," said Devlin, "that you and I should be allies in this affair instead of adversaries."

Jacqueline looked surprised. "I must obey the instructions of my father, Monsieur, and since you are his guest so should you. But why should I make cause with you?"

"Because you do not believe that your brother has suffered any harm from Raoul. Your father, on the contrary, is apt to believe the worst and act accordingly."

"That is true," Jacqueline admitted.

"Personally," said Devlin, "I am not interested in the seizure of Raoul and his punishment for whatever wrong he may have done. All I wish is the prompt return of Easter and of the diamond, and we are willing to pay what he demands for the ransom of both. Your father, on the contrary, is interested only in the welfare of his son, and if Raoul cannot prove this to the satisfaction of the Comte then his vengeance will be terrible."

"That is true," Jacqueline again agreed.

"If Easter and the diamond are returned," Devlin continued, "then for all we care Raoul may take the ransom and go his way. We shall drop the matter. Therefore, since you yourself are interested in Raoul's welfare and do not believe that he has done harm to Armand, the best you can do is to side with us."

Jacqueline was evidently impressed by this clear reasoning, but she looked at Devlin with despair.

"O, Monsieur, if only I had thought of that sooner!"

"You did not give yourself much time," Devlin said, dryly.

"And now," Jacqueline wailed, "it is too late."

"Why?" Devlin asked.

"Because my father has the letter to Mr. Carter and we do not know the terms that it contains. Raoul is still trying to impersonate Armand. The address is Armand's handwriting. But it is a forgery."

"How do you know?" Devlin asked.

"Because Armand never crosses a T."

"You are keen," Devlin said. "Then you believe that if the letter contains terms for the ransom of Easter and the Peace Stone your father will not disclose its contents because he will reason that if he were to do so Raoul would take himself off and there would be no more chance of learning what has happened to Armand?"

"Precisely, monsieur. It seems outrageous, especially as Easter is our guest and came here at papa's own request. The protection of a guest is sacred. Even the Arabs observe it."

"Yes," Devlin agreed, "but in the scale against your father's love for his only son it would not weigh at all."

"Not one milligram, Monsieur. Papa would see the whole world destroyed rather than any harm came to Armand. During the war it was different, because there was no help for it."

Devlin reached in his pocket and took out the letter to the Comte. "Here is another message purporting to come from Armand, Madame. Though addressed to your father, I had no scruple in opening it because you snatched away mine. But this one does not tell us anything at all. It will merely increase the frenzy of the Comte, and make his rage against Raoul more terrible. Perhaps we had better suppress it."

He handed Jacqueline the letter. The Breton remained stolidly slumped against the wall. He might have been stuffed with straw. Jacqueline glanced through the letter, then looked at Devlin with a frightened face.

"Papa had better not see this," she said. "It would be apt to give him a stroke. He sent me to bring him the messenger."

Devlin turned to the Breton. "Monsieur le Comte desires to talk to you."

"H'oui, Monsieur."

"You had better not tell him that you had another letter that was taken from you," Devlin said. "He would be apt to kill you."

"H'oui, Monsieur."

It was impossible to tell what was passing, if anything, behind the pale, bloodshot eyes, but Devlin doubted that the man knew much that could be of any avail.

"Report yourself to Monsieur le Comte at the chateau," Devlin said. "Go——"

The man started off in the lurching gait of his class, this made more clumsy by the straw stuffed sabots.

"Wait a moment, Madame," Devlin said to Jacqueline, and then, as the peasant passed through the gate, "Do you consent to help me in this affair?"

"That depends, Monsieur."

"It is your only chance to aid Raoul," Devlin said.

"Very well. I agree."

"I realize," said Devlin, "that it must be useless to try to force your father into telling us the contents of this message. Such an effort could lead only to anger on both sides, and it would be a waste of valuable time. It is better that we try to locate Raoul and accept his terms, whatever these may be."

"But how is that possible, Monsieur?"

"I have been thinking it out. To do this, I put myself in Raoul's place, so that I may reason with his mind. This is the more possible because I am myself a sailor and familiar with this coast. During the war I was up and down it a number of times with convoys and sweeping for mines. The same service as that of Raoul and your brother."

"Really, Monsieur?" Jacqueline's eyes rested on him with more confidence.

"Say, then, that I am Raoul. I entice Easter from the house, she believing me to be Armand. I tell her that the diamond has been traced and followed by the band of Apaches that tried to get it in Washington, and I say that if she and the diamond are not found here there will be no object in searching the premises or offering harm to any one here. Easter has no reason to be suspicious of Armand."

"True, Monsieur——"

"The problem then is how I may be able to detain her, where to hide her. This must be at some spot where there is an avenue of escape if discovered. As a sailor, I turn naturally to the sea. A cottage on the shore suggests itself, but there are objections. The going and coming, the risk of attracting curiosity. What, then, occurs to the mind as better?"

"A boat," Jacqueline said, promptly. "Myself, I thought of that because if one is a sailor one knows how to go where one likes."

"Precisely. Also there are not many isolated cottages, but there are plenty of boats in a place where the industry is fishing. Hundreds of boats."

"And all alike," Jacqueline said.

"Yes, to land folk. But not to other boatmen. These perceive the difference as a shepherd knows his sheep."

"Ma foi, I had not thought of that."

"Nevertheless," Devlin continued, "no particular boat might be remarked unless one was looking for such, and then the person would have to be a clever fellow familiar with all the craft of the locality. That, Madame, is the sort of man I want you to find for me. Not a loggerhead like this peasant, but a fisherman of the place who is shrewd and keen and——"

"Avaricious?" Jacqueline supplied.

"Precisely. You who have lived here all your life may know of such a person."

"That I do," Jacqueline said, promptly. "A man who has a big boat on the river down below here. Part of the year he fishes and carries cargoes. Then, at about this season, he cleans and paints his boat and dyes the sails to take out parties of tourists for fishing or for promenades, to visit the lighthouse on the Grand Glennon. He is not stupid, this Yves Guillonec."

"You have another letter. Give it to me."

"Is he available?" Devlin asked.

"Probably. I saw him the other day burning algae on the beach to fertilize his potatoes."

"We might tell him," Devlin said, "that I am an artist and wish to make some studies of the fishing boats at work. I sketch enough for that. What sort of boat has he got?"

"A big sardinier, like all the rest. And if you find Raoul?"

"I should go prepared to meet his terms. Tell him that the Comte had confiscated his letter to me and that I had guessed where he was apt to be. The affair can then be settled between us. I should, of course, demand proof that your brother has not been seriously harmed."

"Monsieur, I am going to confide in you. I shall tell you what I think and trust to your discretion."

Devlin gave her a level look. "I know what you are going to say, that Armand may be mixed up in this, that he resented your father's giving the Peace Stone to a stranger. Am I not right?"

Jacqueline nodded. "Papa would be furious if one hinted at such a possobility. Some men, Monsieur, may be very strong of character yet possess no imagination at all. Navy officers are apt to be like that. Their thoughts run in grooves of duty. Papa felt it his duty to give up this Peace Stone and now he feels his first duty to his only son."

"Perhaps," Devlin suggested, "he has a suspicion he will not admit that Armand may be in this plot, and that makes him even more entete."

Jacqueline knit her pretty brows. "That, of course, is possible. In fact, I am not sure but that papa would prefer that Armand were dead rather than such a fripon. Either would be enough to kill papa, the one through his pride, the other his heart."

"In any case, Raoul would be blamed by your father as the instigator," Devlin said, "and the Comte's vengeance would be terrible. The fury of these gentlemen is like a hurricane in the tropics."

Jacqueline nodded. "We must find Raoul."

"We, Madame?"

"Yes. I shall go with you. I can be of help in many ways. I think your reasoning is not only logical but exact. This note papa suppressed was probably to tell you where to leave the ransom money and return to find the jewel."

"That place," said Devlin, "is apt to be on the coast where the approach is visible from all about, so that he would not risk a guet-apens."

"Exactly," Jacqueline agreed. "Like the beach between the Beg-Meil semaphore and Mousterlin, with the lagoon flanking it and the inlet at the far end. Annik and I go there sometimes to catch equilles at low tide."

"I suppose," said Devlin, "any suggestion to your father that Armand was involved would make things worse."

"It would make them no better." Devlin smiled at this "replique en Normandie." "In fact, I begin to think that such an idea has occurred to papa to augment his distress."

It struck Devlin that if he were to seek out and find Raoul with no bargain made he would not be under compulsion to pay any ransom at all, either for the Peace Stone or for Easter. He guessed also that Jacqueline had thought of this and so determined to be among those present should Devlin's plan succeed. It looked as if Jacqueline believed Armand to be involved.

Jacqueline, Devlin reflected, could unquestionably be of great assistance—had been already, in fact. But she might prove a decided nuisance at the showdown. It irked Devlin first to have been fooled in the identity of Raoul, then to reward his criminal cleverness by a price of a million francs. But it was true that, after all, Easter was getting the diamond for nothing, and that sum must represent but a small fraction of its value.

Nevertheless, he did not want to pay it to a rank outsider. If Armand, who possessed an actual inheritance claim to the diamond, had presented this without the knowledge of the Comte, Devlin would have advised approving it. But Devlin failed to see where Raoul came into the business at all except, perhaps, as the agent for Armand, who could only have pushed his claim at the cost of a clash with his father.

At best, it was a business that Devlin much preferred to try to settle in his own way. So he said, dubiously:

"I do not see how you could go with me on this quest for Raoul, Madame. It might take several days of cruising here and there to locate him."

"Nevertheless, Monsieur, I must go with you," Jacqueline said, firmly.

"Would that be convenable, Madame? You, a young and charming widow of distinguished family, to live aboard a boat with me?"

"No part of this is convenable," Jacqueline said, tersely. "What about Easter?"

"She could not help herself."

"No more can I. Frankly, Monsieur, I believe the affair will arrange itself better if I am on the spot."

"What will you tell your father? How explain your absence?"

"I shall say that the situation here is intolerable for me and that I have taken Annik with me to visit a friend at Pont-Aven."

"He would not permit that."

"He would not have a chance to prevent, and Annik will do as I say. I should simply go, and leave him a note. I shall tell him that I do not approve his withholding the letter to Mr. Carter and yourself."

Here, Devlin perceived, was an

SPORT'S Come

Our Contribution Helps Make the Exhibition at the Oly

By Malcoln

Mrs. Batchelder's "Victory"

FOR the first time in 2,000 years sport has re-won her laurels in the field of art.

Sport was the inspiration of the art of Greece. The highest dream of Greek sculptors was to capture in bronze and marble the beauty of athletes in action. Rome, when Rome was imitating Greece, dreamed likewise. Since then sport has brought forth nothing great in art until to-day.

This summer visitors to the Olympic games in Amsterdam have been astonished to find a magnificent international exhibition of contemporary art relating to sport. No one was aware that living artists had turned to sport for inspiration. We in America, for example, had seen the prizefight pictures of George Bellows, but we had supposed them isolated from contemporary art—almost unique. Instead, they must now be regarded as early fruits of a vast new harvest.

Surprising as it may sound, the exhibition at Amsterdam is the most comprehensive collection of sporting art ever assembled. There, immortalized in modern bronze and marble, may be seen the discus thrower of to-day, the football scrimmage, polo players, baseball pitchers and golfers busy at their games. Arrayed along the walls are pictures of wrestling matches, horse races, fox hunting, duck shooting, trout fishing—all the delights of field and stream.

America has sent a score of paintings by Rungius, Lie, Lever, Johansen, Couse and others; an excellent assortment of prints and thirty examples of sculpture, including pieces by R. Tait McKenzie, Mahonri Young and James Earle Fraser.

Sport may be called the common denominator of American life. Events of the gridiron, the diamond and the ring often arouse among us as much attention as national elections. Perhaps that is why America's art achievement at Amsterdam outranks the rest. European artists have contributed many remarkable sculptures and a distinguished selection of sporting pictures, but for range of subject, freshness of treatment, virility of expression and accuracy of spirit America's contribution is supreme.

Consider our sculpture in the exhibition.

Two thousand years ago the trained human body was more beautiful—certainly more graceful, than now. But it was not as efficient. The American athlete is more angular and brawny than his classical rival; his movements are less smooth, his performance less harmonious. Yet he has greater skill than was ever known of yore.

Scholars tell us that could ancient Greek and Roman athletes be pitted against modern title-holders the heroes of the past would be routed by the champions of to-day.

Accordingly, the American sculptor aims to show the skill rather than the grace of American athletes. He is chiefly concerned with the competition of the game, and that is, of course, exactly what concerns the athlete himself. The American sculptor prefers the moment when the play is at its height and the competition most intense. If the sport is one wherein the critical moment does not lend itself to sculptural representation (as in swimming) the next best posture is chosen—the swimmer just ready to dive.

Always it is the skill of our athletes which is portrayed. Their grace—and they have a grace, an angular, loose-jointed Yankee litheness all their own—is secondary. Exhausted runners and dying gladiators we leave to the ancients. I can recall but one American sculpture where mishap has dictated the subject. This is a bronze group with one football player binding the injured leg of another.

We want in athletic sculpture what we want in athletic games—action and intensity. To be sure, the Greeks and Romans also liked action and intensity, but in their sculpture these passions were tranquillized. Perhaps the most intense piece of sculpture created of old was the Laocoön, a standing group in Pentelic marble of a father and two sons struggling against serpents. Here the horror of the situation has supplied the intensity. Should the serpents be chiselled away, physical motion would remain, yet the figures would not show more action than do many American pieces at Amsterdam.

America's most famous sculptor of sport is R. Tait McKenzie, a Canadian by birth, who long has been the director of athletics at the University of Pennsylvania. Six of McKenzie's works are on view at the Olympic exhibit, three having football for their impasse, a cul-de-sac. He could manage quite well without Jacqueline, especially after the information she had volunteered about the boat and about its patron, Yves Guillonec. But something told him that if he refused to let Jacqueline accompany him she would suspect his motive and possibly find means to thwart his effort. In fact, he thought that she suspected him already. In this bizarre affair it appeared that each party concerned was ready to double-cross the others. Devlin was convinced that Raoul would manage to bilk Armand, if indeed Armand were of his own accord mixed up in it.

"It would be very sure to compromise you, Madame," Devlin said, even while feeling this objection to be thin."

Jacqueline laughed lightly. "A bagatelle compared to how I shall be compromised if we succeed."

"What do you mean?" Devlin asked.

"It is true that I am in love with Raoul. So also is Raoul in love with me. My marriage was one of convenience, arranged by both families. There was never more than friendship between my husband and myself. We two, the most concerned, had the least to say about it. After he was brought back from the front, a mutile, I was sorry for him, but"—her violet eyes looked sapphire as the pupils dilated—"I should have gone mad if it had not been for Raoul, who spent his permissions here. Then papa saw fit to forbid him the house."

"I understand," Devlin said, gently. "Then if we find Raoul and pay him this ransom your plan is to remain with him?"

"That is true, Monsieur," Jacqueline said, calmly. "My life at home has become detestable."

This, Devlin perceived, altered again the situation. Jacqueline herself had as much right to a share in the diamond as had Armand, and her plan now was to collect that share and to run off with her lover. Raoul ought not to object to this arrangement, Devlin thought. Jacqueline was lovely enough to satisfy any man. Also she had intelligence and spirit and was desperately in love.

He hesitated no longer. "Very well, then. But there is another point. I do not know how much money Raoul is demanding.

"I think that I can guess pretty nearly," Jacqueline said. Raoul wrote me from Bordeaux, where he had gone with Armand to see him off for America. He said that he had been given a month's leave that was granted partly on Armand's application that Raoul be permitted to go with him to America to assist in regulating a family business of great importance. Raoul told me also that he was in a very serious position financially and that unless he could raise nearly a million francs before the expiration of his leave he must face disaster."

Devlin turned this statement in his mind. It told him two thinks: that Armand might possibly, under these circumstances, have connived at the deception to save his relative and best friend disgrace and punishment, and that Jacqueline's resentment of her father's course had not mere avarice as a motive.

"Then," said he, "you think that the sum of a million francs ought to be enough?"

Jacqueline drew a deep breath. Evidently she had expected Devlin to protest with horror and dismay the demand for what was to a French woman an enormous sum of money. But she managed to answer steadily enough: "I think so Monsieur. In fact, I am sure of it."

Devlin nodded. "Can do," he answered briefly.

* * * *

Shortly after dark the big fishing party boat, Grace-a-Dieu, stood in toward a long stretch of lonely beach, as Easter was able to discover by the white zone of surf and sand, and the absence of any light on the shore.

She did not anchor but lay hove to at a safe distance while two men got into the skiff they were towing and rowed away for what appeared to be a dark narrow break in the band of pallid white, a little inlet, Easter thought. As the sailor shoved off, Easter overheard Armand mutter sotto voce: "Two flashes of your torch if anything goes wrong, patron."

The boat dissolved in the soft murk. Armand began to pace nervously up and down the deck, for this larger type of fishig boat was not open like most sardiniers, but decked its length with a large square hatch cut amidships and a small cabin rather than cuddy aft. Like most in those waters, it steered by a long tiller instead of a wheel, its two big sails, the clumsy old fashioned "clipping lug."

"There's scarcely been time for them to find your ransom, has there?" Easter asked.

"Plenty," Armand answered. "The Credit Lyonnais at Quimper would honor the draft of Mr. Carter, an American millionaire, and vouched for by the Comte de Marsac. Or they could telegraph to Mr. Carter's Paris banker. My note should have been delivered by noon."

"Has the bank that much money?" Easter asked.

"Of course," Armand answered in surprise. "French banks transact their business in specie. We have not the perfected check system like yours in America, or even the crossed check one of England. French people never have liked paper. They want, as you say in America, the dough."

Easter returned to her early inquiries. "And what if they should not pay?"

Armand said in his cold voice. "I shall give them three days. If then they ignore my demands we are apt to have a long voyage."

Easter felt her heart skip a beat. "We?"

"What else? I can't hang around here until some of these fishermen begin to notice me and gossip. I shall have to make for a foreign shore. Spain or perhaps England, depending on the weather. This boat has nothing but her sails. Spain would be much better because the prevailing winds are northwest."

"But why keep me?" Easter asked.

"Because my safety demands it. How long should I last if it were known I was aboard a boat, what with fast patrol vessels and aircraft."

"If I promised not to tell——"

He gave a short laugh. "What price a promise under compulsion? I should not blame you for breaking it. And the pressure on you would be very great."

"But it wouldn't," Easter declared. "We all feel that you have a perfect right to some compensation for this jewel."

He looked at her gloomily. "There are risks of which you are ignorant. It would be an affair not only of the police but of the naval authorities, possibly international. You could not resist, for all your good faith, of which I have no doubt. They have methods forbidden in America."

"If you mean a third degree," Easter said hotly, "then you needn't worry. They'd never dare. There would be an international complication then. Mr. Carter stands high in Washington. There'd be an American warship at Brest all cleared for action before they could put me through or give a truth telling injection, if that's what you mean."

Armand laughed as if amused. "Not quite so bad as that. They would make you see me in a pretty bad light."

"Then you mean to hold me indefinitely."

"O, no. Just long enough to get safely away."

"With the Peace Stone, I suppose. A nice name for it, I'll say. Nothing but trouble since first you told us about it. Even before."

"Those attacks were all a part."

"This is going to break your father's heart," Easter said. "Do you think it's worth it?"

"No. It's not avarice that's driving me. Some day you'll understand. Meanwhile, you'll have to make the best of it."

themes. "The Onslaught," a powerful portrayal of a football scrimmage, with hurtling players in mass movement, perpetuates the joy of skill and the agony of skill demanded in the game most typical of twentieth century America. "Blocked Play" is equally expressive of competitive animation.

These football examples reveal that the attitudes in sport which evoke the best sculpture are those in which the individual is involved in forces outside himself. Guy le Gourmet, a French critic, has said in this connection: "The dance of such interlocking forces, which is the keenest pleasure of sport itself, is sport's finest possible gift to art."

Occasionally McKenzie has isolated and glorified the individual, as in "The Modern Discus Thrower," a track runner called "The Sprinter," a swimmer poised for a dive, entitled "The Plunger," and "The Punt," which shows a star of the gridiron making a kick in superb style. But these examples of his work are, for the reasons just stated, necessarily less profound.

Among the other American sculptures at the Olympic festival mention should be made of Mahonri Young's latest bronze, "The Bantams," depicting prizefighters in the whirl of battle, and Laura Gardin Fraser's "Wrestlers," with strained nerve and muscle and tendon, at the peak of their match.

Other American woman have contributed some exceptionally good works, which, though more quiet, are yet vigorous and full of strength. Included among these are "Victory," by Evelyn Batchelder — the challenge trophy for general athletic excellence in the United States Atlantic fleet—a second "Victory," trophy of our Asiatic fleet, by Miss Eberle, and a charming presentment of "Diana" by Anna Huntington.

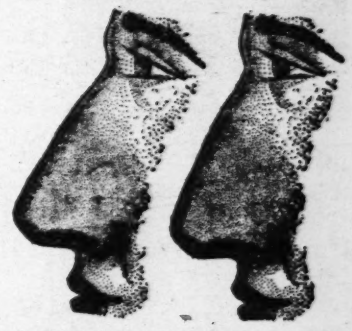

Comparing America's achievements with that of the Greeks, W. Frank Purdy, who selected the American sculptures for Amsterdam, declares:

"Not since the time of Phidias has there been a sporting art as virile in itself and as thoroughly representative of a nation as that which we are creating today in America. Of course, in purity of form the Greeks excelled us, but we are a young country, just becoming art conscious. As water cannot rise above its source, so the art of a people cannot rise above that people's physical and mental plane. Our racial inter-mixture has produced a splendid new type of athlete. And it is my belief that our many faceted population may yet evolve the most perfect type ever known.

What Has Happened to British Justice?

SIR LEO MONEY'S KISS IN HYDE PARK AND THE FUSS THAT FOLLOWED IT

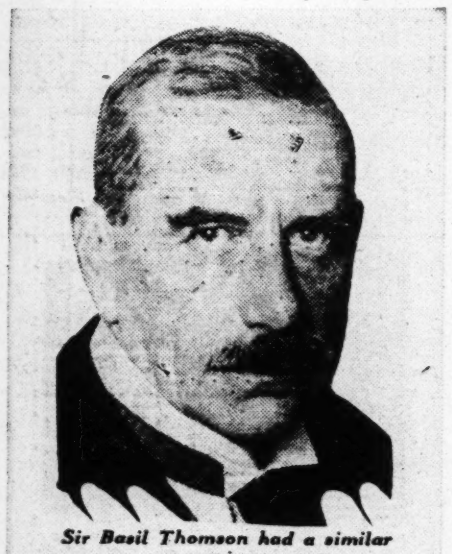

Miss Irene Savidge, the girl in the case.

IT MAY seem like an exaggeration to say that the British Empire is just now reverberating with the echoes of Sir Leo Money's kiss in Hyde park, but that is exactly the state of affairs over there. The case has indeed rocked the nation, has brought British justice into the glare of a severe—and very entertaining—parliamentary inquiry, and some say that it was responsible for the ousting of Sir William Horwood as head of hallowed Scotland Yard.

In a word, the revered London police, heretofore regarded as paragons, have been twisting the tail of British liberty.

Incredible as it must seem, the police were accused by the young woman in the case of subjecting her to methods of persecution most unbecoming to a London policeman. To put the matter quite baldly, they employed the third degree. In a ruthless and most undignified manner, according to this young woman's story, Scotland Yard browbeat her, asked her embarrassing questions, flirted with her and generally behaved in a way altogether beastly and un-British.

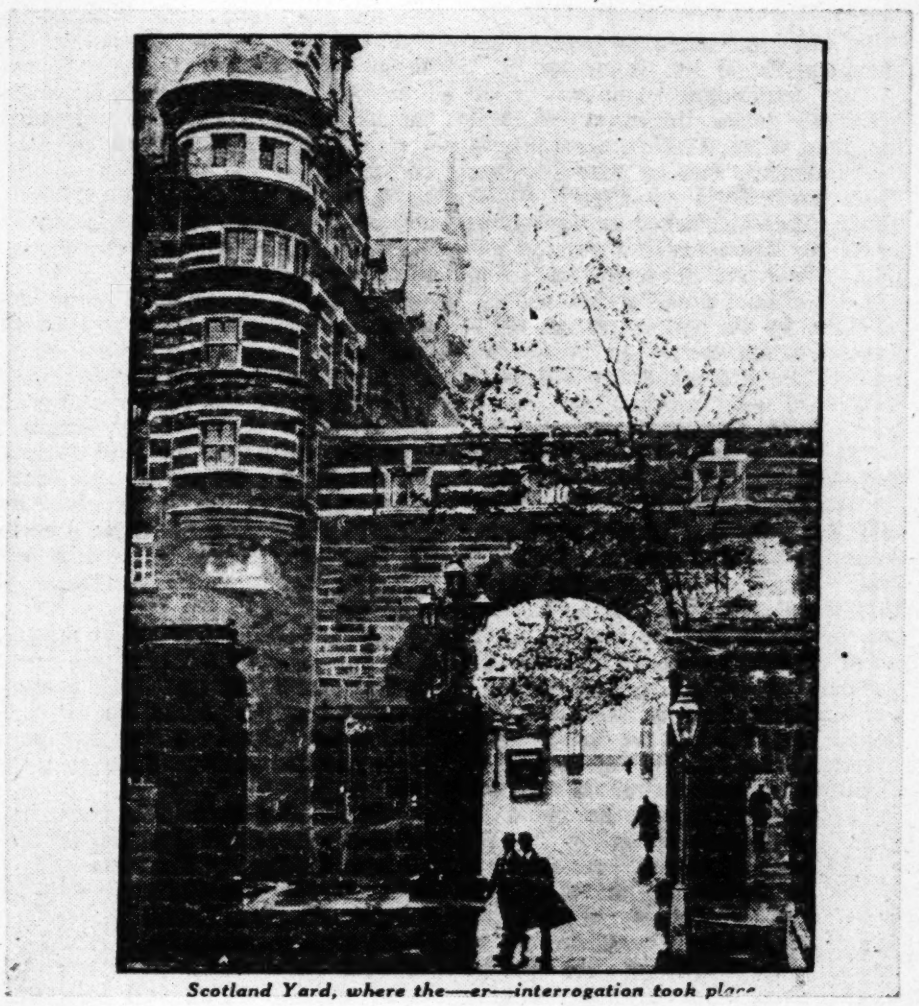

Sir Basil Thomson had a similar experience.

Is it any wonder that parliament has been indignant and that the police have been terribly upset by the disclosures? The British public, in fact, accustomed as it is to the idea of the chivalrous and gentle-handed London bobby, has been aroused as never before in recent years. Scotland Yard's great prestige has suffered tremendously.

And all because Sir Leo kissed pretty Irene Savidge in the park.

Now it is no new thing at all for a dignified British gentleman to kiss a young woman in Hyde park. In recent years quite a number of prominent men have been arrested for alleged indecent behavior in this naughty playground.

There was, for instance, Sir Basil Thompson, 64, former assistant commissioner of metropolitan police, who was fined five pounds and costs despite his interesting defense that he had gone to the park to gather material for a book on the scandalous conditions there. And there was Sir Almeric Fitz Roy, 71, K. C. B., K. C. V. O., direct descendant of King Charles II, who was arrested for accosting young women and fined five pounds.

Scotland Yard, where the—er—interrogation took place

The sensation and the novelty of this latest case was not Sir Leo's behavior in the park, but what came of it.

Sir Leo Chiozza Money, 57, and married, was a prominent figure in the government during the war. He is said to have been responsible for the adoption of the convoy system which helped to defeat Germany's submarine warfare, and he is also credited with persuading the government to put into effect a rationing blockade policy. He has written several economic books and a book of poetry.

You can see he was by no means one of the comomn herd.

The Fatal Evening.

Now to the story.

On the evening of April 23 last at 9:45 o'clock two policemen in plain clothes saw an elderly man and a young woman sitting on chairs near a small tree in the park. The officers approached within four yards of the unsuspecting pair and witnessed what they asserted—though they must be very sorry now that they ever mentioned the matter—was behavior "reasonably likely to offend against public decency."

Accordingly the officers placed the couple under arrest.

Sir Leo—for it was indeed he—stormed about in a great fury. "I am not the usual riff-raff" he exclaimed—or rather bellowed. "I am a man of substance!" But the officers firmly refused to let him go and began to hustle him toward a police station with his companion.

According to the policemen, Sir Leo struggled with them all the way, while the girl merely seemed amused by the whole eposide. She was quite good looking, and shapely as a statue; apparently a quite respectable appearing person. She said her name was Mis Irene Savidge, 22 years old, a valve inspector, and that she was engaged—though not to Sir Leo.

On May 1 Sir Leo and Miss Savidge were arraigned and pleaded not guilty to the charges preferred by Police Constables Badger and McLean. Lady Money attended the arraignment, as well as the girl's parents.

Sir Leo's story, as told to Magistrate Chancellor with the help of his attorney, Sir Henry Curtiss Bennett, was that he had known Miss Savidge six months, that they had been introduced by a Miss Marie Egan, and that on the evening in question they had gone to a restaurant together before taking a stroll in the park. He denied that he and the girl had been misbehaving.

His counsel informed the court that Sir Leo had struggled with the officers because he wanted to obtain the name and address of "a man with an umbrella" (his name was afterward found to be Leslie W. Hastings) who would have been in a position to testify to his innocence. Hastings was missing at the trial, but later made a statement to Sir Leo's lawyers.

The attorney dwelt upon Miss Savidge's good character. He said she had discussed her coming marriage with Sir Leo, as well as her financial problems. She lived at home with her parents, he pointed out, and had worked in the same place of employment for more than four years.

Miss Savidge was about to take her place on the stand when the magistrate interposed and said that the case would be dismissed. He remarked that the police had failed dismally to obtain the necessary corroborative evidence, and added that the case never should have been allowed to reach a court. He therefore ordered the police to pay ten pounds and costs.

For the London police 'twas indeed a bitter pill.

Inquiry Announced.

Sir William Horwood, commissioner of police, announced the next day that he would conduct an inquiry into police methods and particularly into the arrest and acquittal of Sir Leo and Miss Savidge. Furthermore, the home secretary, Sir William Joynson-Hicks, called for a report to see whether an even fuller inquiry might be necessary. If the officers had perjured themselves in this case, it was intimated, there would be hell to pay.

On May 4 the home secretary announced in the house of commons that, "apart from any question of the conduct of individual officers, the general question of police procedure arises, and that I propose to refer to the committee on street offenses." He said he fully recognized the "gravity of the issues," and that he had considered with the proper authorities whether the officers concerned, men of unblemished records and long experience, had been guilty of perjury or of any breach of duty.

On May 9 Sir William, in an address before the North Kensington Conservative association, spoke of the duties of the Hyde park policemen. He pointed out that the police force was not responsible for the morals of the people but that it is their duty to make sure that visitors "see nothing that will offend them."

To quote from the London Daily Mirror—

"It was not illegal, of course, said Sir William, for any young member of the community to take an equally young lady walking in Hyde park and to sit in Hyde park, and it was not illegal to salute her with a chaste embrace. (Laughter.)"

The next day the home secretary stated in the house of commons that arrests for offenses in Hyde park during twelve months had totaled 692 and that of these 616 had been convicted—proving that the police had made very few mistakes. He mentioned the matter of more lights for the park.

"But is not Hyde park one of the few places where servant girls can carry on innocent flirtations?" asked Sir Robert Thomas.

"I expect them to do it," replied Sir William. (Laughter.)

The bombshell whose reverberations have shaken the empire exploded in the house of commons on May 17, when a Socialist member, Mr. Johnston, read a sworn statement from Miss Savidge accusing the police of using third degree methods to make her change her story and so clear their good name.

The affidavit stated that on the previous Tuesday, May 15, Inspector Alfred Collins and Sergeant W. H. Clarke, of Scotland Yard, had taken Miss Savidge from her place of employment, refused her the opportunity of communicating with her parents or legal adviser, hustled her off to Scotland Yard, and there questioned her ruthlessly for five hours.

Collins, according to the girl, began by informing her that the case was not nearly finished, that the police officers who had been implicated were men of good character and that their wives had to be considered.

He asked her about her income, her wardrobe, whether Sir Leo had given her things, and about visits to the movies. She denied that she and Sir Leo had "kissed or cuddled" in the cinema.

Tea time came and they had tea—Collins, Clarke and Miss Savidge. There was but one spoon. Collins suggested that the one spoon would do for them all and added, flippantly, "Irene will spoon with me." Then the questioning continued.

She was asked, said Miss Savidge, to describe exactly what she was wearing on the night in the park, particularly just how long, or how short, her dress was. She said Collins asked whether she had been wearing a petticoat, what color it was, and that the officer then remarked that it was a very pretty petticoat that she was now wearing.

Hearers Cry "Shame!"

"I will omit the next part of her statement," said Mr. Johnston.

The parliament members cried "Shame!" when Johnston reached the point where Collins, according to the statement, said to Miss Savidge: "You are really a good girl?" The officer, she said, asked her questions as to her character and pointed out that "there are several things one can do without morally sinning."

Then, by the girl's account, Collins sat beside her, put his arms around her and asked for a demonstration of what had happened in the park.

When she arrived home she collapsed, it was said.

"We have raised this discussion," said Mr. Johnston, "not because we have the slightest concern with this case. Our concern here tonight is that we should take whatever steps can be taken by this house to preserve whatever civil liberties we still possess.

"It is our duty to offer a determined opposition to anything in the nature of a Turkish system, star chamber methods or what is known in the United States as the third degree." (General cheers.)

The house discussed the matter until late in the evening and the home secretary then announced that a parliamentary tribunal would conduct an inquiry, not only into the Savidge case, but into police methods generally.

It was a sensational decision. In subsequent days there was feverish activity in the home office and in the inner sanctums of Scotland Yard.

To avoid what might amount to a second trial of Sir Leo and Miss Savidge, it was decided to limit the scope of the inquiry to the five-hour inquisition of the young woman.

The tribunal appointed consisted of Sir John Eldon Bankes, former justice of appeal; J. J. Withers, M. P., and H. B. Lee-Smith, M. P. The first hearing took place June 6, with the celebrated Sir Patrick Hastings appearing for Sir Leo, Sir Henry Curtis Bennett for Miss Savidge, and Norman Birkett for the police.

Miss Savidge took the stand as soon as Hastings had addressed the court. A bottle of smelling salts was placed before her. She said Collins and Clarke had been nice and friendly until after they'd had tea, and then the questioning became offensive. She had to stand up and then sit down so that they might see just how long, or how short, her dress was.

She told of Collins' saying, "You are a good girl, aren't you? . . . You need not be afraid to tell us. We are both married. We are both fond of a good time and were both gay when we were young."

Then she told about the "demonstration" and how Inspector Collins was very embarrassed when there was an interruption.

Cross-examined by Mr. Birkett, the witness admitted with downcast eyes that she had been deceiving her young man. She admitted, furthermore, that Sir Leo had kissed her once on the night in question in Hyde park.

"But it was just a peck," she added. "It was not a passionate kiss."

There were many questions about the Scotland Yard man's queries about the color and length of her petticoat, about his attempted exhibition of how Sir Leo and she behaved in the park, and about the matter of whether she had smoked any cigarettes in the park. She admitted she had smoked a cigarette.

But Birkett could do little or nothing to break her story of how Collins and Clarke had treated her. When she left the stand the statements in her affidavit remained unshaken. It began to look rather bad for the police. And when the girl's father testified that he came home and found her sobbing hysterically on her bed, crying, "Why did they pick on me, an innocent girl?"—well, one could already begin to detect a slight droop in the austeure posture of British justice.

Collins on the witness stand denied everything calculated to damage the fair name of the police.

Cross-examined by Hastings, who shot his questions at the officer with machine-like rapidity, he admitted that the police had made no attempt to bring the elderly and experienced Sir Leo to the Yard, and that his identification card, which he showed Miss Savidge when he called at her place of employment, bore the word "warrant."

Mr. Lee-Smith, one of the judges, asked Collins to tell in his own words about the so-called "demonstration." The officer said he asked her to show how thew had been sitting in the park and she said she would.

"She pushed her chair back and sat down and carefully thought," explained Collins. "Then she said—I am not quite sure of the words—'He clasped his right hand in my left hand, resting on my leg.' Then she thought again and, moving her right hand and left hand, said they were linked or locked or something like that."

Mr. Lee-Smith looked very puzzled. "I will tell you why I ask you all this," he said. "I have been trying to do it myself. (Laughter). Unless there is some one at my side to guide me as to what the movements lead to, I find I cannot, out of my own head, re-visualize enough for this elaborate statement."

On June 12 Sir William Horwood was called to the stand at the request of the tribunal. He admitted that there is no rule which deals with drawing a distinction between the examination of a witness who may merely be giving the identity of a pickpocket and the examination of a witness whose answers may materially affect his position or character. He said that the methods of the London police had "stood the test of a good many years, nearly 100 years."

Sir Archibald Bodkin, director of public prosecutions, the next witness, thumped the witness box repeatedly as he testified regarding how urgent he had considered the case and how important from a public standpoint. He said he had told Collins to see Miss Savidge for the reason that she had never yet given evidence, and then added, thumpingly, that if it were to be suggested that he had been a party to the matter of trying to clear a couple of constables he would "have a word or two to say."

"If it were," said Sir Archibald with a glare, "I should not have more than two words and they would be each of one syllable."

The countess of Oxford began taking very rapid notes when Mr. Birkett opened his address to the tribunal on the closing day of the proceedings, June 13. He appealed for justice for the police as well as for the public and criticized Sir Leo for not taking the stand. Sir Patrick interposed and pointed out that if Birkett had really wanted Sir Leo, the latter would have gone into the box at once.

Dealing with the "demonstration," the defense counsel said, "If the girl had gone a stage farther and said that Chief Inspector Collins indecently assaulted her, there is no judge in the land who would not have said to the jury, 'You cannot act on the uncorroborated word of this girl.'"

He concluded by saying that "a blow struck at the whole fabric of the state. I submit to you that the case against the police has signally failed."

Sir Patrick Hastings in his address branded the "system" as intolerable, and as something the tribunal ought to put an end to at once. Sir Archibald had stressed the word "urgent," he said, to explain why the girl's parents had not been informed, and suggested to the tribunal that "Sir Archibald is clearly not a patient man."

"I say deliberately that the method by which that girl was got to Scotland Yard is an outrage. They deliberately got her there by methods which they knew were the only ones that would have succeeded in getting her to go," declared Sir Patrick.

"This inquiry will produce one result in any case. It means that they will never get another girl of 22 into Scotland Yard, because every one knows what happens there from the admitted facts."

His address closed the hearings, leaving the tribunal to report to parliament.

The other day the news came that Lord Byng of Vimy, one of England's war heroes, had been appointed head of the London police to succeed Sir William Horwood.

POETICAL FANCIES

FAITH.

They said he was too old to plant azaleas,
That few shrubs were of slower growth than these;
'Twas foolish for a man of seventy summers
To think of putting out magnolia trees.

Japonicas! Why, it would take these ages
To make any kind of showing at all,
And besides he couldn't afford the large plants—
Would have to start with something rather small.

But he kept to his visions of a garden
With japonicas there to welcome spring,
And azaleas lifting roseate faces
To zephyrs that caused long gray moss to swing.

Cape jasmine to entice him with its perfume,
Forsythia to sway yellow in the breeze,
Spirea, soft and pure as angel kisses——
The old man had his dreams of all of these.

So he set out young plants in the deep rich soil,
Firm in his belief they'd soon be growing;
The sun and the rain were with him in the plan
And winds seemed more gentle in their blowing.

Years went by fast, as they do when one is old;
The garden was a flower shrine for all;
Each spring found its owner blooming with the shrubs,
And putting out new cuttings that were small.

—JENNIE M. DeLOACH.

TWILIGHT.

There's a peace that comes in summer
After the toil of the day is o'er,
When the mind is weary with thinking,
And the body is tired and sore.

Before the first star twinkles out,
While the sky shades in purple and rose,
Then I like to walk in my garden
Where my mind finds happy repose.

When the crickets and frogs begin their song,
Before the shades of night on the world descend,
'Tis then a part new in me is born
Away from the cares and worries of men.

The burdens of the day desert me,
Hopes for tomorrow loom before me,
Oh, there's no balm so good for the weary
As the sight of God's sky and grass and tree.

Of all the hours of my time on earth,
The ones for which I feel most blest
Come between the sunset and darkness,
For 'tis then my soul finds rest.

—EMILY UPSHAW.

MAGIC.

When I awoke this morning,
There was magic in the air,
And I hastened out of doors
To find the meaning there.

The apple tree by my door
Was a mass of pink and white,
And daffodils were dancing
In the sun, in pure delight.

Flowering shrubs on my lawn
Were bright with blossoms of gold,
While tulips were pushing up,
Unharmed by the winter's cold.

And as I stood there, gazing,
There appeared, to catch my eye,
A saucy Robin Redbreast
Who hopped serenely by.

Then I knew that spring had come
With all its birds and flowers,
With all its bright, warm sunshine,
And all its sudden showers.

And now I know the meaning
Of the magic in the air.
It ushered in the springtime,
And paused on the threshold there.

Beautiful magic of spring,
I pray you to remain,
Rejuvenate my heart
As you have the bleak terrain.

—EDNA HUBBARD SCOTT.

FLASHES.

It's funny how some folks appeal
So vividly to you—
Little lightning flashes
That thrill you thru and thru!

A smile that warms, a little clasp—
Caress that somehow feels
Wrapped in love's solicitude—
A tender voice that heals.

A little friendly act that binds
You closer, than a share
Of gold, from a callous source,
Or silver—jewels rare.

It's funny how some folks fit in
With your every mood—
Joyous—singing—when you laugh—
Saddened—when you brood. . . .

Right there when misfortune
Seeks to hold you down—
Trusting in you with a faith
That has no earthly bound!

God's own little flashes——
Shining night and day——
Illuminating paths to which You thought you'd lost the way!

—JULIA FOLSOM HARGRAVE.

DADDY.

"Daddy in heaven——" began her prayer—
She scarcely was five years old——
"I reckon you got some gold slippers on
And walking the streets of gold.

"I've been so good, just like you said;
I feed your dog every day——
You ought to see your Nellie Dog now;
She's sad since you went away.

"And I haven't thrown more bread in the fire
But give it to birds to eat,
'Cause I remember all that you said
'Bout crumbs making birdies sing sweet.

"I pour lots of water on the peach tree
You and I planted last year;
It's blooming now and smelling so sweet——
Wonder can you smell it there?"

That was a long, long time ago;
There's gray in the little girl's hair,
But today her soul is kneeling down
With the little childhood prayer:

"Daddy in heaven, you were so kind
In those five years that we knew,
And I've always wanted so much to do
The things you would have me to."

—JENNIE M. DeLOACH.

NACOOCHEE VALLEY.

I know a fertlie valley
In the hills of Habersham
Where the hand of God almighty
Wrought with care,
Where streams of crystal waters
Murmur softly on the breeze
And a perfume sweet and wholesome
Scents the air.

And every year, upon the heels,
Of sullen Winter comes
Capricious Spring to visit there,
And temper wind that numbs.
She brings her gusty servant March
To blow the mists away,
And April with her watering pots
To sprout the meadow's hay.

And then comes on her daughter May
A-skipping through the vale
With birds and bees and butterflies
For every hill and dale;
To scatter flowers here and there
Upon the fields and leas,
And hang her blossoms on the vines
That cling to budding trees.

'Tis then I long to visit there
And dream away the days,
Where every creature worships God
And sings an endless praise.
So, with each year, since I have learned
That favored vale to know
My heart can tell when Spring is there
And whispers me: "Let's go."

HIGH LIGHTS OF HISTORY

Chapter 91—The Danes In England.

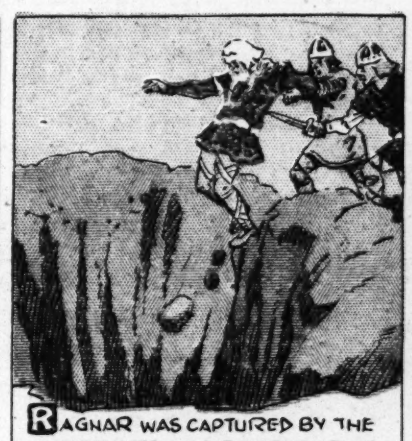

By J. CARROLL MANSFIELD

BY THE MIDDLE OF THE 9TH CENTURY A.D., THE ATTACKS OF THE DANES AND NORTHMEN UPON THE SHORES OF ENGLAND HAD BECOME MORE FREQUENT. MOST OF THESE ATTACKS WERE MERE PLUNDERING RAIDS, BUT AT LAST AN EVENT OCCURRED WHICH BROUGHT ON A GREAT INVASION THAT WAS TO THREATEN THE EXISTENCE OF THE ENGLISH SAXONS AS A NATION.

IN THE YEAR 865, RAGNAR LODBROK, THE MOST DREADED OF THE DANISH SEA-ROVERS, WAS SHIPWRECKED WITH A FEW MEN ON THE COAST OF NORTHUMBRIA.

RAGNAR WAS CAPTURED BY THE INHABITANTS WHO, REMEMBERING HIS PAST CRUELTY AND THE MANY INJURIES HE HAD INFLICTED UPON THEM, PROMPTLY THREW THE HATED PIRATE INTO A PIT OF SNAKES.

WHEN THE NEWS OF RAGNAR'S DEATH REACHED DENMARK, HIS SONS SWORE TO HAVE REVENGE, AND GATHERED MANY MEN AND SHIPS FOR AN INVASION OF ENGLAND.

LANDING IN ENGLAND, THE DANES SPEEDILY CONQUERED NORTHUMBRIA AND EAST ANGLIA. THEN THEY ATTACKED MERCIA. THE WEST SAXONS, LED BY KING AETHELRED, MARCHED TO AID THE MERCIANS, AND FOR A TIME HELD BACK THE DANES.

IN THE FIGHTING, AETHELRED RECEIVED A MORTAL WOUND, AND HIS BROTHER ALFRED, DESTINED TO BECOME FAMOUS AS ALFRED "THE GREAT," SUCCEEDED HIM AS KING OF WESSEX. THIS TOOK PLACE IN 871 A.D.

ALFRED, THEN ONLY 23 YEARS OLD, BEGAN A BRAVE BUT FUTILE STRUGGLE TO DRIVE OUT THE INVADERS. IN THE FIRST YEAR OF HIS REIGN HE FOUGHT NINE FIERCE BATTLES, AND WAS WHIPPED IN EVERY ONE.

BUT THE INVADERS LOST MANY MEN, AND READILY AGREED TO A TRUCE. FOR THE NEXT THREE YEARS, WESSEX WAS NOT DISTURBED BY THE DANES, WHO SPENT THAT TIME COMPLETING THE CONQUEST OF MERCIA.

© McClure Newspaper Syndicate

THE WEST SAXONS ALONE WERE LEFT TO OPPOSE THE SEIZURE OF ALL ENGLAND BY THE DANES. IN 876 THE DANES, WHO HAD BEEN STRONGLY REENFORCED BY MEN FROM THE CONTINENT, RENEWED THE WAR WITH WESSEX.

THOUGH BEATEN TIME AFTER TIME, ALFRED KEPT UP THE UNEQUAL FIGHT FOR 2 YEARS. FINALLY THE DANES OVERRAN WESSEX, AND ALFRED BECAME A FUGITIVE, HIDING AMONG THE MARSHES OF SOMERSET DISGUISED AS A PEASANT.

HIS FAITHFUL FOLLOWERS GUARDED THE SECRET OF HIS IDENTITY. ONE TIME WHILE BEING SHELTERED IN THE HOME OF A COWHERD, HIS HOST'S WIFE ASKED ALFRED TO WATCH SOME CAKES BAKING ON THE HEARTH WHILE SHE BUSIED HERSELF ABOUT THE HUT.

THE KING, INTENT UPON PLANS FOR FUTURE ACTION, FORGOT TO TURN THE CAKES OVER, AND WHEN THE WOMAN FOUND THEM BURNED SHE BOXED HIS EARS SOUNDLY, NOT KNOWING IT WAS THE KING OF WESSEX SHE STRUCK.

OIL WELLS.

The kerosense, gasoline and benzine the world uses in such enormous quantities comes from a heavy oil that lies underneath the surface of the earth. In order to bring it to the surface a hole must be drilled downward and such holes are often as deep as half a mile. The job is sometimes a very difficult and expensive one. One method is by means of a rotary drill which bores a hole by means of a bit attached to a drill stem. A wooden structure, or "derrick," must first be built. It reaches a height of about a hundred feet from its top is suspended, over a large pulley, the heavy steel ropes which support the drill stem. This drill stem passes through a gripping device situated just above the surface of the earth, which is so arranged that a steam engine can turn it. As the apparatus turns about, the drill stem as it rotates, is forced out through the mit at the bottom, and ascends again on the outer side of the stem bringing with it all the material bored out by the drill.

When the required dept his reached [illegible] attended to the upper part of the hole and the oil is transported through thes eeither to large storage tanks or to the waiting tank cars. Once [illegible] too, it is pumped hundreds of miles in underground "pipe lines" to the "refineries" where gasoline, kerosene, benzine and many other products are extracted from it.

How much oil is taken from these wells each day? That depends on many things. Some wells have produced as much as 150,000 barrels per day, others particularly the wells that have been flowing for many years, produce only ten or even five barrels a day.

The largest oil fields in North America are in eastern Mexico, at Tampico, in Texas, Oklahoma, Louisiana, California, Kansas, Pennsylvania, Montana, Wyoming and in Canada near the city of Calgary in the province of Alberta.

CHINOOK

By EL COMANCHO

LAHASH—The first A is as in Father and the second as in Hat. The word is derived from the French and is used to mean either Axe or Hatchet, but mainly the latter. The English word Axe is usually carried over into Chinook for the large tool. LOLONIKA LAHASH means "Bring my hatchet."

LOPE—This is the English word Rope with the English R changed to the Indian L. It is used to mean any kind of a rope, strip, cord, thong or similar article. TENAS LOPE is "little rope" or string in many cases, while HYAS LOPE or SKOOKUM LOPE means a big or a strong rope, and thus a hawser or cable. CHICKAMUN LOPE is a wire or metal rope, or chain.

ANSWERS TO PUZZLES.

HOW TO MAKE A BUTTON PUZZLE

This puzzle is simply made but highly mystifying. We won't tell you how to solve it, for you will enjoy working it out yourself all the more.

To make it, get a piece of wood one-fourth of an inch thick, one inch wide and eight inches long, and make three holes, spaced two inches apart, through it. Make a fold in middle of a piece of stout cord fifteen inches long and pass this fold through the central hole as shown in the picture. Then put a button on the cord on each side and tie the ends to the other two holes. The trick lies in putting the buttons together without untying either of the knots. Can you do it?

EDITORIAL

WHEN HE WAS NINE YEARS OLD.

Not long ago I read a book written by a friend of mine. The book was the story of his life, and the first part of it dealt with his boyhood.

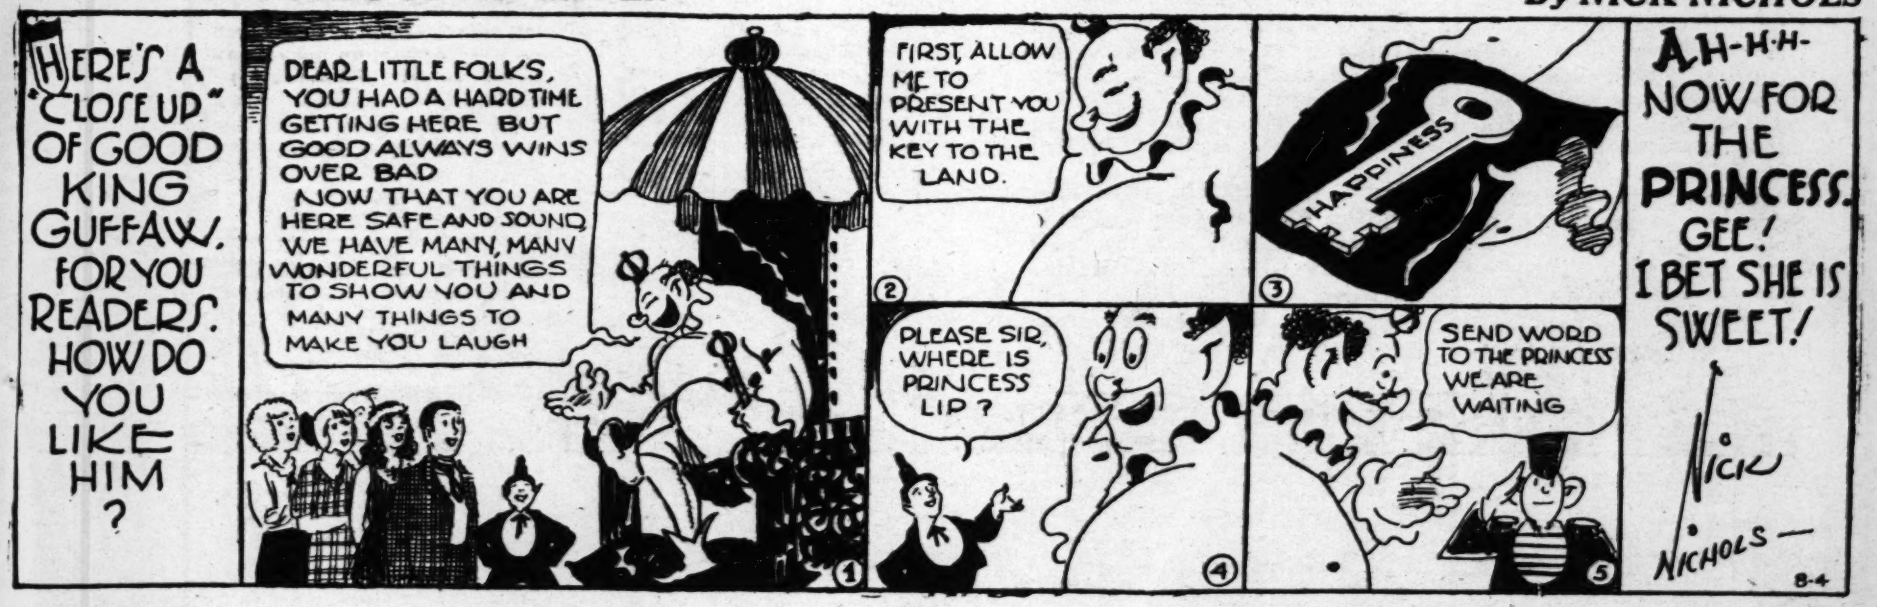

My friend and I were talking about his book, and he remarked how hard it was for him to remember now, just how he had felt when he was a boy nine years old. Yet the thing that impressed me most about the story was the author's vivid recollection of how wonderful his father and mother had seemed to him when he was young.

I wonder if all boys and girls feel that way toward their parents. To this nine-year-old boy, father was the greatest man alive, and there simply never had been anyone else in the world like mother.

It's a fine thing to feel that way toward your parents. I hope that you boys and girls do.

THE ADVENTURES OF PETER PEN

By NICK NICHOLS

it up to her," she added more calmly. "I, too, have a lot to be forgiven for. As soon as she's well we'll pay her every cent you children owe her and buy her a new wardrobe as a gift. I promised her when she first came that we would make a picture of her some day. When she is a little better you must tell her how sorry you are——"

To herself, being just a woman, she added, "Who am I to blame them? I've used her myself from beginning to end."

Mary did not get a little better. Instead she grew steadily worse, and finally drifted out upon an uncharted sea, on whose calm waves she lay babbling for hours at a time.

John Henry didn't come into the sick room himself because he was so big and clumsy and no good there, but he asked about his sister every day and gave orders that she was to have anything and everything she needed.

John Henry himself, making his first visit to the sickroom on the morning of the fifth day, stood beside his sister's bed, looking down at her and listening. She was saying something about fishing with "Johnny," and about a picnic and "Johnny." Several times she called out sharply to "Johnny" to wait for her. She appeared to think he was running away. "Johnny" stood over her, listening and frowning.

"She talks about you all the time," his wife told him, as she expertly tested a hot water bottle, "and she usualy seems to think you're running away from her."

"She's goin' to get well, isn't she?" John Henry jerked out.

"Of course, she is."

Marion's words were reassuring, but her voice was too maternal. It was almost cajoling. Her husband's heart sank.

But the great specialist who came again a little later continued optimistic.

"I've seen worse cases than this pull through," he said cheerily. "And you have splendid nurses. A whole lot depends on nursing. Don't despair."

The family physician was less reassuring.

"No constitution," he said, crisply, "and no vitality. No staying power. Heart all worn out. What's she been doing? She wasn't like that when she came here, less than two years ago. I thought then she was one of the wiry type that could stand anything. Has she been worrying—or overworking?"

John Henry did not hear these comments and questions. He was endeavoring to drop Mary from his mind. It was a comfort to do so. For some reason the thought of her had become intolerable. He plunged into his work with an absorption surprising even in him, and made a new record of achievement between ten o'clock and five on the sixth day of Mary's illness. Then, abruptly, and to the great surprise of his efficient young secretary, he suddenly leaned forward over his desk and took his big head in his hands. The telephone rang compellingly. Before his secretary could do so, John Henry lifted the receiver from its hook.

"Better come home, dear," his wife's voice told him.

Mrs. Martin met him at the front door and drew him into the hall, where she helped him to take off his coat. Her eyes were red, but she spoke in her usual toner. The atmosphere of the house was pleasant and natural.

"She went half an hour ago," she said, "just before I telephoned you—very suddenly and quietly. There wasn't the least pain. That's always a comfort. Do you want to come upstairs?" she added doubtfully.

"No."

John Henry went toward his study, and his wife walked with him down the hall to its door. Then she turned to leave him, realizing that he wished to be alone; but he stopped her and stood staring at her for a moment, as if he had forgotten what he meant to say.

"You attend to everything, Marion," he brought out at last. "Do it up the best way you know how."

She nodded and he opened the study door, but he did not enter the room. Apparently on a new thought, he faced her again.

"You say she liked pretty things," he muttered. "See that she has 'em. See that everything is done the way she'd admire it." For a moment he stood looking at her uncertainly. "You know what I mean," he ended heavily, and went into the study and closed the door.

Mrs. John Henry knew what he meant.

In the big living room, where the family assembled each night, the familiar open fire blazed on the hearth, the familiar chairs waited by the reading lamp, and, with one exception, the familiar figures settled into them. Only the big drawing room across the hall was closed and shuttered.

On the morning of the third day John Henry was taken into this room to see the result of his instructions to his wife. He crossed the threshold hesitatingly, almost unwillingly, and as he did so received a surprising effect of beauty. There was nothing gloomy, nothing funereal, here. A soft but pleasant light filled the room, and there were flowers everywhere—not the white, heavy scented flowers he instinctively associated with death, but bright and cheerful flowers on every side. At the big room's far end they seemed massed into a bank against a background of soft green vines, and in this beautiful resting place Mary Martin slept. She wore a white silk lace-trimmed negligee, and she lay on her side, with one hand under her cheek and the lace of a wing sleeve falling away from it in soft folds. The position was amazingly easy and natural. Amazingly natural, too, in its peace and sweetness, was Mary's worn face. Her hair had been waved and dressed. John Henry was not sure he liked that. It was not natural. But it—or something else—gave Mary a look which justified the low comment of his daughter at his side.

"You know, Dad, she's actually lovely! I never dreamed she could look like this. We always thought Aunt Mary was plain. But I believe now that if she'd had beautiful clothes and marcel waves and other things like the rest of us she'd have been a picture."

It was Marion Martin who spoke, and as she spoke a sudden sharp memory awoke in her. Standing beside her husband, and looking down on the still features of his sister, she remembered a certain promise she had made to Mary.

"But there's an expression I can't understand," she continued thoughtfully. "She never wore it before. She's smiling, and yet——"

John Henry Martin, an ungainly, incongruous figure among the beauty he had provided for his dead sister, did not see the still, cold figure that lay before him. Instead, he seemed to be looking down a long and narrow road, along which a shabby little child in a checked gingham frock and a sunbonnet was hurrying to meet him.

"Johnny!" She was always calling him in their childhood. She had constantly called him in her last illness. He knew now that she had been calling him all her life, and that he had been deaf to the call. She had wanted love and beauty, and he alone in all the world could have given them to her. Yet he had given her nothing, though she—he frowningly admitted it in this moment—had given him her whole life. Instead he had run away from her, and when she had called he had not come back.

When it was too late he had told Marion to surround her with the beauty she had wanted. Marion had done her best. Beauty was here, too, something he had felt when he entered the room, something which after one swift look had made him afraid to turn his eyes again upon his sister. And now Marion was putting the things into words.

"It's a smile," she was saying. "And yet it isn't an ordinary smile, or anything like Mary's usual smile. It's—it's tolerant, and quizzical—yes, that's it. It's actually as if Mary felt amused over something!"

Her husband forced his gaze to rest upon his sister's face. He knew that smile. He had recognized it as soon as he entered the room. He had seen it hundreds of times. It was the smile—shy, tender and almost quizzical—with which, in their childhood, little Mary Martin had always forgiven him when he came back to her. A contraction in his breast suddenly loosened. One sob, hoarse and rather horrible to bear, broke from him.

"Amused!" he echoed. "Amused! God! I should think she would be!"

it was daylight, and the constable sent for hours before arrived. Because his story had been so moving my wife and Alice, her maid, were tempted to have him set free. I had almost given in to the pleas of the three of them and had cut his bonds, but when, as soon as he was free, he attempted to kiss Alice, the minds of the women changed and we gave all three of the burglars over to the constables.

GRAVURE PICTORIAL SECTION

THE ATLANTA CONSTITUTION

SUNDAY AUGUST 5th, 1928

ON THE WINGS OF THE WINDS—"Doug" Davis' fast air racer leads Beeler Blevins' plane around a tower marking the course of the track in the Atlanta air derby held at Candler field recently. Davis won the race and Blevins was second, the two local pilots sweeping the major portion of honors of the derby.

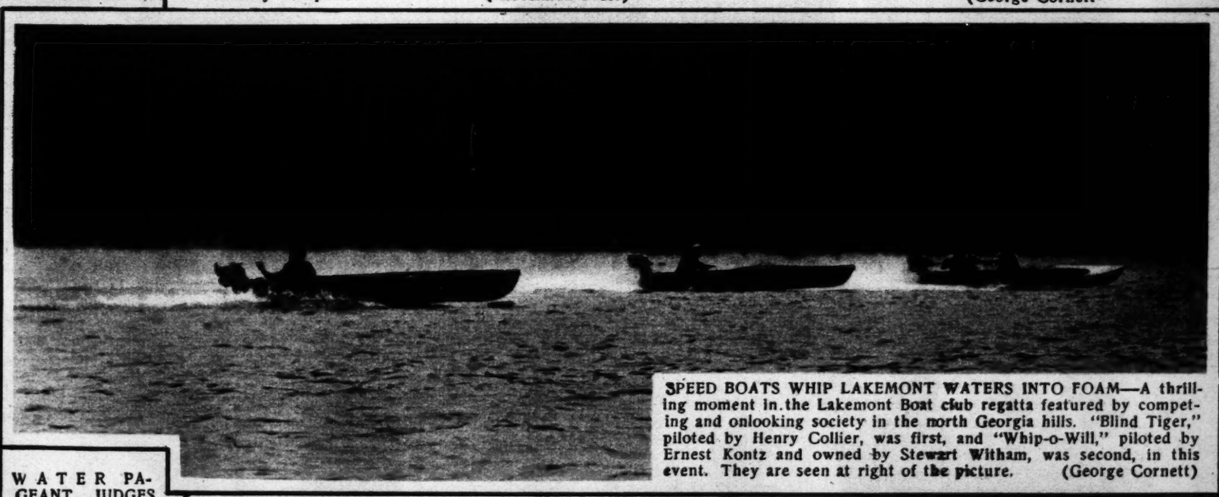

RIDING HOBBIES—One of the latest and most thrilling of water sports is hobby horse aquaplaning in vogue on California strands. This picture was snapped at Lido. (International)

SHE'LL DANCE BEFORE THE KING—The bliss of ancient nursery rhymes is Doris Niles'. The American dancer has been invited by King Alfonso of Spain to perform at a dinner to be tendered crews of American yachts participating in a marine race from this country to Spain. (Associated Press)

SPEED BOATS WHIP LAKEMONT WATERS INTO FOAM—A thrilling moment in the Lakemont Boat club regatta featured by competing and onlooking society in the north Georgia hills. "Blind Tiger," piloted by Henry Collier, was first, and "Whip-o-Will," piloted by Ernest Kontz and owned by Stewart Witham, was second, in this event. They are seen at right of the picture. (George Cornett)

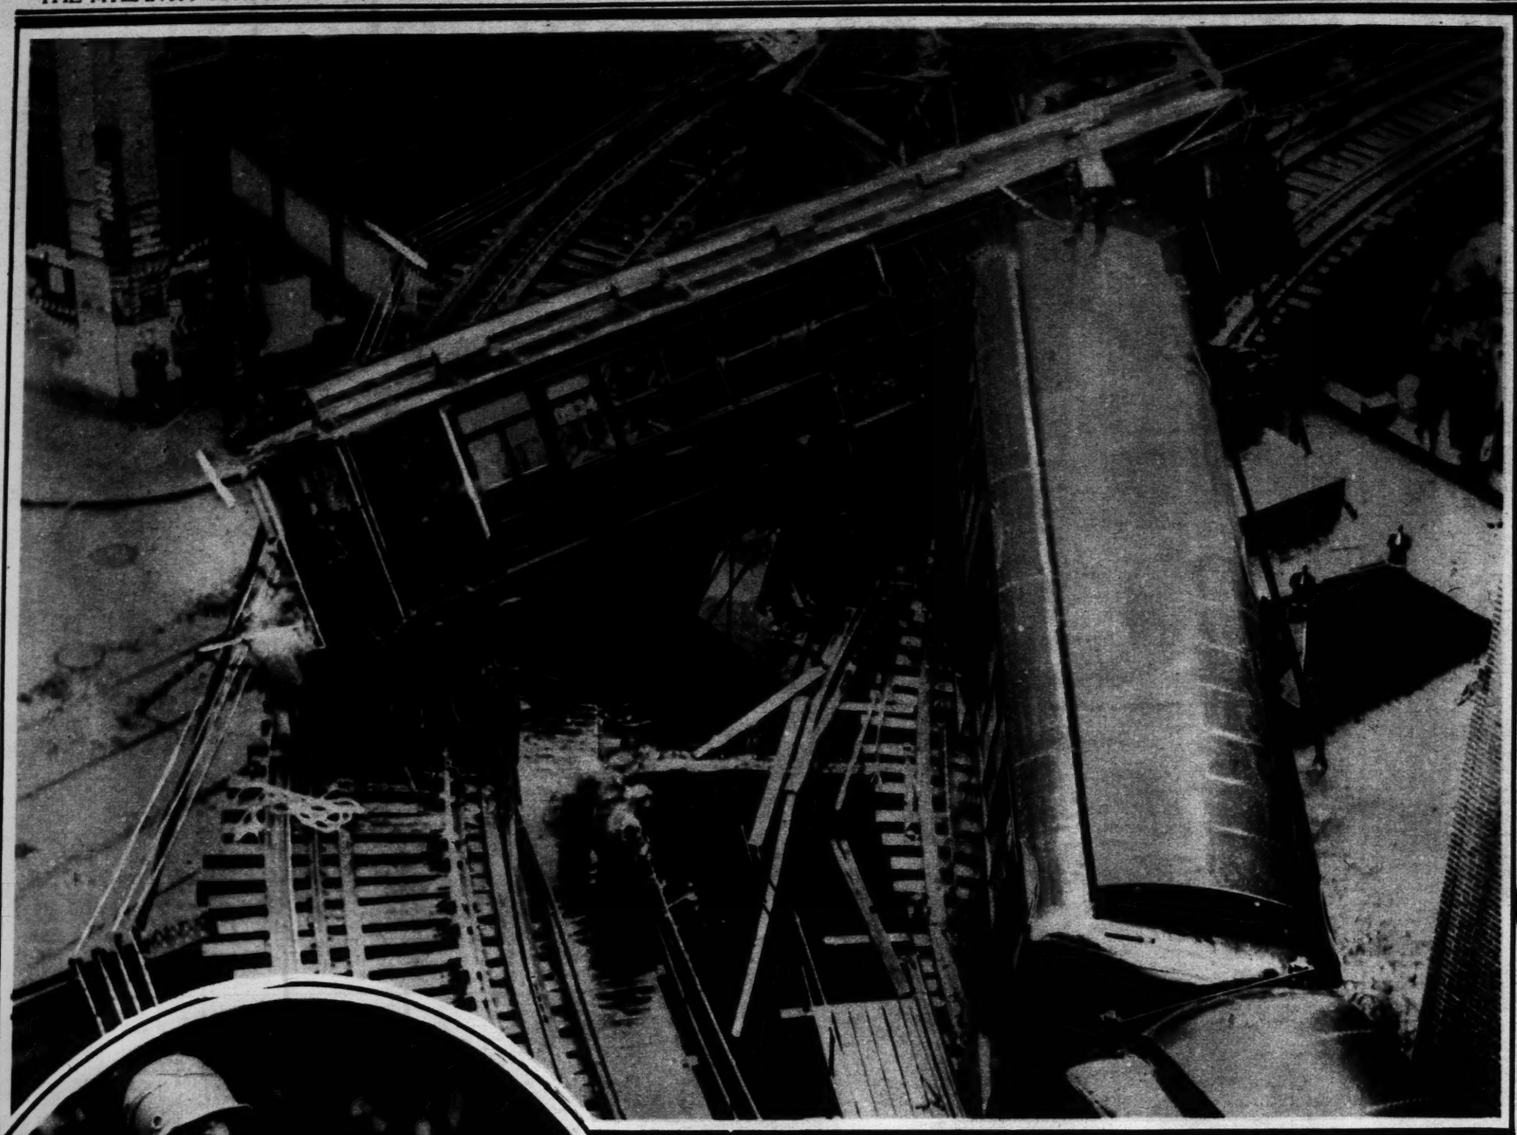

KING OF COMEBACKS—"Big Bill" Tilden, reported as yielding to age and alternately dismissed from and reinstated on the Davis cup team, in the first singles match defeated Rene LaCoste, the French tennis ace. (International)

WATER PAGEANT JUDGES Left to right, F. O. Stone, commodore; I. N. Ragsdale, mayor of Atlanta; Mrs. S.C. Dobbs senior and Beaumont Davison, arbiters of events in the Lakemont Boat club regatta. (George Cornett)

GEORGIA WATER FANS—A view of the crowd of spectators at the Lakemont Boat club regatta watching the proceedings from the beautifully-flowered terraces at the home of F. O. Stone, of Atlanta. (George Cornett)

BOSTON "L" WRECK—One person was killed and more than a score hurt when this four-car train jumped the track on the Boston elevated road. (Herbert)

PERFECT BLONDE BEAUTY — Josephine Dunn is the reason why "gentlemen prefer blondes." The screen favorite has won a new and more important contract which will place her in star roles of big pictures soon to be produced.

MAKES TWO HOLES IN ONE IN SUCCESSION—Mrs. Kathleen Capper, of Brookline, Mass., made this world record on a Boston course. (International)

SMITH'S "BIG SIX"—John J. Raskob at a conference in New York with democratic leaders at which the advisory committee of the democratic national committee was completed. Among those who participated in the conference were, left to right, seated, Senator Harry Hawes, of Missouri; Raskob, Senator Peter Gerry, of Rhode Island, chairman of the advisory committee. Standing, left to right, Herbert H. Lehman, finance director; Senator Millard Tydings, of Maryland, and George Van Namee, pre-convention manager for Smith. (Associated Press)

COUNSEL FOR THE DEFENSE—But there's a deeper story here. Mrs. Frank Lewis, of Norfolk, Neb., will defend her son as attorney when he comes to trial in Chicago courts. She has practiced law some time. (International)

ELECTED BY THE TIRED BUSINESS MEN—Geneva Chaney, "the girl of a single face—and that a very pretty one," was beauty prize winner in the pageant of the Cincinnati Business Men's club annual outing. (International)

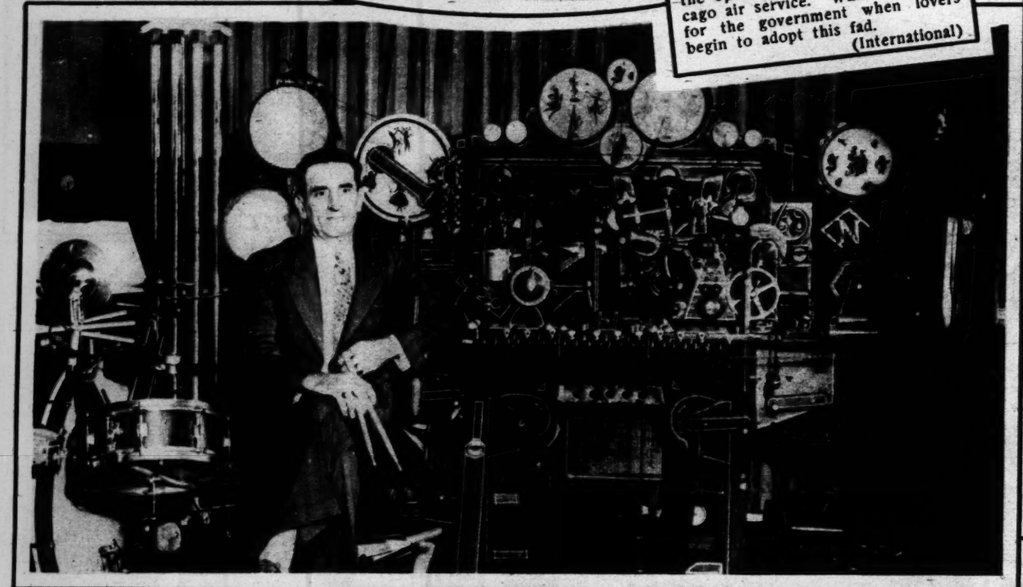

BE CAREFUL!—Just now the world is rushing to the cool beaches and lakes. Here's a scene you want to avoid. It shows life guards pulling a drowning girl out of the surf at Rockaway. (International)

DADDY OF ALL LETTERS—This tremendous epistle—8 feet long and 6 feet wide—came by air mail to Postmaster General New. It expressed thanks of the Muskegon, Mich. Chamber of Commerce for the opening of the Muskegon-Chicago air service. What a problem for the government when lovers begin to adopt this fad. (International)

HUMANIZES THE MOVIES—A. W. Nicholas, New York inventor, 20 years ago conceived the idea of sound effects in conjunction with pictures. Today he says his device is perfected. Here's the inventor and the complicated sound effect table. (International)

ADVANCE FALL CREATION is this coat of sumptuous appeal. It is of black Ledo cloth, with cross-fox collar and cuffs, created by Frances Clyne.

CHARMING PORTRAIT OF ATLANTA WOMAN AND HER LITTLE DAUGHTER—This striking likeness of Mrs. Robert F. Maddox and Miss Laura Baxter Maddox was painted by Charles F. Naegele, noted portrait artist who lives near Marietta, Ga.

BEFORE AND AFTER TAKING—Norman Douglas Ellis, of Toronto, Canada, had 5,000 volts of electricity to pass through his body in an accident. Left practically without a skull, an amazing series of surgical miracles have given him a new head of bakelite. A wig completes the costume. (International)

BEAUTY FROM THE NILE—The girl is from Los Angeles, Calif., and the flower from the Egyptian waters. It is the famed lotus blossom and was grown in America's largest bed of these rare and radiant blooms in California. (Herbert)

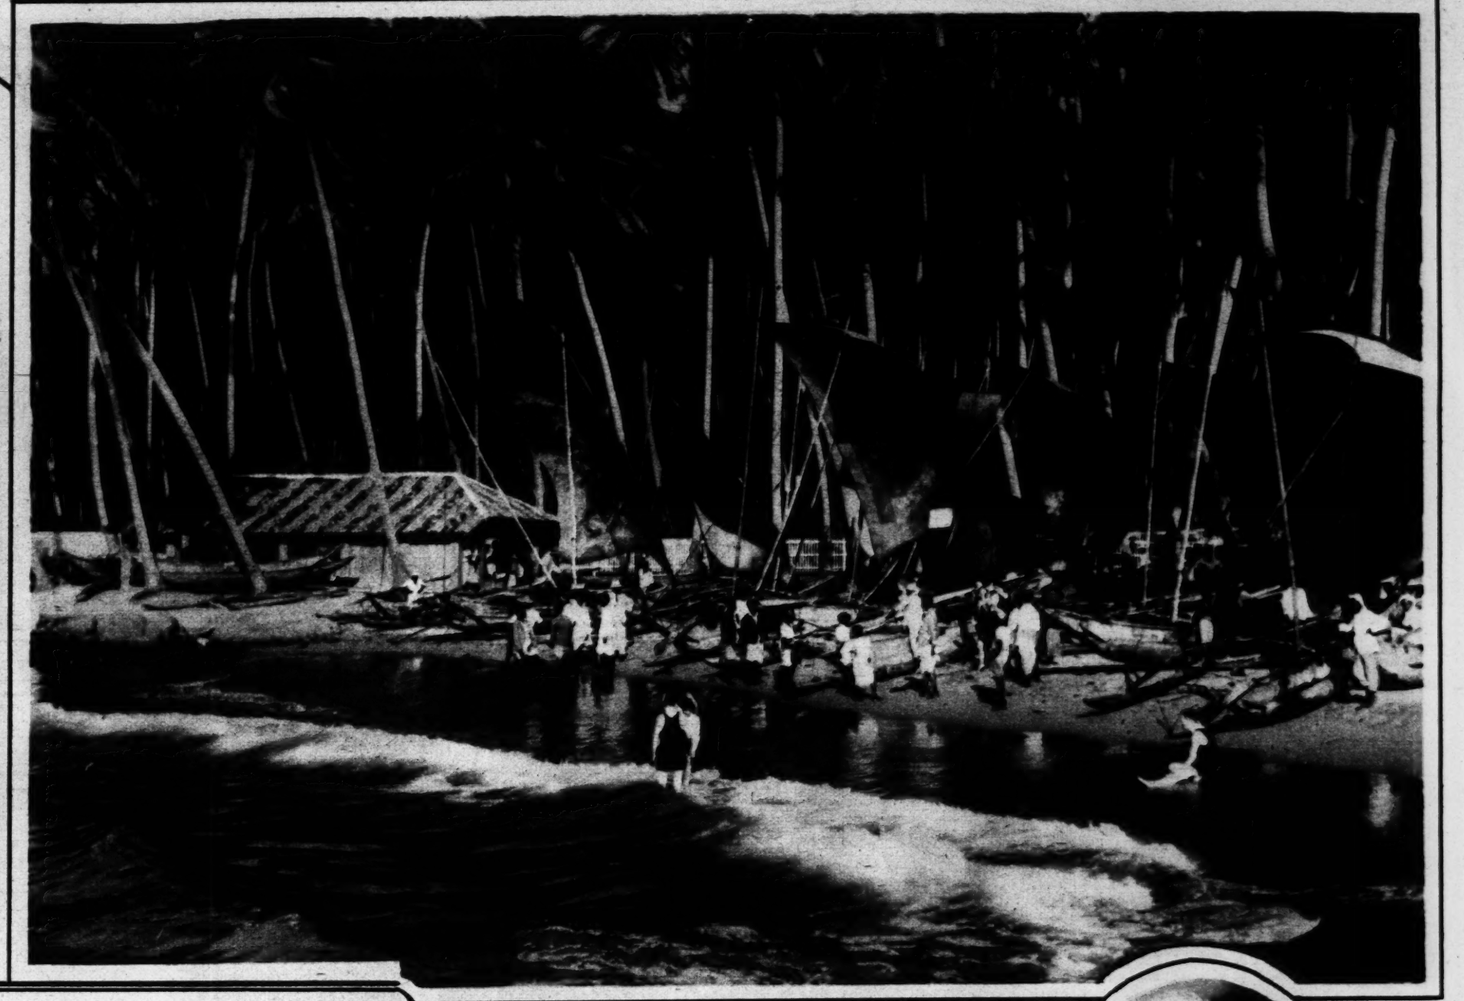

DOLLS TO MATCH—Lovely Joan Crawford, movie star, is author of the fad that calls for dolls exactly like their owners. Here's a perfect duplication.

NEW STAR IN FILM FIRMAMENT—Mary Duncan, Virginia girl, whose rise to fame on the screen has been rapid since her discovery several years ago by Yvette Guilbert.

LAND OF TEA AND RUBBER—That's Ceylon, gorgeous tropic isle. Here's a picture of a typical Ceylonese village, with tourists in the foreground—as tourists generally are. (Herbert)

RASKOB DOWN ON THE FARM—The democratic national committee chairman apparently can raise something besides the value of General Motors stock. He is shown among the corn fields of his own 400-acre farm in Maryland. (Associated Press)

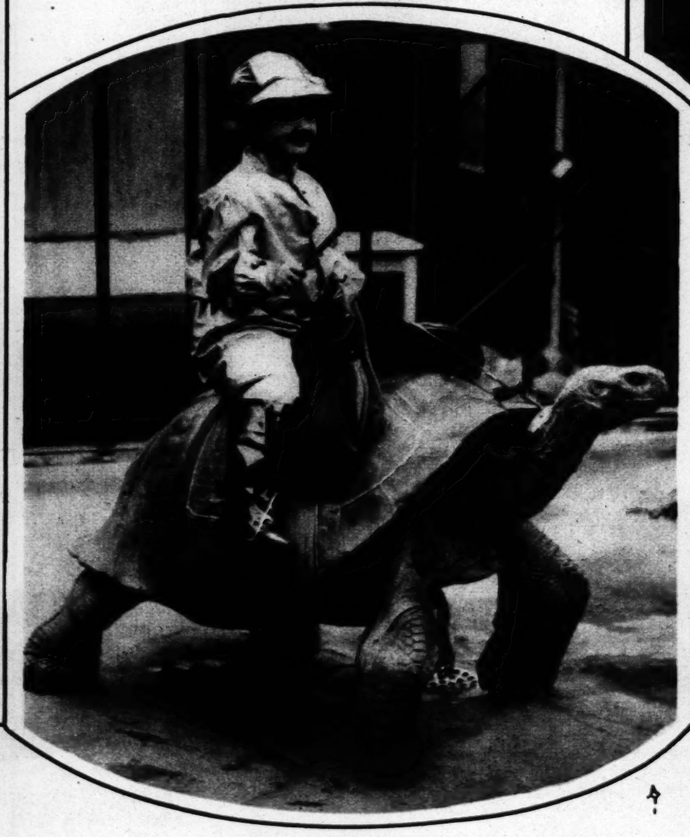

DETACHABLE COLLAR AND CUFFS—This neat fall walking suit of biege jersey cloth features collar and cuffs of crepe that can be detached for washing, insuring a freshly-laundered and tailored look at all times. (Herbert)

PUTTING HER BEST FOOT FORWARD—Evidently the cameraman had taken just one or two extra drinks before snapping this pose of Raquel Torres, movie star. Anyway it just goes to show you can't even believe all you see. (International)

BEAUTIFUL BRIDE—Mrs. John Lester Brumley, of Sanford, Fla., formerly Miss Olivia Stark, of Commerce, Ga.

(Left) "BRING ON YOUR HARE"—So boasts Edna Hagan, diminutive jockey of "Grandpa," 600-year-old turtle of the Bronx zoo. In her honor the tortoise speeded up to a gait of a mile a month. (Herbert)

TRAFFIC COPS NOT NEEDED HERE—Swiss policemen have no trouble with speeding motorists on this tortuous road ascending the Alps from the Tession Valleq. (International)

SPEAKING OF ENDURANCE—Mrs. Myrtle Huddleston, world's champion endurance swimmer, recently swam continuously in a New York pool for 54 hours and 32 minutes, breaking her former record by three and a half hours. A nurse is handing her some food only a short time before she was taken from the water exhausted. (International)

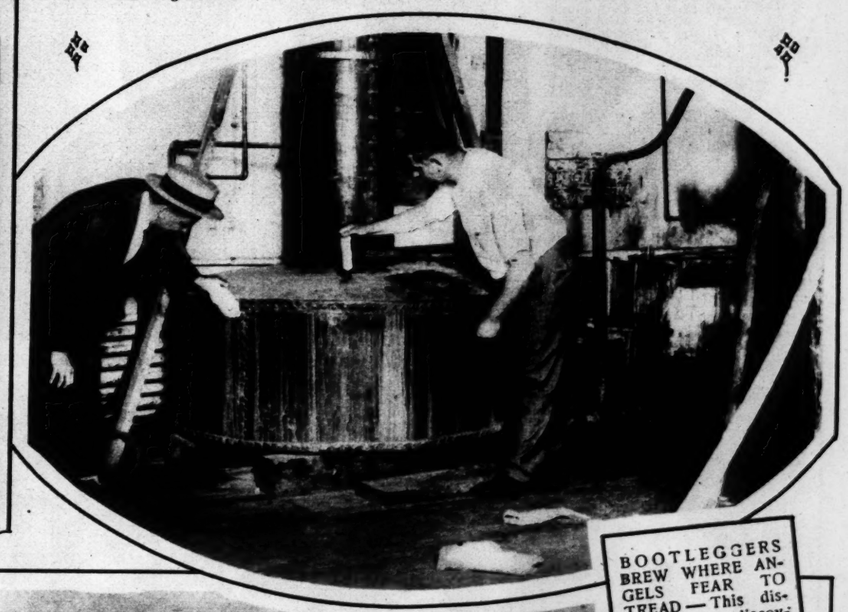

HOTSY HOTSKI!—Sue Carroll, movie favorite, snaps into a fetching pose all dressed up in a Russian dancing outfit.

GEM OF ENGLAND'S WOMANHOOD—The Marchioness of Queensberry, is acclaimed by British artists as the most perfect type of beauty in her native land. (Underwood)

TWO BELT KINGS—Gene Tunney, holder of the world's heavyweight boxing belt, and Rae Hickok, head of the famous belt-manufacturing company that bears his name. The two friends were snapped at Tunney's training camp just before the champ belted Tom Heeney all over the ring.

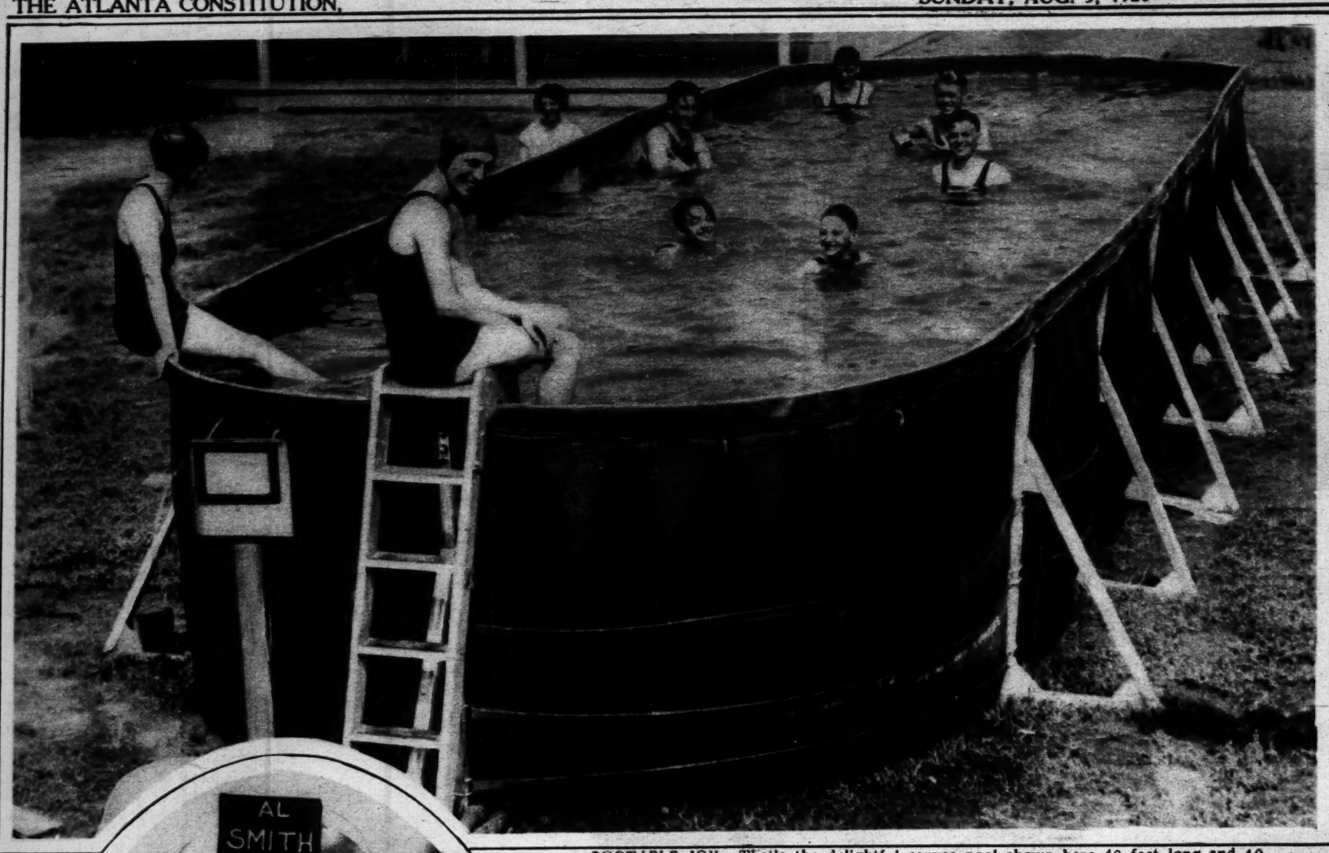

(Right) JUST LIKE THE BOOKS—Charles R. Stone, of Lake Worth, Fla., and a negro set out on a fishing trip. The magneto of their boat went bad and they were carried out to sea, spending six days in the open skiff. They are shown here being rescued by the S. S. Manchuria off the Georgia coast after they had built a fire on the little boat to attract the steamer's attention. (International)

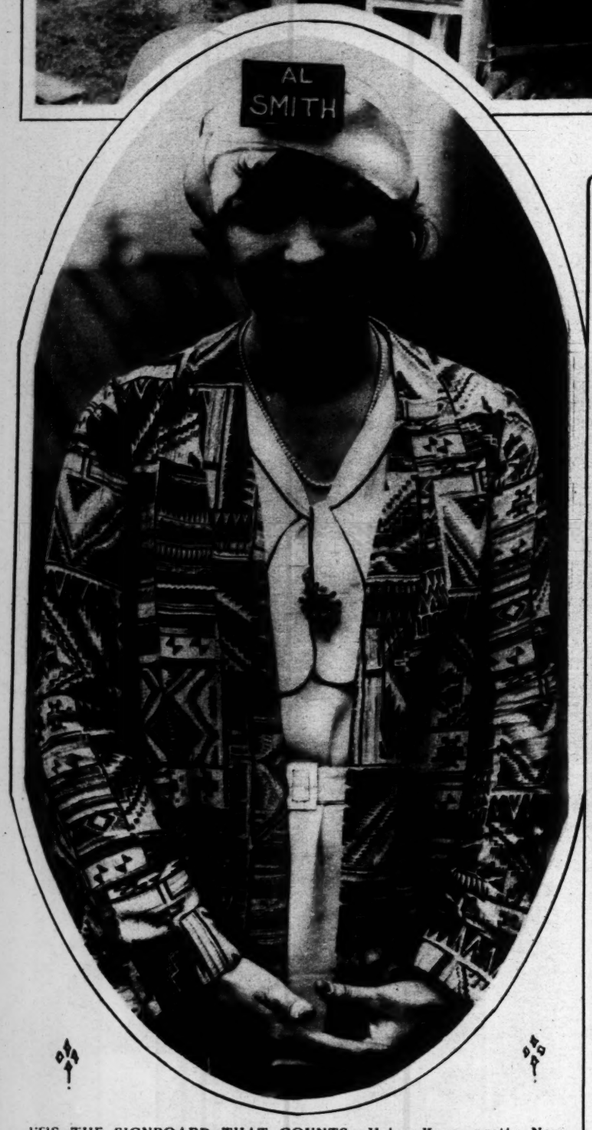

FLIGHT GIVES SPEECH TO DUMB BOY—George Porter, son of a Revere, Mass., fire department captain, had never spoken a word in the eight years of his life until he went on a stunt flight recently. When he landed he spoke the first words of his life, and now has a normal vocabulary. (Herbert)

BOOTLEGGERS BREW WHERE ANGELS FEAR TO TREAD—This distillery was discovered in the rear of the Baptist church in Newark, N. J., when firemen answered a call and found smoke pouring from the illicit plant. (Herbert)

PORTABLE JOY—That's the delightful canvas pool shown here 40 feet long and 10 feet wide. It is seen at a Washington, D. C., tourist camp. (Associated Press)

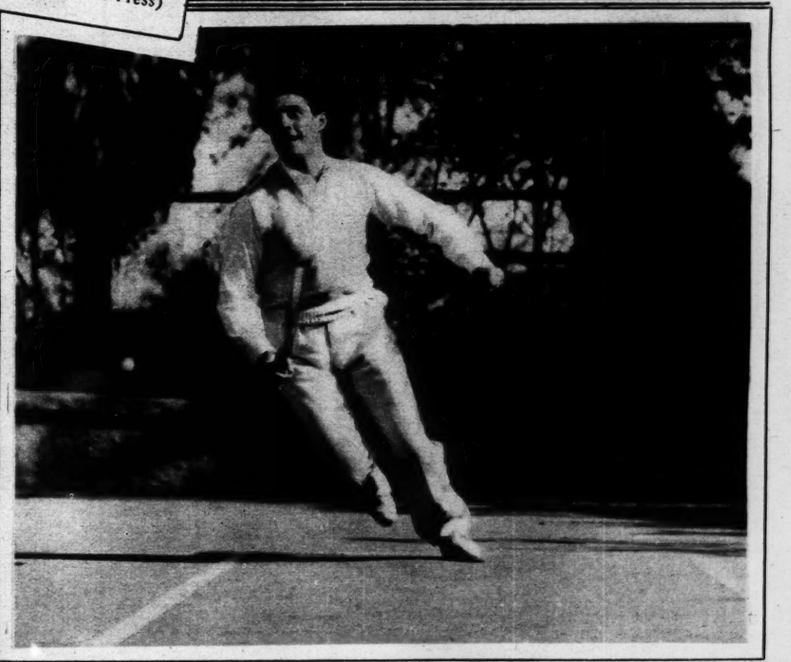

IT'S THE SIGNBOARD THAT COUNTS—Helen Kane, pretty New York actress, wears a non-electrical fireray sign emblazoning the name of Al Smith for president. (International)

$200,000 WORTH OF SMOKE—That was the damage done when fire from a locomotive fell into a waste oil pond at the White Star refinery south of Wood River, Ill. (Associated Press)

"LADY LINDY'S" FLYING COMPANION WEDS—Lou Gordon, mechanic of the trans-oceanic plane "Friendship," was married in Chicago to Ann Bruce, of Brookline, Mass. Wilmer Stutz, the pilot, the third figure from the left. (Associated Press)

JUST BEATING THE BALL—When Harry Rice, of the Detroit Tigers, laid down a bunt in a recent game with the Washington Senators, it required spirited sprinting to reach the bag first. How's this for action at the plate? (International)

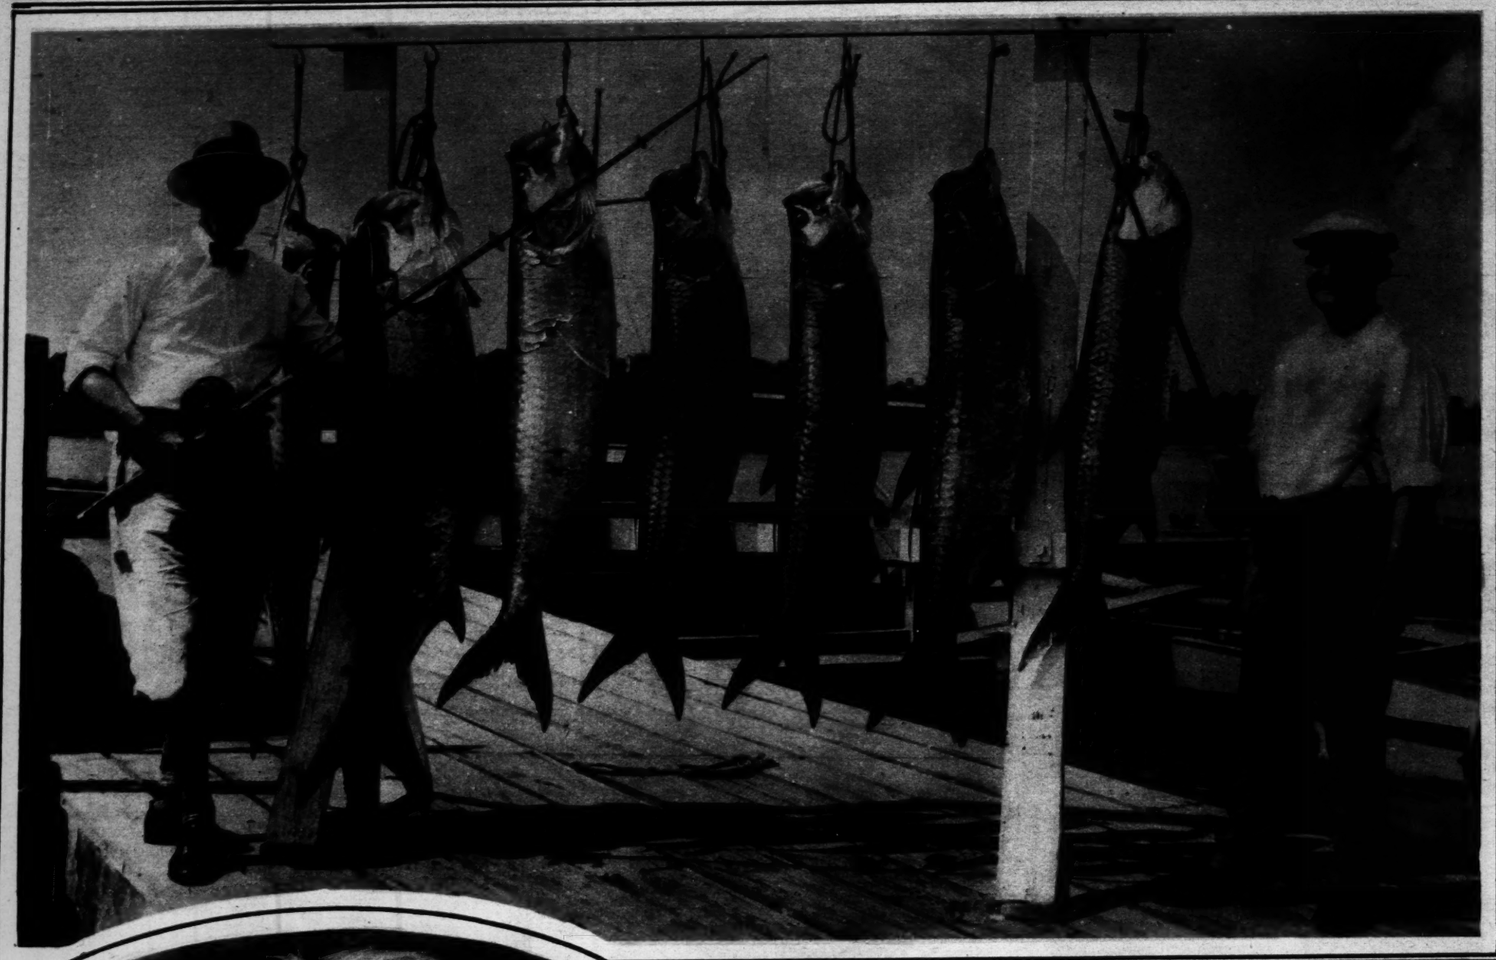

SLAYER OF OBREGON—Jose de Leon Toral, assassin of Mexico's president-elect, who says he is ready to pay with his life for the act. (Herbert)

KING OF COURTS AND SETS—Ramon Novarro—so his press agent asserts—is equally at home on location or on the tennis court. Here you see the popular Ramon playing a terrific drive at the Hollywood Country club.

BACK TO THE LIGHT—The skill of surgery has restored sight to Marcella Calkins, 20-year-old graduate of the Wisconsin state school for the blind. She's still talking about the beauty of sunsets seen for the first time. (Associated Press)

(Left)
PROLONGING THE AGONY — Al Jolson's throaty extravaganzas addressed to mythical "mammies" down in "Alabam'" may be boosted by reason of the fact that blonde Josephine Dunn, of kleig light fame, is wearing an effigy of the burnt-cork sentimentalist in her sweater. (Herbert)

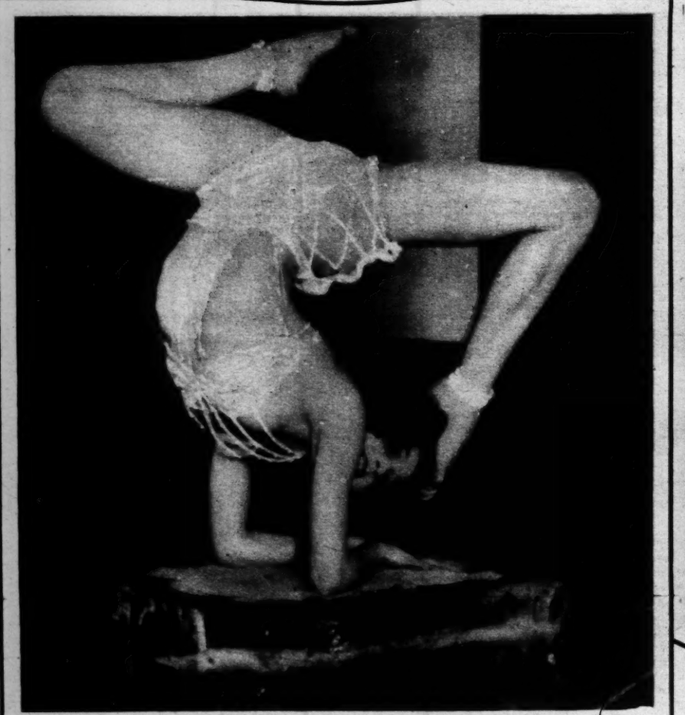

CELEBRATE OCHS' FIFTIETH ANNIVERSARY IN JOURNALISM. Left to right: Dr. John H. Finley, of New York, father of Mrs. William H. Kiser, of Atlanta and New York, and Mr. and Mrs. Edgar Poe McBurney, of Atlanta, on the porch of the Lookout Mountain hotel. They were members of the party which honored Adolph Ochs, Chattanooga and New York publisher, on the fiftieth anniversary of his brilliant career in journalism.

WATCH "THE BACK PASS" THIS FALL—Coach Joseph Pipal, of Occidental college, demonstrates his new backward pass with "Bish" Heighes, De Pauw coach, receiving. The football carrier just raises his arm backward and snaps the pigskin. (International)

TRY THIS ON YOUR PIANO—To counteract the heat, Mariana, popular New York theatrical danseuse, does her stuff on a block of ice. (Herbert)

BARNESVILLE BEAUTY WINNERS—Miss Myrla Holmes, left, and Miss Remel Horne, captured second and first honors respectively in the bathing beauty contest sponsored by the American Legion of Barnesville, Ga. (Braddy)

WHICH IS WHICH?—Eddie Sutherland has a tough job in Hollywood. Each morning he has to sort out the Mawby triplets—Claudia, Angela and Claudette—and assign them to different jobs.

ECHO OF OLDEN SPORTING DAYS
As in the times when the Natchez and the Robert E. Lee threshed madly through the waters of the Mississippi in a race for New Orleans, so the rival packets, Chris Greene, of Cincinnati, and the Betsy Ann, of Pittsburg, panted down the Ohio river recently in a contest for queenship of that stream. The Chris Greene, in the foreground, won while thousands lined the banks and watched. (International)

RECENT BRIDE—Mrs. James Robert Wright, of Gastonia, N. C., formerly Miss Grace Little, of Tennille, Ga.

—a tone like the midnight sky!

Wendel

"Serge Blue"—an exquisite kidskin oxford fashioned as if from a delicate scrap of the midnight sky! There are two eyelets that lace a moire ribbon to its jaunty finish in a chic little bow. A tiny goring hides under the tongue to insure a glove-like snugness!

GEORGIA SONGBIRD — Miss Mary Shivers, soprano, of Augusta, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Fred D. Shivers, as she appeared in costume in a pupils' recital at Tubman auditorium.

PERSONALITY—John West, Jr., of Baxley, Ga., was voted the most popular boy in his home town high school. (Lewis)

ACCIDENT BRINGS FAME—Jane Fauntz, 17-year-old water star, broke her arm and her trainer saw that if she won fame she must greatly develop her kick. With the injured arm strapped to her body, Jane worked to this end. She now is a member of the American Olympic team. (International)

Gray Hair

1 You try it first on a single lock of your hair to see what it does. Thus have no fear of results.

2 Then simply comb this water-like liquid through your hair. Clean . . . safe. Takes only 7 or 8 minutes.

3 Arrange hair and watch color gradually creep back. Restoration will be perfect and complete.

Test FREE 1 minute

NO more dangerous "crude dyes." Instead natural shade is called back to hair by clear, colorless liquid 100% safe. Faded, graying streaks disappear. Hair becomes live looking and lustrous. Stays easy to curl. Does not wash off.

This way embodies elements that take place of color pigment and give natural effect. Auburn hair reverts to auburn—black to black. Used by 3,000,000 women.

Send coupon for free test—or go to drug store. Few cents' worth gives perfect restoration. Money returned if not amazed.

When Fat Departs
new beauty comes, new youth, new health

Excess fat is a blight to beauty, to health, to longevity and youth. Any man or woman who fails to correct it limits the joys of life.

But get the results in the right way. Not by abnormal exercise or diet, for such extremes are dangerous. Combat the cause. Modern science has found that it often lies in a gland deficiency—in a gland which assists nutrition. And physicians the world over now treat obesity by supplying that lack.

When this discovery was made, a great American laboratory embodied that help in Marmola prescription tablets. They have now been used for 20 years—millions of boxes of them. Users have told others, until the use has grown to nearly 5,000,000 tablets a month.

All can see the results in every circle. Excess fat is disappearing fast. Almost everyone has friends who will say that the reason is Marmola.

There is no secret about it. Marmola employs just what the best physicians employ to correct this abnormal condition. The complete formula appears in every box. And a book explains the reasons for each good effect. This to prove that the loss in weight is natural and helpful.

Do not change habits in a radical way. Simply take four Marmola tablets daily until weight comes down to normal. The way is easy, pleasant, scientific, real.

Start today, for your own sake, and watch the results. Learn what others have learned in the 20 years of Marmola. Your whole life may be changed by this test.

Marmola prescription tablets are sold by all druggists at $1.00 a box. Any druggist who is out will order from his jobber.

Moon Mullins

OH YES-I MUST SHOW YOU A LETTER I GOT TODAY- THEY ARE GOING TO PUT ME IN WHO'S WHO-

WHO'S ZOO?

AW, SAY, EMMY- I WAS GONNA BORRY YOUR CAR TO TAKE EGYPT OUT IN AFTER THE SHOW MYSELF- AND I DON'T SEE WHAT YOU WANT TO GO DRAGGIN' OLD PLUSHBOTTOM OUT IN IT FOR ANYWAY?

BECAUSE I LIKE TO- THATS WHY!

LIKE TO WHAT?

OH YOU GIT OUT OF HERE YOU AND YOUR BIG MOUTH.

SOP!

OH BOY WHAT A SHOT-! RIGHT ON TH' OLD BULL'S EYE.

YOU'LL BE O.K. IN JUST A JIFFY, LORD PLUSHBOTTOM-MR. MULLIN'S WILL SPONGE OFF YOUR SUIT AND PRESS IT AND, KAYO-YOU RUN HIS LORDSHIP A BATH AND PUT SOME OF MY FANCY BATH SALTS IN IT.

I DON'T SEE NO SALT SHAKER HERE, EMMY.

BATH SALTS I SAID, SILLY! ITS THAT BIG BOTTLE IN THE MEDICINE CABINET.

OH- I FOUND IT!

THERE AINT NOTHING ELSE I CAN DO FOR YOU LIKE BRUSH YOUR TEETH OR ANYTHING IS THERE, MR. PLUSHBOTTOM?

YES - SHUT THE DOOR AND GET OUT!

GOOD GRIEF! BY JOVE!! WHAT IN THE WORLD?

MULLINS!

WHAT? WELL, I'LL BE ——.

OH, THIS IS TERRIBLE, TERRIBLE! TAKE ME TOA DOCTOR — HURRY!

I TELLYA, EMMY, I SEEN FER MYSELF — HE'S AS BLACK AS TH' ACE OF SPADES ALL OVER.

FOR PITY SAKES! KAYO'S WENT AND EMPTIED MY ENTIRE BOTTLE OF HAIR DYE IN THIS TUB FOR BATH SALTS!

I'LL SMACK YOUR SASSY FACE!

MY WORD! OH MY WORD!

Gasoline Alley

CAN I TAKE IT HOME AN' PUT IT IN MY AQUARIUM, UNCLE WALT?

WE'LL HAVE TO GET SOME MACKEREL MILK TO FEED IT.

SEE, UNCLE WALT. I SAND-MODELED A FISH.

THAT'S RIGHT! ANYBODY COULD TELL THAT'S A SHAD OR A PICKEREL OR A BASS.

ZOW

NOW I'VE MADE IT INTO A MERMAID, UNCLE WALT. OH, HE'S ASLEEP!

GREAT SQUID! WHO'S THAT?

HELP! HELP!

KEEP UP YOUR COURAGE! I'M COMING TO RESCUE YOU.

SAVE ME!

WELL I'LL BE JIGGERED.

HA! HA! THAT WAS A GOOD ONE ON YOU! YOU THOUGHT I WAS A HELPLESS MAIDEN IN DISTRESS.

BUT WHO ARE YOU?

PARDON ME! HERE COMES PAPA!

THE OLD CRAB ISN'T GOING TO GET HOLD OF ME— I TOOK LESSONS FROM A FISH!

GLORY BE! I'M GLAD HE GAVE UP THE CHASE

LOOK AUNTIE BLOSSOM! I'VE GOT UNCLE WALT BURIED!

YOU SURELY HAVE.

BY GOLLY! YOU KNOW, I MUST HAVE BEEN DREAMING.

YOU WERE! I CAME TO SEE WHAT THE FOG HORN WAS BLOWING FOR.

LITTLE CHARLES. [illegible] THIS ONE —

WELL, HOW'D YOU LIKE THAT BALL GAME

GOOD PLACE TO WATCH IT.- BEHIND THE CATCHER-

BUT HE TALKS FOOLISH-

WHO TALKS FOOLISH?

THE CATCHER! EVERY TIME THE PITCHER THREW A BALL HE'D SAY "THAT'S A GOOD ONE"-

WELL, THEY WERE GOOD PITCHES.

I DONT THINK SO-

- NONE OF THE BATTERS COULD HIT THEM -

WINNIE WINKLE

YOU MEAN THING! WHY DON'T YOU GIVE ME SOME OF YOUR APPLE, PERRY??

GOSH, I'M SAVIN' YOU TH' SEEDS! YOU CAN PLANT 'EM AN' HAVE A WHOLE TREE!!

GEE WHIZ, IT'S NEAR BED-TIME AN' ALL WE DONE ALL DAY IS JUST SET AROUND LOOKIN' AT EACH OTHER!! YOU NEVER WANT TO PLAY ANY GAMES THAT I WANT TO!!

WELL, YOUR MOTHER AND WINNIE SAID NOT TO GO AWAY FROM THE HOUSE AND I DON'T THINK THEY'D LIKE YOU TO SIT THERE, PERRY!!

I TELL YA WHAT! LET'S PICK APPLES IN OUR BACK YARD, HUH, WILBUR??

THAT'S A FAIR SUGGESTION, PERRY, IF YOU THINK IT WILL BE ALL RIGHT!!

I'LL GET EVEN WITH THAT SISSY COUSIN O'MINE, WILBUR WORTHINGTON! I'LL GET HIM UP IN THAT APPLE TREE AN' IF I DON'T SHAKE HIM OUT, I'M A MONKEY'S UNCLE!!

DO YOU SUPPOSE WE SHOULD ASK YOUR PARENT'S PERMISSION FIRST?

NAW!! WE'LL JUST GO AHEAD AN' PICK 'EM! IT'S MORE FUN THAN ASKIN'!!

I'LL HOLD TH' BRANCH WHILE YOU CLIMB UP TH' TREE, WILBUR! TH' BEST APPLES IS ON TH' TOP!!

MY WORD! THERE ARE APPLES GALORE HERE, PERRY!! IF YOU'LL JUST HOLD STEADY UNTIL I

SO!! CAUGHT YA IN TH' ACT SWIPIN' APPLES OFF'N THAT NEW APPLE TREE I'M CULTIVATIN', EH, PERRY?? I'LL LEARN YE T'SWIPE APPLES, YOU LITTLE MISCHIEF MAKER!!

AW, IT WASN'T ONEY ME!! WILBUR IS UP TH' TREE!! HE WAS TH' ONE THAT WAS DOIN' TH' REAL SWIPIN'!!

OH, YEAH? WELL, IF HE'S UP THERE, HE'LL GET TH' SAME DOSE OF MEDICINE THAT YOU'RE GOIN' T'GET!

COME RIGHT IN TH' HOUSE YOUNG MAN! I'M GONNA TAN TH' HIDE OFF YA, FOR TELLIN' A LIE, BESIDES SWIPIN' APPLES!!

TH' IDEA OF YOU TRYIN' T'PUT TH' BLAME ON YOUR POOR LITTLE COUSIN FOR HELPIN' YOU TO PICK THOSE APPLES!! I'LL BET WILBUR IS UPSTAIRS AN' GONE TO BED HOURS AGO!!

HERE'S ONE TIME THAT YOU'RE WRONG ABOUT THAT FRESH KID!!

THERE YOU ARE!! WHAT DID I TELL YA!!!

BY INK

YOUR FRIEND MIKE LOST HIS JOB.

YES, THAT'S TOUGH —

TUT - TUT — EVERYTHING THAT HAPPENS IS FOR THE BEST.

WHAT —?

I SAID EVERYTHING THAT HAPPENS IS FOR THE BEST.

LISTEN, — I JUST SAW A MAN FALL AND BREAK HIS LEG OUTSIDE OF A CHINA STORE, — WAS THAT FOR THE BEST?

SURE! HE MIGHT HAVE FALLEN INSIDE AND BROKEN SOME CHINA.
